NOVA SCOTIA MOVES INTO THE TEMPERANCE COLUMN

Nova Scotia has fallen in line with the rest of Canada, barring little P. E. I., and adopted liquor control. And there can be no doubt that this is another victory for temperance. Pardon by the sounding sea, under the so-called "dry" measure, liquor flowed with a freedom only equalled by the tides in the Bay of Fundy.

But the figures of previous plebiscites are interesting as showing how sentiment has swung as the alleged prohibition has proved its futility.

In 1894, 43,793 people voted "dry," and 12,355 voted "wet." In 1893, 24,678 voted "dry" and 15,370 "wet." In 1929 83,422 voted "dry" and 29,874 voted "wet."

The tremendous increase in the vote is partially accounted for by the fact women voted for the first time on the liquor question. And as women are always looked up as the backbone of the temperance movement, it is reasonable to suppose that many, but not all, of them voted for liquor control.

In view of the fact, however, that the prohibition vote was cut in two, numerous others who voted dry in 1920 must have turned to something more practical in 1929.

WILL U. S. BE NEXT TO KILL DRY LAW

Washington, D.C., Nov. 1.—(CP)—The repeal of the prohibition election in Nova Scotia yesterday brought from Henry H. Curran, president of the association against the prohibition amendment adopted prohibition sentiment in the United States would not be the "next to jettison prohibition."

"Only one of the few peoples of the world who in a moment of war enthusiasm adopted prohibition are throwing it overboard," his statement said. "On top of Ontario's recent refusal to reinstate prohibition, Nova Scotia now chronicles it after a 13-year trial.

"Only Finland, France Edward Island and the United States are left grappling in the dark of attempted prohibition of the use of God's gifts. All three are Christian nations trying to forget the use of the Christian name of their betterment.

"Will the United States be the next to jettison this unfortunate fancy? Or will it be Prince Edward Island? Or will it be Finland?"

Ontario's electors on Wednesday by giving an overwhelming vote of continued and enhancing confidence in Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and his government, drove the liquor issue out of politics at least for many years to come.

The government forces were increased by nearly 20 seats and the ranks of the combined oppositions decimated in what was at once the greatest government victory and the greatest opposition trouncing in the history of Ontario politics.

The result conceded as a tremendous personal victory for the premier himself, not less than a party gain, is the direct opposite for the Liberal leader, W. E. N. Sinclair, whose party representation is reduced by more than half and reduced to insignificance. It is regarded as certain that the dissension in the Liberal forces will revive the party's smouldering agitation for new leadership.

Liquor Made Main Issue

The effect of the defeat upon the Liberal party at Ottawa in the admittedly forthcoming dominion elections must also cause provincial Liberals much concern.

Mr. Ferguson went to the country originally asking a mandate upon three new policies in particular—power expenditures for development of New Ontario; extension of Hydro service at low costs to the farms and new expenditure upon country roads.

Before the campaign got well under way these three issues were almost entirely swept aside as his opponents led by the chief Mr Sinclair, first wavered a little and then threw down the gauntlet and staked all their hopes on the liquor issue. The government squarely met the challenge with zeal and fearlessness, and the election was fought mainly upon the issue of the opposition's making.

In the stock-taking, Mr. G. H. Ferguson received in his own riding as well as throughout the province, an increased majority; Mr. Sinclair, who advocated a plebiscite "when there was a demand for it" lost half his party and had his own previous majority cut down by more than 1,000 votes; J. G. Lethbridge, Progressive leader, out for prohibition, lost 10 of his 14 seats, including his own; F. W. Ole, U.F.O. leader, suffered defeat, and seven out-and-out Prohibitionist candidates were snuffed out and snowed under in the constituencies they sought to win.

E. Blake Miller, noted "dry," who threatened to leave his leader after the latter's now-famous Fort William speech, but who later stood by Mr. Sinclair, on the promise of a liquor plebiscite, suffered defeat in East Elgin. The seat was carried by Dr. H. J. Davis for the Conservative party.

Walloped Out of Politics

The opposition preachment that the liquor question should be kept out of politics was answered effectively when the electors thus "walloped it out of politics by endorsing the government's support and defence of the Liquor Control act and the ministry's promise to tighten up its weak spots.

The sweeping victory which exceeded the hopes of the most optimistic government supporters, was a ringing answer to the prime minister's declaration that he was willing to stake his political life on the government's policy of control and sale of liquor by the government—the issue on which he was returned to power in the 1926 general election.

Premier Ferguson's Statement

Confidence vindicated was mirrored in the statement given out to the press on Wednesday night by Premier Ferguson, as follows:

"It is a matter of great satisfaction that the policies and activities of the government have been so enthusiastically endorsed by the people of Ontario. It demonstrates beyond question the people of Ontario are unmisled with hysteria or emotion or even by misrepresentation. There is a keen and intelligent interest taken in the business affairs of the province by the general public. No man can make any progress and appeal for support unless he is absolutely straightforward and candid.

"I am particularly pleased because it is unmistakable evidence that the people have confidence in the integrity and sincerity of purpose that has guided the government in all its work. We have given our best in the past and we will continue to carry on with the same high purpose

Finds Great Satisfaction

"It is great satisfaction to me personally that as I near the end of my 25th year in public life I should find the people of Ontario expressing their confidence and goodwill in such a generous manner as they did on Wednesday.

"I am sure every member of the government will regard this verdict as a mandate authorizing the immediate undertaking of the great program of expansion which we have mapped out to build a greater and more prosperous Ontario."

HAMBLY REDEEMS FRONTENAC-LENNOX

Chas. W. Hambly, the Conservative candidate, made an excellent run in Frontenac-Lennox, and brought the old riding back into the fold by the splendid majority of nearly 800. When it is taken into consideration that his opponent, Dr. Ming, won this riding in 1926 by over 500 majority, it will be seen that the electorate were solidly behind Mr. Hambly and the Conservative government in 1929.

The first return to come into the Conservative Committee Room on election night was Adolphustown No. 2, which gave the doctor a majority of 2, a gain of 18 for Mr. Hambly over the previous election. Returns came in fairly rapidly after that and it was a foregone conclusion that this riding was going Conservative, it was only a question of how large the majority would be.

INVISIBLE BORDER MAKES SOME CURIOUS PROBLEMS

Considerable publicity has been given the curious case of Arthur Plante, a Canadian who owns a house on the border between Canada and the United States, at Malone, N.Y. He has been forbidden to enter the United States, and therefore deprived of the use of that part of his dwelling which is in Canada and for the past few weeks he has been trying to make it habitable for there he expects to spend the months of what newspaper correspondents have called cold Canadian winter—though we imagine it is not much colder than the winter a few feet further south. At the moment the decision has gone against Plante. The explanation of the customs official is that Plante never made a proper entry to the United States. Moreover the two former owners of the house he bought which is in rather a sparsely settled part of the community were suspected of smuggling although no such suspicion attaches to Plante. It is possible that he may appeal against the ruling. If not his house will be for sale in the near future.

Smuggling Facilities

If Plante is now a Canadian it is probably through some oversight for he has lived in the United States for the past 30 years, making a living as a carpenter and plying his trade as far west as California. A few weeks ago he bought the house which has received so much notoriety but when he tried to enter it he was informed that he was not a resident of the United States and, moreover, that he was not a welcome visitor. In short, Plante was forbidden to enter his own home. American jurisdiction did not extend to the woodshed and here he has been puttering about ever since. The fact that the customs people note that the district is sparsely populated is a hint that some illicit traffic between house and woodshed is anticipated. Plante, however, declares he is simply one of that quite numerous class known locally as line-bound. All along the border are people who for various good and personal reasons never cross the line. What are regarded as offences on one side are not so regarded on the other. For example there is considerable difference in the liquor laws of the State of New York and the Province of Quebec.

House Specially Built

In this part of the country there is no natural geographical boundary. One can step from the country into the other without being conscious of any greater purity in the air as he goes into the United States or any appreciable enlarging of his personal liberties. Here and there the boundary line is marked by stone posts. Customs officers can be seen and occasional police, vigilant, it is charitably assumed, to put down the liquor traffic between the two nations. But in many communities people cross the line daily or perhaps scores of time daily in the course of their employment. They are known to officials on both sides and are rarely interfered with. But the coming of a stranger naturally attracts the attention of the police and in the case of Plante he was under suspicion because of the reputation of the people who previously owned the residence he bought. In the past there have been many houses built straddling the line with the object of frustrating the laws of one country or the other and these have given customs officials and police plenty of trouble.

Some Notorious "Lines"

There have been some notorious houses of this kind, all called "lines," such as Toland's lines, Jameson's lines and Mary Reilly's lines. They have been the resort of smugglers. Years ago such articles as coal oil and pork were smuggled and later on a great traffic was built up with liquor. The smuggling of aliens into the United States has also been greatly facilitated by these border line houses and some of them were erected specifically for this purpose. Within the past year Toland's lines gave rise to a case which was referred to both Ottawa and Washington and led to a lawsuit which attracted general attention. A man named Howard James King was wanted for smuggling aliens into the United States. He was in Toland's lines and officers waited outside until he left. Then they flung themselves upon him to make arrest. But King was able to stagger half a dozen steps into Canadian territory.

Defying the Law

The customs men dragged him back across the lines and put him in jail. A writ of habeas corpus was applied for and when the case came to trial the judge sternly reprimanded the customs officers and ordered the release of King. Recently another baffling problem was presented to the border officials. Some question arose concerning a woman whose kitchen, it was found, was built across the line. Every time she walked to her ice box to get a chop she crossed into Canada and when she retured to her stove she was in the United States. But perhaps every time she went to the ice box to get a bottle of beer she was in Canada where such a proceeding would be considered not only legal but praiseworthy. Maybe this was the objection. At any rate it was concluded that she could not be supervised unless a customs official was to become a permanent resident of her kitchen, and as the lady wielded a vigorous broom the problem remained unsolved.

To Honor Devotion of a Son.

A sailor on the Japanese destroyer Sugi will shortly receive a reward from the Minister of the Navy because of unusual filial piety. He has been in the navy for three years and during that time has sent all of his money home to his old father, who can work no longer as a rickshaw man, and to his invalid sister.

During all this time Sugi has lived on what he was allowed by the navy and gave up even the small luxuries which can be obtained with a seaman's modest pay. Some of Sugi's mates finally discovered what he was doing and took up a collection to augment the sum which is being sent every month to the relatives on shore.

Finally the matter came to the attention of the commander of the cruiser. Touched by the sailor's spirit, the quality of devotion to aged parents being one of the most admired according to the ancient Samurai code, the officer recommended that Sugi be rewarded publicly by the Government.

Russian Gypsies Reform.

The thirty-five gypsies of the Soviet Union are gradually being weaned away from their traditional habits of allegedly picturesque vagrabondage and are being encouraged to adopt more settled forms of life, says a Moscow letter to the Christian Science Monitor. Gypsy stagers in pre-war days constituted a feature of every fashionable restaurant, and can still be found in some Moscow restaurants and cafes, although the emoluments of this profession have greatly declined with the wealthy classes, which supported most of them.

The migratory gypsies, who live, for the most part, in the southwestern districts of the Soviet Union, are gradually becoming established in farm settlements and are beginning to send their children to school.

Out-of-Date Blackboards.

Blackboards of translucent ground glass lighted from behind are proposed as a substitute for the usual black surface familiar to every school child.

The old type of blackboard is difficult to illuminate so that all the room can see, but the ground glass, electrically lighted from the rear, allows everything chalked upon it to be seen from all parts of the room, even when a combination of daylight and artificial illumination is being used.

USE THE DIRECTORY

TELEPHONE numbers are tricky things to remember. Often when you think you know a number you have really transposed the two inside figures. It is so easy to say 3264 instead of 3624! The result is that you get "Wrong Number". You are annoyed and so is the other person. You have wasted your own time and his.

It is safer and quicker to use the directory before you call a number, because "Wrong Number" is one of the chief causes of a million calls a day in Ontario and Quebec which go wrong — as up traffic — cause irritation — block business.

Some of these are operators' errors, and some are mistakes by the person making the call. He may ask for the wrong number — he may speak indistinctly and be misunderstood.

We want you to have the best possible telephone service. We are constantly striving to provide it by reducing our own errors and by improving equipment.* But it takes three people to complete a call.

Use the directory — speak slowly and distinctly — avoid wrong numbers — save time — help business efficiency.

To keep a step in advance of demand, and to improve facilities, will involve an outlay this year in excess of $27,000,000.*

Cabot and the New Found Land

In the summer of 1492 the news had spread throughout Europe that a sea captain of Genoa, one Christopher Columbus, had sailed across the Western Ocean for the King of Spain, and found the Indies. Neither he nor any other man then knew that the land had found was an unknown continent which lay between the old European world and Asia. Many men had dreamed of a way to the Orient by a Western voyage. Among them was another native of Genoa, Giovanni Cabotto, or John Cabot, as later he came to be called. In 1461, Cabot went to Venice and became a citizen of that great trading port, and spent many years voyaging in the Eastern Mediterranean and the Red Sea. Here he learned much about the countries of the far East, of India and Persia and China, heard tales of rich and populous cities, of royal palaces, and great temples, for mines of gold and precious stone, and of the wealth to be gained by the trade in silks and spices. In 1484 he went to England with the Venetian traders and settled there for some years. Cabot knew that he could not interest the merchants of Venice in his project of a western route to Asia, since if that were established, Venice would be no longer the great importing centre for the products of East. Both he and Columbus realized that their hopes lay in interesting the countries on the Atlantic seaboard in the new route. So, while Columbus went to Portugal and Spain, Cabot sought to attract the merchants and rulers of England by the prospects of the plan he had in mind. He talked to the merchants of London and Bristol, the two great English seaports of that time; but none ventured to support the experiment. Then came the news of what Columbus and the Spaniards had done. Cabot's idea had been shown to be possible and the hard-headed English merchants began to think more favorably of his visionary project. In the winter of 1495-6 the King of England, Henry VII, visited Bristol. He was shrewd, cautious and money-loving. In Bristol, no doubt, he heard much about Cabot and his plans. Probably he listened to Cabot himself. He became interested, and he gave Cabot and his sons permission to make a voyage, to sail under the King's colors, and, in the language of his charter, authorized them to take possession of any cities, islands or mainland which they might discover—on condition that they bore all costs and gave him one-fifth of all the profits. It was a shrewd bargain and cost Henry nothing, for he supplied no money, and Cabot and his partners were to take all the risks and do all the work. Cabot gathered a crew of eighteen men, nearly all of them English, and fitted out a small ship, called the Matthew, and on the second of May, 1497, sailed out of the harbor of Bristol into the Atlantic Ocean. Northward and westward the little ship made her way across the unknown waters, buffeting against variable winds for fifty-two days until on the 24th day of June, land came in sight. What land was it? From the description it is hard to tell. Some say it was the island still called Newfoundland, others Labrador, but the opinion of most modern students is that it was Cape Breton. Wherever it was, as the ship neared its shores, every eye watched eagerly for the great cities, the palaces, the temples and castles, of which they were to take possession. They saw only waves breaking on miles of lonely beach, and rocky cliffs crowned with heavy forests. Cabot and his men went ashore: the first Englishmen to set foot in North America. They set up a cross and planted beside it the banners of England and Venice, and thus claimed all the country for the King of England. They met no inhabitants; but they saw signs of human life: trees rudely chopped, and snares for wild animals. The land appeared fertile, and Cabot thought that he had reached the north-eastern extremity of Asia, and that the populous cities, the mines of gold and the islands of silk and spices and jewels were only a short distance beyond. He did not tarry, or go farther; but stopping only long enough to take on board firewood and fresh water, set sail for home with the news that he had found the way to the East by sailing westward. . . . . A second voyage. . . . . He found only the rockbound coast of Labrador. The wind was piercing cold, though it was July, the shores were desolate and barren, the sea was filled with huge icebergs. The sailors refused to go farther north, and Cabot turned back. He searched the coast of Nova Scotia and New England, looking for Japan and China, and at length, as his supplies were running low, he sailed home to England empty-handed. The expedition had been a failure, and he met only the discontent of those who had invested in his voyage and who expected him to bring back ship-loads of gold and jewels. The King had no further use for so unprofitable a servant, and we hear little more of Cabot, though his son, Sebastian, found employment for many years as a geographer and map-maker. To-day their names live as those of the first Europeans since the time of the early Norsemen, to reach the mainland of North America, and the first to plant there the flag of England. By Cabot's discovery Newfoundland claims the distinction of being the oldest existing British Colony.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Royal Winter Fair, Toronto—November 20-28.

Guelph Winter Fair—December 9th to 12th.

Ottawa Winter Fair—December 2nd to 6th.

Ontario Beekeepers' Association, at Toronto—November 26, 27 and 28.

During the past year more than 9,000 girls and women took advantage of the systematic instruction given by the Department in the following short courses: "Food Values and Cookery," "Home Nursing and first Aid," "Sewing" and "Millinery." This training should prove of great value to the home of the average Ontario farmer.

A prophet is said to be without honor in his own country. But after he made good, it is a different matter. So it proved in the case of Dr. George I. Christie, who returned from the United States to assume the presidency of Ontario Agricultural College and who recently was accorded an enthusiastic reception when he visited his native village of Winchester.

POTATO GRADING

As federal law requires that all potatoes in commerce be graded, farmers are instructed in standard and methods of grading. This will be a feature of an exhibit at the Royal Show, being arranged by the Crops and Markets Branch co-operating with the Ontario Agriculture College.

ONTARIO RAMS FOR WEST

The first consignment of Ontario purebred rams, numbering 275 or four carloads, have reached the ranches of Western Canada. They comprised Southdown, Cheviots, Hampshires, Leicester, Cotswolds and Lincolns. It is the largest single shipment ever sent, but the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers expect that next year's shipment will be even greater.

VALUABLE RAINFALL

Recent rains have been of untold value to the province. Reports from the various counties indicate that while too late to materially improve pastures, the widespread rainfall has improved fall wheat wonderfully and has permitted fall plowing to proceed. Live stock is generally reported in poor condition, and with grain scarce and feed high, the whole milk supply is short in all parts of the province. Most of the apple and root crops have been harvested.

ONTARIO POTATOES

"Ontario potatoes are staging a come-back," states J. A. Carroll, of the Crops and Markets Branch. "Ontario has always grown good potatoes, but owing to a faulty marketing system the bulk of the crop has reached the market improperly graded. In strong competition this meant a reduced price which in the distress conditions of last year meant about 50 per cent. below the top. Growers are improving their cultural methods and are producing tubers which when properly graded cannot be beaten for quality."

O.A.C. LIVE STOCK SALE

The recent annual sale of purebred live stock at O. A. C. attracted many buyers from all parts of the province. Many choice specimen of beef, dairy and fat cattle were readily sold and brought good prices. An outstanding lot of swine, including Yorkshires, Berkshire and Tamworths, was distributed. The top price in the cattle sale was $260 paid for a six-year-old cow. Total receipts were $7,759. This sale has become an institution, with a truly educating influence. By the distribution of these high-class animals throughout the province, desirable improvement in Ontario-bred live stock will be effected.

FIGHTING THE CORN BORER

According to Prof. Caesar, who has directed the war against the European corn borer in Ontario, a considerable improvement has been shown in the borer-infested counties during the past year, and although one or two counties in Western Ontario still have a serious infestation and the farmer's unremitting vigilance will admit no relaxation, the alarming aspects have been vastly mitigated. The work of the county inspectors during the past two years and the increased co-operation of farmers generally have played a prominent role in the clean-up. Prof. Caesar is now concentrating on a machine that will cut the cornstalks close to the ground and make "plowing under" an easy process. Next year he hopes that this machine will find general use in the corn-growing area. Farmers who desire to learn more about the proper methods of cleaning up their fields and of waging effective war against the borer should obtain from agricultural representatives one or other of the instruction pamphlets which have been issued by Prof. Caesar.

Russian Indians.

Russian newspapers recently reported, with considerable display, that the Soviet authorities in the Far East of Siberia had taken steps aimed at preserving the remnants of a tribe called Kerezzi, held to be close relatives of the Indians of North America. Although these distant cousins of the American Indians are described as peace-loving hunters, who avoid clashes with other tribes and never commit theft or murder, their conditions of life have been so hard that their number has been reduced to about 400. By transferring them to a district where these folk pursue wild animals and make furs, the Soviet Government hopes to prolong the existence of the race.

Jewel Encrusted Shoe.

The world's costliest shoe is owned by Princess Patricia, and is to be with other treasures from the palace of the Czars at Tsarskoe Selo, one of its exhibits, which is reported by a half inches by seven and a half, is encrusted with diamonds, pearls and rubies, and on the outside of the diamonds. The clasp is of sapphires, and the toe is studded with pearls.

OBITUARY

Thomas Blute

The many friends of Mr. Thomas Blute were greatly shocked when the news reached Napanee on Thursday night that he had passed away very suddenly in Cornwall. From the report received, he was taken suddenly ill and passed away in a very short time. A week ago last Sunday he and his wife (a bride of only a few months) spent the day in Napanee and he appeared to be all intents in the best of health. "Tom" was one of the popular young men of Napanee, he for many years residing with his parents, just outside of Napanee. A great lover of sports, he took a keen interest in baseball and hockey, particularly the latter and for several years was a player on the hockey team. He was a member of St. Patrick's church, prior to going to Cornwall. The sympathy of the community is extended to his bereaved widow, his parents, who now reside in Toronto, and who for many years resided here, his brothers and sisters, one of the former residing here, Mr. Paul Blute. The funeral service was held in Cornwall on Sunday, interment taking place in the Cornwall cemetery.

Presentation and Address

About thirty of the relatives and friends of Mrs. Fraser met at the home of Mr. Ernest Gordanier, on Friday evening, November 1st, to spend a social evening previous to her departure for a few months visit with her family and other relatives in different parts of the States.

During the evening the following address was read by Mrs. Frank Lake, and presentation by Mrs. C. Sharp.

Dear Mrs. Fraser,—A few of your relatives and friends have met to enjoy a social evening together before your departure to visit friends in the States.

We shall miss you not only at the church services, where you were a faithful attendant, but in our Women's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid meetings to which you gave unstintingly of your time, means and talent. You have by your kind deeds and cheery disposition been an incentive to the community.

Also you have been enabled to bring comfort and cheer into homes made sorrowful by the removal of loved ones. Thus we feel we could not let you leave without in some small degree showing our appreciation, so we ask you to kindly accept this suitcase as a small token of our love, and as you have occasion to use it from time to time, may it bring happy recollection of your many friends.

Signed on behalf of your friends,

Mrs. Clarence Sharp,
Mrs. Frank Lake,
Mrs. George Clark.

WEDDING BELLS

Douglas-Mayhew

The marriage of Annie Esther, second daughter of Mrs. O. Mayhew, Cobalt to Mr. Thomas Herman Douglas, of Napanee, Ont., was quietly solemnized on Monday, October 21st, by Rev. D. A. MacKercher, at the United Manse, Haileybury. The bride was charmingly dressed in brown and eggshell flat crepe, with hose and shoes to match. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Jackson, of Cobalt.

After a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's mother, the young couple left on a motor trip to North Bay, Toronto and Niagara. Upon their return they will reside in Cobalt.

Breen-Dillon

A lovely autumn wedding of widespread interest took place at ten o'clock, October 15th, in the Church of Annunciation., Enterprise, when Rev. Father E. O. Sullivan united in marriage Frances Stella, second eldest daughter, of Mrs. Michael Dillon, and George Bernard, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Breen, of Enterprise.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with flowers and ferns and during the ceremony Mrs. Stafford Murphy, accompanied by the choir rendered appropriate hymns.

The bride entered the church to the strains of the wedding march and was given away by her brother, Hubert, and looked charming in a frock of independence blue pann velvet with hat shoes, and hose to harmonize.

She carried a large bouquet of Madame Butterfly roses, lily-of-the-valley, and maiden hair fern. The bride was assisted by her sister, Kathleen, who was gowned in a navy blue transparent velvet with beige georgette collar and cuffs. She wore a hat of light beige felt with corresponding shoes and gloves, and carried pale yellow chrysanthemums. Mr. Clarence Breen attended the groom.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's mother where a beautiful wedding cake raised on columns, graced the centre of the table with a scroll attached bearing the initials of the bride and groom. Many relatives of the happy couple partook of a sumptuous repast.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Breen left on a motor trip through parts of Ontario and the States, visiting relatives at Flint, Detroit, Niagara Falls, London, and Toronto. The bride travelled in a claret ensemble transparent velvet and gold lace dress with a small hat of the same shade with becoming shoes and hose.

The popularity of the newly married coulpe was testified by the many costly and beautiful gifts of which they were recipients. On their return they will reside at Enterprise. The bride having been a teacher for several years. The groom is a prosperous young farmer and a graduate of Kingston Business College.

HOW EDISON STARTED AS INVENTOR

What is rather picturesquely called "Light's Golden Jubilee" was celebrated at Dearborn, Michigan, and no doubt many of our readers listened over the radio to remarks by President Hoover, Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison. Mr. Edison was, of course, the hero of the occasion which his friend and admirer, Mr. Ford, had organized and spent a couple of million dollars to make particularly impressive and memorable. We have already in this column extolled some of the bitter arguments that arose over the invention of the incandescent light and need not refer to them further than to say that Mr Edison is given credit for a unique contribution to science and that many regard it as the most important work he ever did despite the fact that in his time he has taken out thousands of patents at Washington. It has been estimated that his original invention or the vital improvements he has made in the inventions of other men would represent a capitalization of twenty-one billion dollars. There is no living man whose genius has so added to the comfort and convenience of others as Mr Edison. If there had been no Edison life today would be much like what it was in the days of our grandfathers.

The Youthful Inventor

The story has been told of Edison being a train butcher on the Grand Trunk and losing his job because of an explosion which took place in a baggage car where the youthful inventor was carrying on some incendiary experiments. But Edison's questing genius had manifested itself even earlier and the family archives reveal the fact that when he was a little boy he was fascinated by the sight of a setting hen. He got the idea that what a hen could do in three weeks a human being should be able to do earlier, and so he dispossessed the hen and took her place only to be discovered by his mother who, after hanging his clothes out on a line to air took advantage of the occasion to give him a good spanking. As a young man Edison, who had become a telegraph operator, wandered through the southern and southwestern states working when he could get a job, and then when he had acquired a small stake throwing up the job to experiment with something or other, for probably there was not a time since he was fifteen years old that some invention or other for probably there was not a time since he was fifteen years old that some invention or other has not been simmering in his mind.

A Start in New York

It was one of these jobless periods that he arrived in New York city without a cent in his pocket. He had returned from a fruitless visit to Rochester where he had tried to sell an invention, and his object in going to New York was to get employment with the Western Union Telegraph company. When he made application he learned that there was no immediate opening, and so he was obliged to hunt up a telegraph operator whom he knew and borrow a dollar from him. His immediate problem was where to sleep until the telegraph job was open, and having heard of a wonderful machine devised by a certain Dr. Laws which reported the fluctuation of the price of gold for the New York Stock Exchange he resolved to have a look at it and study it if possible. So he went to the offices of the gold indicator company and asked for permission to sleep for a few nights in the battery room.

First Rung of Ladder

On the third day after his arrival he was sitting in the company's office when suddenly there was a loud crash and the complicated mechanism of the gold indicator came to a stop. Instantly all was the wildest excitement and confusion. Dr. Laws for the moment seemed to have forgotten how he had built his machine. In the crisis Edison stepped forward and said that he could set the thing to rights. He was bade imprecations to do so instantly. Since Edison had spent more time in examining the machine than he had in sleeping he was able in a few minutes to start it going again. The grateful Dr. Laws asked him to tee him the next day and when Edison turned up he offered him the position of managing the plant where the machines were made at a salary of $300 a month. Edison naturally jumped at the opportunity and this was his first step up the ladder of fortune and fame. In a short time this company was absorbed by the Gold and Stock Company and Edison continued in its employment for two years.

His First Real Money

In that period he had made numerous little inventions, including the universal ticker and the quinton stop which had proved not only highly profitable to the company, but had clearly indicated his own future career. He had received nothing in addition to his salary for these inventions although the understanding was that he should be rewarded. One day Gen. Lefferts, the head of the company, asked Edison to his office and said: "Now, young man I want to close up the matter of your inventions. How much do you think you should receive for them?" Mr. Edison in telling the story later, said: "I had made up my mind that taking into consideration the time and killing pace I was working at, I should be entitled to $5,000, but could get along with $2,000. But when the psychological moment arrived, I hadn't the nerve to name such a large sum, so I said, 'Well, general, suppose you make me an offer.' The general said: 'How would $40,000 strike you?' The inventor came then as near fainting as ever he did and he was afraid that the general would hear the thumping of his heart. But he contrived to keep his composure and said that he would accept the amount named. Two or three days later he called again and received a cheque. But at that time Edison knew nothing of banking methods, and when the cashier asked him to endorse the cheque, he misunderstood him and rushed back to the general to demand cash in lieu of the slip of paper. The general pacified him and later helped him to make the deposit. It was with this money that Edison made his original investment at Menlo park, where for more than fifty years have poured forth an almost unceasing stream of inventions, which have powerfully affected our modern civilization.

ONE ON FATHER

Who is it wears the patch work loose,
And seldom goes to picture shows?
That his girl may have fine clothes?
It's Father!

Who is it wears last summer's hat
That his boy may be a sporty frat,
It's Father

Who is it buys the bread and meat

And then gets shoved on a back set?

MOTHER'S COUNSEL

I've a precious memory stored away
In the casket of my mind,
Where I locked it securely there to stay,
And the key only Friends can find.

It's the memory of my mother's face
Ere she left this world of care,
When she talked to me of the toilsome race
I must run ere I'd meet her there.

She told me that along the way
There were pitfalls, deep and wide,
That if I'd avoid them I must not stray,
But close cling to the Hand of my Guide.

She said that the path, though rough and steep,
With always an upward trend,
Could be climbed with ease if I'd only keep
The Saviour as Guide and Friend.

And then she talked of the Heavenly Home,
With its mansions, bright and fair,
And the King Immortal, upon the Throne,
Waiting to welcome us there.

Till my heart o'erflowed with an impulse rare,
To win that Heavenly Goal,
And partake of the bliss beyond compare,
Which awaits the faithful soul.

TURN TO BARLEY

From reports of agricultural representatives during the past two weeks, it appears that there will be a decided falling off in the area of fall wheat to be harvested next year. In all probability, the land on which it was intended to sow fall wheat will be utilized for some other grain for which there is a steady demand, that is, barley. The increasing demand for this grain for industrial purposes in Ontario practically assures the grower of consistently good disposition at good domestic prices. As a result of several years special development effort on the part of Ontario growers and a splendid harvest season this year, there should be available next spring almost unlimited supplies of seed barley of the finest quality.—O.A.C. No. 21.

HELPING THE NEWCOMER

There is a moral in this little story: In the spring of 1929, William A. Pullman, a Welsh miner, landed in Canada with his wife and family of nine children. They had no money and prospect of work. The immigration agent got in touch with Mr. Elon Weir, a Norfolk farmer. The latter furnished them with a tenant house, hired the head of the family, and found positions on neighboring farms for four of the older boys and two of the girls. All have made good. In the course of a year Mr. Pullman expects to take up his own farm and with the assistance of his boys he should become a highly successful farmer. It shows the possibilities of making these newcomers into useful members of the rural communities if someone will only undertake to befriend them and instruct them in the ways of Canadian farming.

NEW REGULATIONS

The Roots and Vegetables Act, as amended this year, in the section dealing with marking, distinctly provides that "every person who by himself or through the agency of another person offers for sale, sells, or has in his possession intended for sale, any vegetables for which grades are provided by these regulations packed in baskets bags, closed barrels, closed crates or in bulk, shall mark the initials of his Christian names and his full surname and address or in the case of a firm or corporation the firm or corporate name and address and the grade of the vegetables, also the weight, in a plain and indelible manner. On baskets by tag or on the handle, in bags by tags or printed on bag; in barrels by 3-4 inch letters; in crates by 1-2 inch letters. Exceptions to this rule are vegetables with the top leaves attached or green vegetables and potatoes offered in closed barrels."

CAVALIERI of Paris urges PALMOLIVE "2 MINUTE MASSAGE"

"I am visited by some of the most famous beauties of two continents," she says. "In addition to my own beauty products, I always recommend Palmolive soap." To her discriminating clientele, Cavalieri suggests the simple two-minute, twice-a-day treatment which experts everywhere agree is the only correct "foundation cleansing" method: Make a bland lather of Palmolive soap and warm water. With both hands massage well into the pores for two full minutes. Then rinse . . . first with warm, later with cold water. That is all. Yet no other cleansing method leaves the skin so soft, refreshed and radiant.

An Aberdonian was making his first trip to London, and there he was living as most Scottish visitors to London do, with friends. He had been entertained splendidly, taken to theatres, music halls, the Zoo, Kensington Gardens, the Albert Hall, and even to a big fist fight at the Ring. Only the races remained. So his host took him down to Kempton Park. There the former got a good tip from a friend, and he promptly invested two pounds on the horse—one for himself and the other for the man from "Kirrie." It won at 7-1. Together, they went up to the bookmaker and the London Scot drew the money. Counting off seven pounds from the "wad," he handed it to his guest, whose eyes were bulging with suppressed excitement. "Jamie," he said in a hoarse whisper, "hoo long has this sort of thing been goin' on?"

THE ONE

I knew his face the moment that he passed
Triumphant in the thoughtless, cruel throngs,—
Triumphant, though the quiet, tired eyes
Showed his soul had suffered overlong
And though across his brow faint lines of care
Were etched, somewhat of youth still lingered there.
I gently touched his arm—he smiled at me—
He was the man that once I meant to be
Where I had failed, he won from life, success;
Where I had stumbled, with sure feet he stood;
Alike—yet unalike—we faced the world
And through the strife he found that life was good.
And I? The bitter wormwood in the glass,
The shadowed way along which failures pass!
Yet as I saw him thus, joy came to me—
He was the man that once I meant to be!
I knew him! And I knew he knew me for
The man he might have been. Then did his soul
Thank silently the gods that gave him strength
To win, while I so sorely missed the goal?
He turned and quickly in his own firm hand
He took my own—the gulf of failure spanned.
And that was all—strong, self reliant free,
He was the man that once I meant to be.

We did not speak. But in his sapient eyes
I saw the spirit that had urged him on.
The courage that had led him through the fight.
Had once been mine I thought. "Can it be gone?"
He felt that unasked question—felt it true

Too late to win? No? Not too late for me—
He is the man that still I mean to be —Everard Jack Appleton.

Lake Deeper Than It's Wide.

A lake that is really a well, being deeper than it is wide, has recently been investigated by Russian geologists. It lies about forty kilometers south of the health resort of Nalchik in the North Caucasus and is known as Geri-kol or the Blue Lake.

It is only a small body of water, being 235 metres long and 120 metres wide; but it has the surprising depth of 258 metres with practically vertical walls. Except at its surface the water temperature remains constant the year round, at about 17 degrees Fahrenheit higher than the average annual temperature of the air. The lake has no surface inlets, not even the smallest of brooks, but a little river flows out of it. The water is presumed to come from subterranean springs.

The lake is charged with hydrogen sulphide and also contains argusin, so that nothing can live in it. There are never any leaves or pieces of driftwood to be found on its surface, which has given rise to the local superstition that nothing can float on its water. The people of the neighboring highlands also have the belief that the mysterious depths of the lake are inhabited by a monster in the form of a bull.—Science Service.

Hobbies of Boxers.

Famous boxers all seem to have some outstanding hobby. Quite a fuss was made when it was known Gene Tunney was exceptionally fond of literature. It is said that Bob Fitzsimmons had a wonderful way with him in the handling of wild things. He thought nothing would bite him intentionally. He believed he could hypnotize many of them, and once tamed a bear, and one time had a pet lion, of which he was very fond. Jim Jeffries was also very fond of animals and was a great hunter. He was always in the mountains hunting bear, deer, mountain lions or small game. On one Alaskan trip he got a dozen big bears with deer, moose and mountain sheep. Nowadays, Jeffries grows roses and is an expert at the job. What a contrast! Jack Dempsey is also fond of hunting. He likes potting away at any kind of game, big or small. And he is passionately fond of dogs. So could one go on.

Memorial to a Pigeon.

The President of the French Republic recently unveiled a memorial to a carrier pigeon, which saved the city during the war. On June 4, 1916, Commander Regnal released his last carrier pigeon bearing an urgent call for reinforcements, and the pigeon safely reached its destination. Reinforcements were sent and victory assured, and for this achievement the pigeon was awarded the Legion of Honor. Although the flying powers of pigeons are well-known, few realise the amazing speeds at which they travel. In one case at Dundee during the war a pigeon flew 22 miles from an airplane in 22 minutes and enabled help to be given to a badly damaged machine. In the Crabtree Flying Race from Lymington the winning pigeon flew 2,748 yards a minute, or 100 miles an hour.

A Floating Theatre.

The ship will be called the Pro Arte and will cruise round the world, visiting such places as Hamburg, London, Spanish ports, South America, Baltimore, New York, and the Azores.

The vessel will be equipped with a modern stage. There will be seating accommodation for 500 people, and plays representative of the German spirit will be presented. There will also be on board an old German beer and wine tavern.

OBITUARY

Lyall H. Keech

One of the saddest deaths that has occurred in this community was that of Lyall Harvey Keech, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Keech, of Moscow.

Lyall was such a bright lovable little boy and had been ill only a few days. But that dread disease diphtheria set in before anyone realized it, and, although everything was done for him that was possible, he passed away on September 18th, aged three years, eight months and twelve days.

On account of the nature of the disease it was found necessary to conduct the burial at night; only the undertaker, Mr. S. D. Wagar, Dr. Horton, the father, Harvey Keech, and Rev. G. T. Mackenzie, who so kindly read the burial service, being present.

The deepest sympathy of the entire community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Keech in their sorrow under such tragic circumstances and our prayer is that the God of all comfort will sustain and console them in their time of affliction.

We are grateful that Mrs. Keech, who also contracted diphtheria is about fully recovered again and at a later date when all danger is passed, a memorial service will be held for the dear one called away.

ST. ANDREW'S UNITED ANNIVERSARY

The annual Anniversary Services were held in St. Andrews United Church on Sunday. It was a beautiful day. Grace Church withdrew their service in the evening and and Trinity in the morning in keeping with a custom which is now an established feature of our church life. Mr. Pawson and Mr. Woodger took part in the services and large numbers of other congregations were present.

Rev. T. J. Thomson, D.D., of Glebe United Church was the preacher for the occasion. He is a man of strong intellect and deep spiritual temperament. He possesses as well a keen sense of humor and a deep human sympathy. These qualities marked both his addresses. They were just a bit different than the ordinary sermon. But that very difference made a deep impression on the congregation. In the morning Mr. Thompson analyzed the qualities that go to make up the well rounded christian character. In the evening he stressed and elaborated the value and importance of the common place in life.

The music of the day was given by the regular choir, which contributed a great deal to the worshipful atmosphere of the services. In the morning Mrs. Eppiet sang "O Lord Most Holy," by Alfred Wooler, and the choir rang "O Lord My Strength," by Wooler. In the evening Mrs. Eppiet and Vaikman sang "The Shadows of the Evening Hours," by John Prindle Scott, and the anthem was "Jesus Savior Pilot Me," by Chas. B. Blont.

HALLOWE'EN FOLIC HAPPY EVENT

On Thursday evening, October 31st, the members of the Napanee Rotary Club held one of their Hallowe'en Frolics in the Armouries, and although the main purpose of the entertainment was to raise funds for the help of the crippled children in this county, the Rotarians managed to make it a party for the town children as well

At six-thirty in the evening little masked figures began to gather in front of the Town Hall and at ten minutes to seven the parade was marshalled into order and led by the band, some of whom were in gala dress, marched around the block to Dundas and on to the Armouries. Here every child was given a treat of candy, and special prizes for the best costumes were awarded to the following:

Intermediate Girls — Irene Story, Phyllis Dennison.

Seniors—Gussie Boyes, 1; Mabel Vanloughnet, 2; Dorothy Stinson, 1; Jack Stinson, 2.

After this ceremony, the children had plenty of fun wandering about the attractive building which was gayly decorated with colored lights, balloons, and bunting, and lined on either side with booths, where games of all kinds were being run for the amusement of the grown-ups. These were in charge of Rotary Club members, some of whom were from Kingston, all eager to help in the good cause.

A refreshment booth at one end of the auditorium was well patronized, and throughout the evening a committee continued to sell tickets for the drawing contest which was decided at eleven o'clock. The list of lucky ticket-holders is published in this paper.

After the crowd had thinned enough to make it possible, a "jitney dance" was begun with an orchestra led by Mr. James Normile, furnishing the music.

Although there were some very weary Rotarians on Napanee the following morning, there were also very happy ones, knowing that the good work in which they are pledged to carry on, can be continued for another year, and a number of crippled little ones can be given treatment at hospitals, where they will have every chance of being restored to a normal, healthy condition. Some very successful and happy results have already been accomplished, and it is the desire of the Rotarians that every unfortunate child shall be given his chance to have sturdy limbs and a healthy body

BASKETBALL

N. C. I. Girls Defeat Picton C. I. Girls

Picton Collegiate Junior and Senior Girls' Basketball teams came over to Napanee on Friday evening to play a pair of scheduled league games with the N. C. I. girls, and although a good battle was given, Napanee were successful in winning both junior and senior games. The seniors banished Picton seniors to the score of 47-23, while N. C. I. juniors won by the close margin of 21-18.

The seniors first took the floor and through steady playing and good defensive work at the end of the first period the score read 28-8 for Napanee. The Napanee girls proved greatly superior to their Picton rivals, playing and shooting better, and with speed that completely baffled P. C. I.

Then the juniors played their first period. The teams were very evenly matched and a good contest was staged. Picton held a slender one and two point lead during the first half of the session, and showed as good playing and shooting qualities as N. C. I. But our girls seemed determined to gain the lead and at the end of the period the score stood 14-11 for Napanee.

With a 20 point lead to hold against Picton the N. C. I. girls played their best in the last half of their game. The defence held back many passes that might have resulted in several baskets, while the forward line gained on Picton instead of allowing the lead to be cut down. So at the end of the senior game the N. C. I. girls had won another basketball game to the score of 47-23, and possessed the enviable record of three straight wins and no defeats.

Then the final period of the junior game was played. On several occasions Picton tied the score and remained one point behind N. C. I. all through the last half of the period. It was evident that our girls would defeat Picton. So, encouraged and cheered on by the students, they gained a five point lead that proved sufficiently large to defeat P. C. I. and the final score was 21-18. So the juniors were not to be surpassed by the seniors, for they, too, are perched on the top rung of the league ladder with three wins and no defeats.

N. C. I. has now completed half the schedule successfully and by the same good playing they should win both junior and senior championships. Come to their next game, which will be announced later.

WILTON W. M. S.

The monthly meeting of the Wilton Women's Missionary was held at the home of Mrs. Stinson Carr, Thursday, October 31st. There were forty-two present including members and visitors. The young ladies of the Auxiliary had charge of the meeting, which was led by Miss Nellie McPherson.

The meeting was opened by singing hymn, "Jesus Calls us O'er the Tumult," at the conclusion of which Rev. McQuade led in prayer. The scripture lesson was taken by Mrs. W. H. Mills. The offering was then received. The business was in charge of our president, Mrs. A. W. Babcock. The various reports were read and adopted. Several expressions of appreciation had been received by our "travelling basket" committee, for flowers and fruit sent in illness; some in person and some by letter. These were read at the meeting in November instead of December; also that a joint meeting of the W. M. S. and Ladies' Aid be held in December. The hymn, "Jesus Shall Reign Whene'er the Sun," was followed by a report of the W. M. S. Convention, held at Anderson. This was given by Mrs. Fred Sharpe. One verse of hymn "I Love To Tell the Story," followed by an exercise entitled, "Mrs. Smith's Mite-box." This was given by seven young ladies. Perhaps the lesson to be learned might be summed up in the words, "The gift without the Giver is Bare." If missionary efforts are to be of use, they must be accompanied by prayer. The hymn, "Far and Near the Fields are Teeming," brought both the exercise and the meeting to a close. The Mizpah was then repeated in unison.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostess and all enjoyed the social half hour which followed. The November meeting will be at the home of Mrs. A. E. Perry.

MILLIONS MAY STARVE

The successful beekeepe, knows that his colonies of bees must be well supplied with winter stores before the winter comes on, but Professor Millen, of the Department of Apiculture at the Ontario Agricultural College, gives the following information for the inexperienced bee man.

Honey bees cannot forage for a living during the winter months. Food must be available inside the hive in which the bees are located. The food must be good as the bees may not get a flight for three months and they retain undigested food in the intestines for long periods. Poor food causes dysentery and the loss of the colony.

Feed in October or early November. The syrup should be warm and made two parts sugar to one part water. All crystals of sugar must be dissolved. Ten pound honey pails, with perforated covers, make good feeds. Feed the syrup in the evening, inside empty supers. A good colony will empty four or five pails in one night. Reduce the entrance of the colonies being fed to avoid robbing. A ten frame Langstroth hive, properly fed, should weigh over sixty-five pounds. A well-fed colony will return you a crop of honey next year. Do not let your bees starve for the sake of a little extra food.

DORLAND

Despite the pouring rain on Friday evening the masquerade party in the school room of the United Church was a splendid success. Some very pretty as well as some very ludicrous costumes were present. After the unmasking a number of hallowe'en games were enjoyed. If laughing makes one fat, several pounds must have been gained during the evening. Also service was held here on Sunday, but nearly every one took advantage of the beautiful day to go to Conway and meet their former pastor, Rev H. B. Neal, of Wooler, who preached anniversary services there—Mrs. Russel Cousins is visiting relatives in Galt.—Miss Beulah Rombo left on Saturday for Guelph to enter the hospital as nurse in training—A little son has brightened the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. White.—S. Mack moved Robert Wilson and family to Toronto after their sale on Saturday.

WHY TOLERATE ROACHES

It is not difficult to free a kitchen, restaurant, or bake-shop from cockroaches," says Professor Caesar, of the Ontario Agricultural College, and he continues:—

"To exterminate these large brown or black insects that get into almost every kind of food, just go to the drug store, buy a pound of sodium flouride, and mix it with an equal bulk of flour or corn starch. Sweep up the infested room, then dust the mixture on the floor along the sides of wall where the cockroaches are most common, also behind the sinks and into every crevice or hiding place of the insects. A small hand-bellows duster is excellent for the purpose. Leave the dust for, about a week, then gather it up and burn, and re-dust as before. At the end of another week almost every cockroach will be dead.

Another method which is preferred by some is to put out little heaps of attractive food under sinks or close to the walls, under cupboards or tables, and make a small ring of the poison dust around each of these so that the insects will have to go through it to get to the food, and will thus be killed. The poison kills if the cockroaches even walk over it.

DON'T FOOL WITH GASOLINE

In this motor age when gasoline is handled as frequently and carelessly as factory cotton or sugar was in other days, people are prone to forget that it is dangerous explosive.

Only an occasional tragedy impresses this fact on the public's mind. The only wonder is that these tragedies are not more frequent occurrence. For gasoline is used for so many domestic purposes that people are apt to forget that they are tempting sudden death as well as conflagrations.

Gasoline should not be used for domestic purposes as infrequently as possible and then handled with the same care and respect that is given to dynamite.

The familiarity that breeds contempt was never bestowed in a more dangerous place.

AVERAGE AIR PILOT EARNS $5,556 A YEAR

How much does it cost to become a flier. Above all how much salary does the average pilot, employed by any of the large air transport companies, or by private individuals, earn during the year?

Very little is generally known about these subjects, and questions about them keep continually coming in from young men in various parts of the country ambitious to make a career of aviation.

While aviation undoubtedly holds out very bright prospects for any physically fit young man with normal intelligence, there are many obstacles to be overcome by the ambitious youth before he can hope to make a good livelihood out of flying. Theoretically anyone, on completing the 200-hour solo flying required by the department of commerce to qualify for a transport pilot license, may go out and ask for a job with any of the air transport companies, or with the air mail. Actually, however, no pilot with less than 1,500 hours of solo flying could ever hope to get the job. In fact some of the transport compites would not consider any pilot with less than 2,000 hours.

The average pilot on a regularly scheduled air transport line earns $5,556 a year and works an average of less than two and a half hours a day, flying about 40,000 miles a year, according to a report of the aeronautic branch of the department of commerce. The same report states that the average air transport operator employ as pilots at a base pay of $166 a month additional compensation at the rate of 5.5 cents a day-mile and 9.3 cents a night-mile. Flying an average of 68 hours a month the average pilot earned $463.51 during that period. Mechanics and riggers earned an average of $164.37 a month at an hourly rate of 76 cents.

While some pilots get as low as $35 a week it is safe to say that the average salary of the competent pilot ranges between $75 and $100 a week. The larger transport companies such as, Transcontinental Air Transport, National Air Transport, Pan-American Airways-Western Air Express, Universal Air Lines, Boeing Air Transport, and Pacific Air Transport, maintain a base flying pay which, with customary mileage nets the pilot from $5,000 to $6,000 per year. Some who engage mostly in night flying earns as much as $10,000 annually but these are very rare.

In the case of test pilots, probably the highest paid in the profession, earnings vary greatly and depend entirely on the individual pilot. They average from $6,000 to $10,000 per year. Some of these are paid by the hour—$10 an hour is not unusual—others are paid by the job, while still others receive a basis monthly salary—from $300 to $600 per month—plus so much extra for each plane tested.

Other highly paid pilots are instructors in flying schools, their pay running often as high as $10,000 a year.

A pilot for sight-seeing or taxi-line operator makes from $5 to $7.50 of $10 a hour, and may if he is on regular list, work as much as forty hours a week. His earnings for the average week may run up to $200, but the job is a seasonal one.

During the summer months pilots working as extras on the larger flying fields at the usual week and rush pick up between $50 to $100 while so employed.

Very few figures are available about salaries of fliers employed by private airplane owners.

MASTERFUL QUEEN MARY BLOCKED REGENCY PROPOSAL

"My dear," said Mr. Baldwin to Mrs. Baldwin as they sat at dinner one night a few months ago, "Queen Mary is one of the greatest women of her age and the most masterful I have ever met. There will be no need to consider a regency."

How this fragment of presumably private conversation leaked into the columns of the New York World we are at a loss to understand, but we are assured that the reporter who uses the nom de plume of W. T. Marston is in a position to write with authority of the royal family of England. The remark is supposed to have been made after the prime minister had returned from Bognor where he had gone for the purpose of talking to Queen Mary and telling her that a regency was required.

At that time the affairs of the nation were being conducted by a council of state composed of the Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York, the prime minister and the lord chancellor. It had proved unwieldy and now with a general election in prospect it was felt that it could not properly discharge the duties expected of it.

Defects of Council of State

When the Kings fell so ill it was apparent that for some time at least he would be unable to attend to public affairs, the council was appointed. The idea then was that either the King would soon recover, in which case the council would not have much to do, or that his grave illness would soon end fatality and the Prince of Wales would become king, thus rendering the council unnecessary. But the King's illness proved lingering and his condition remained critical. Through those weeks the Queen was the only link between the King and the council. It was she who told him as much as was necessary of what was going on, and she sought to convey his views up to the council or the prime minister. This proved a cumbersome process. In practice it turned out that as the King's condition improved the council would leave certain matters which it thought he might choose to deal with himself. These, sometimes, were overlooked. Appointments were delayed and business seriously interferred with.

Queen Blocks Regency

A London paper said that a regency could no longer be postponed in view of the approaching election. Mr. Baldwin called a cabinet council which, it is inferred, agreed that the Queen should be informed of the necessity for the regency. Two hours later the prime minister left for Bognor and it was later in the same day that he made the remark with which somewhat sensationally we have begun this column. It was the Queen who disposed of the notion of a regency. She realized that it might well be advisable in the public interest, but she feared the effect upon the King's mind when, as it was inevitable, he learned of it. He might interpret it to mean that his advisers had given up hope of his recovery. Such a reflection could not fail to be extremely depressing, and might well be fatal since the state of mind in such maladies is of the utmost importance in making the fight for health. The Queen resolved that the council should continue but that she would charge herself with extra duties so that no further complaints would be made that the public business was neglected.

Helped Preserve King's Life

This she did, in a manner that extorted the admiration of all those who understood the load she was bearing. She became in effect the regent, not through any ambition but because she was devoted to her husband. Says the writer we have already quoted: "It is said at the English court that King George owes his life as much to Queen Mary as to his physicians. Through all the days of anxiety Queen Mary carried on all the duties of monarch with indomitable courage. In her husband's presence she was always smiling, cheerful, hopeful. She was the same in the presence of the King's ministers. She was at work early and late at her writing table, and yet she was able to hold the courts in the summer and fulfil a lengthy list of social and public engagements."

Strong Will Early Displayed

This quality of masterfulness which Mr. Baldwin commented upon was displayed by the Queen quite early in life. It was detected by King Edward who was then Prince of Wales, and if we are to believe our biographer the fact that he saw through the little wiles of Princess May whereby she had her own way while pretending to fall in with the wishes of others annoyed her greatly and was at the bottom of her strong dislike of the man who was, in course of time, to become her father-in-law. We do not know that the Prince had any particular grudge against the little girl, but he is said to have had a kind of contempt for her father, the Duke of Teck, whose financial difficulties were on one important occasion relieved by Queen Victoria from her private purse. When Albert learned this, he was furious, we are told, because his mother had signally failed to come to his own own rescue on more than one occasion when he was in need of ready money. Now Princess May was devoted to her father and when she noted the somewhat arrogant manner of the Prince of Wales toward him she felt bitterly resentful, and rebelled against the straightened circumstances that she supposed to lie at the bottom of the family difficulties. However, though she did not know it at the time, she had found a friend and protector in the most powerful person in England. Queen Victoria, who had planned the marriage of her father and mother and quite early decided that Princess May should become the wife of one of her grandchildren. Out of the many marriages planned by the Queen, this undoubtedly was the happiest and most successful.

"You sold me two bottles of stuff to make my hair grow," he said.

NEW INTEREST IN FIELD PEAS

Thirty or forty years ago an Ontario farmer grew annually about half a million acres of field peas, but when the wevil became troublesome, interest in the crop gradually waned until there was less than 100,000 acres grown. However, during the past few years peas have been comparatively free from insect pests and the acreage has been increasing a little every year. Renewed interest has been obtained also by the development at the Ontario Agricultural College of an outstanding variety known as O. A. C. 181, which is now being distributed through the Experimental Union. This variety is a cross between Prussian Blue and White Wonder and is a fairly early ripening pea. Under a ten-year test at O. A. C. it has yielded about 25 per cent. greater returns than most common varieties. Several farmers in the Guelph district have reported excellent crops with this variety.

THE BEAN MARKET

The Ontario crop will be little larger than last year. A decrease in the average yield per acre will almost offset the great increase in acreage. The American crop of small white beans has been estimated about two per cent. larger than last year. The European production is about normal in contrast to 1929, when the crop was very short. The hold over in the the United States, Canada and Europe was very small, consequently new beans are meeting a ready sale. Quotations on imported European beans which compete with Ontario-grown of good quality, have gone up during recent weeks, the November 1st price being $3.75 a bushel f.o.b. Montreal.

LONGER LIGHT PAYS

For several years past poultry-breeders have been trying to discover whether the use of electric light in laying houses really does increase egg production among hens. The theory is that in prolonging daylight, the hens were entized to lay more eggs. Experiments over a period of five years at the Dominion Experimental Station with two pens, one supplied with the extra lighting facilities and the other without, show the following results:

Over the five-year period, the pen of 100 hens supplied with light produced on an average 3966 eggs at a cost of 20c per dozen without lights produced 3671 at a cost of 22c per dozen. This gives an advantage of about 300 eggs for the pen with lights and at a reduction in cost of 2c per dozen.

POULTRY BREEDING STATIONS

One important way in which the Poultry Department at O. A. C. is carrying its knowledge in a practical manner to the farmers of Ontario is by the establishment of poultry breeding stations for purposes of culling and general flock improvement. Last year there were approximately 50,000 hens on 160 farms which came under this plan, while this fall over 100,000 birds, representing 300 farms have been enrolled. The department has seven inspectors constantly on the road with a view to visiting each flock four times a year and culling undesirable specimens. Thousands of blood samples are taken and forwarded to the laboratories for testing, from which reports are sent back to the inspectors, who act upon them. A notable improvement in poultry standard has been achieved in this way.

The teacher was new and was calling register after the dinner hour. "Sarah Gunn?"

"Jeanie Thomson?"

There was no answer.

A very shy little girl stood up.

"Please yes, miss," she whispered. The shy little girl was sent off to bring the dallying scholar back with her and duly returned, but alone.

"Did you not find Jeanie Thomson?"

The shy little girl opened her mouth to speak, hesitated, and then with great difficulty managed to say, "Please I'm Jeanie Thomson."

ODESSA W. I.

The November meeting of our W. I. took the form of a Grandmother's Day, when we entertained the grandmothers of our district. Although the weather was not very fine there were sixty two guests and members present. 12 ladies joined as new members.

The committees in charge of the program had tastefully decorated the reading room of the library (where our meetings are usually held) in Hallowe'en colors, and it was indeed a bright and cheerful spot on a dull day. The tea table, with its snowy linen, silver and orange and black appointments, was a pretty feature.

Some of the members and guests brought heirlooms, relics of the earlier days—and a truly interesting display was made. Photographs, hand-tinted, in cases; candle lanterns, candle sticks and snuffers, a beautiful applique quilt, a china doll, which had been the idol of a child several decades ago, tended to show the difference between the dolls of then and the huge Ma-Ma doll, the child of today adores; a beautiful pearl inlaid ebony hinged top table was another of the collection, and several other interesting articles were to be seen.

Before the meeting formally opened, Miss Clarke took a snapshot of all the grandmothers present, then the meeting proceeded as usual, Mrs. Sproule, our worthy president, occupying the chair. After a hearty singing of the Ode and Lord's Prayer, Mrs. Sproule bade a welcome to our guests and extending an invitation to everyone to attend our meetings whether a member or not. A sing song "The more we are together the happier we'll be," followed this. Mrs. Ashton Amey, the oldest grandmother present gave a humorous recitation, "The Murder," which she said from memory in a very creditable manner. She wore a lovely old costume, which was very quaint. Mrs. Nelson Smith, one of the younger grandmothers sang "When you and I were young Maggie," while everyone joined in the chorus. Mrs. Fred Vrooman read a humorous poem "Grandma's Advice to the Bride-to-be," which was full of good sense as well as wit. Mrs. Clarke Boyce presented a demonstration of a modern wedding gown and one of sixty years ago. These gowns were displayed by Mrs. Walter J. Snyder and Mrs. Roy Somerville. The older one was a very elaborate one of plum colored taffeta, with long train, featuring tiny scallops, very small waist and yards of silk fringe, while the modern one was simply made of ivory crepe with silver trimmings and pearl and ostrich ornament.

Mrs. George Alton rendered a solo, which served still more to show how times have changed.

Each guest and member had been requested to bring her earliest photograph, which were numbered and used in a contest, when everyone guessed who they were. Mrs. Courtland Snyder was the winner, guessing ninety per cent. correctly and received a china bon bon dish as a prize.

Mrs. Ashton Amey was remembered for being the oldest grandmother present and was presented with a china cream and sugar set.

Mrs. Meaford Montgomery was the youngest grandmother attending and was the recipient of a china Mayonnaise set, while Mrs. Thos. Graham received the prize, a china spoon tray, for having the honor of having the most grandchildren.

Mrs. Geo. Lucas, Sr., the oldest lady present and known to the whole community and lovingly named "Grandma Lucas," and who is ninety-four years old, was also remembered with a small prize, a bon bon dish. Mrs. Haggerty, our new librarian, a late member of Croydon W. I., was made a complimentary member of our Institute for the remainder of the year.

After awarding the prizes, Grace was sure and everyone enjoyed a delicious afternoon tea, served by the committee in charge—Mrs. J. C. Parrott, Mrs. Shelly Denyes, Mrs. Courtland Snyder, Mrs. Nelson Smith and Mrs. Stanley Sproule. A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Amey and seconded by Mrs. Allan for the interesting afternoon provided by the W. I., which brought the meeting to a close. The next meeting will be on the first Wednesday in December, when the roll call will be "An inexpensive Christmas gift, demonstrated" and our delegate to the district convention will give her report.

OBITUARY

Mr. Frank Murphy

Unexpectedly, and with great suddenness, the angel of death came to Robert E. Howe, 2nd Con. Tyendinaga. In the morning of October 29th, while calling at the home of Mr. Frank Murphy, he suffered a severe stroke from which he never rallied, but passed away a few hours later, at his late home near Marysville.

Deceased was born in Roslin, on Jan. 1st, 1876, residing there for several years. He married Miss Maynes, who predeceased him by many years, leaving a son, Murney, and daughter, Helen. Later he married Miss Nettie Russell, daughter of Mrs. Russell and the late John Russell, who, with their little daughter, Ruth, and Murney and Helen also a sister, Mrs. Carter, of Thomasburg, survive.

Mr. Howe was a thoughtful neighbor, having the welfare of the community at heart. He was a consistent member of Empey Hill United Church. On Monday, October 28th at 1.30 p.m., his pastor, Rev. H. Foley, conducted the funeral services, after which the body was laid to rest in Riverview Cemetery, Napanee. Members of L.O.L., of Thomasburgh, Selby, Moira and Ebenezer conducted their service at the grave side.

Numerous and beautiful were the floral tributes, and the attendance at the funeral very large, both of which testified to the esteem and sympathy of a large circle of friends, for the bereaved family.

AMERICAN TROUPER STIRS ALL ENGLAND

Mr. Philip Drew is one American who, when he returns to the United States, should be in a position to contradict the rumor that the English are an unemotional and somewhat inarticulate people. For Mr. Drew has had in the venerable city of Reading the most extraordinary reception that any American, he supposes, ever had in England. The almost frantic display of affection and good-will which was showered on Mr. Drew followed the verdict in one of the most remarkable coroner's inquests of modern times. Mr. Drew, in fact, was suspected of murder, and when the jury reported that the evidence was too conflicting to permit it to name anyone as responsible for the death of a Reading tobacconist named Oliver, the whole town gave such evidences of rejoicing as were seen in Toronto on the night that Mafeking was relieved and perhaps hardly since, unless it might have been on the day that the armistice was prematurely announced.

Town All for Drew

The streets outside the town hall in which the jury was deliberating had been packed for hours and when the first man to hear the news from inside shouted "Murderer unknown!" Murderer unknown!" there was a terrific outburst of shouting, cheering and even playing and weeping. Inside the court as the jury retired a woman slipped to her knees and was seen to be praying. When Drew appeared he was almost mobbed, and Mr. and Mrs. Lindo, his supporters throughout the trial, were also hugged and kissed and clapped on the back until they were almost deafened. The crowd swept them along to Drew's hotel, and in response to the clamor of the multitude he had a few words from a balcony. "Just one moment please," said Mr. Drew, before you go to your several homes, I want you to know just how much I appreciate this wonderful demonstration, the prayers that have been sent up for me. The One above, like myself, knows that I had nothing to do with it. I shall never forget the demonstration and from the bottom of my heart and on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Lindo and all those who have been so kind to me, I thank you again and again. Good afternoon and God bless you all."

Identified as Murderer

It appears that Mr. Oliver, the keeper of a little tobacco shop was found dead behind his counter some time between 5:30 and 6:00 on Saturday, June 22. The time was fixed because at the coroner's inquest his wife saw him alive and at the latter the body, terribly battered, was found by a youth named George Charles Jeffries, who entered the place to buy some cigarettes. But Jeffries, who came in for a severe reprimand from the coroner, came to immediate notice later as the other woman saw a man run out of the shop. She was unable to identify the person. Two other witnesses swore positively that they had seen Drew in the immediate vicinity within five or ten minutes after the murder had been committed.

Was Clad Alibi

Drew was a stranger in the city, but the fact that he was actor who played the detective in a thriller called "The Accuser" had enabled many people to breathe freely. Another feature that if he had been less conspicuously employed. No doubt, the coincidence that he was taking part in a sensational play at the time he became involved in a sensation in real life increased the general interest in the case. For the defence there were witnesses just as competent as those who identified Drew to swear that at the time of the murder he was in the theatre and could not possibly have been involved. Two of them said he was in the theatre before six o'clock and from then until 6:20 there were other witnesses who could account for his every movement. The theory that perhaps they instinctively stood by one of their own profession, was advanced, of course, but it was impossible to shake their positive statement. It was equally impossible to shake the statements of those who identified him as being on the scene of the crime.

Direct Evidence not Conclusive

Perhaps the most interesting feature of all was the attitude of the people of Reading. Instead of being rather suspicious of a stranger, they adopted Drew as their hero. There was never a moment when this middle-aged trouper did not have the enthusiastic backing of public sentiment. As he went to and from the town hall throughout the numerous sittings of the jury he was escorted by a mob, men patting him on the back, women throwing him kisses, and children thrusting small gifts into his hands. Outside Reading all England read the story, for murder mysteries in England, we are glad to say, are comparatively rare, and certainly it is a long time since there has been such an inquest as this. Drew's future, dubious enough at the time of the crime, is now assured. He might remain in Reading and become lord mayor, we have no doubt. Another interesting fact brought to light is that direct evidence is often the least satisfactory. Here were reputable people who swore that they saw Drew on the scene. Here were people of equal repute, who provided him with an alibi. The coroner seemed somewhat suspicious and the jury debated for some hours. On the whole we think that Mr. Drew, however unfortunate his position, has been rather lucky.

BUY CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES

Certified seed will do more, perhaps, than any other single factor to improve the potato crop on the average farm. Certified seed will likely be scarce and expensive next spring, and therefore the wise farmer will arrange for his supply now. R. D. Nodwell, of Hillsburgh, one of the best known producers of quality potatoes, when acting as field man for Crops and Market Branch during the past summer, had an excellent opportunity of observing many differences in the potato crops. He says: "My eyes were opened to the serious state of the potato business on the ordinary farm. I was amazed at the amount of black leg and rhizoctonia in the average field. In many cases the loss from these two diseases alone would run from 10 to 25 percent." This meant to many farmers this year a loss of from $10 to $40 per acre. Certified seed not only reduces the disease loss but increases the yield and quality. No farmer can afford to use poor seed.

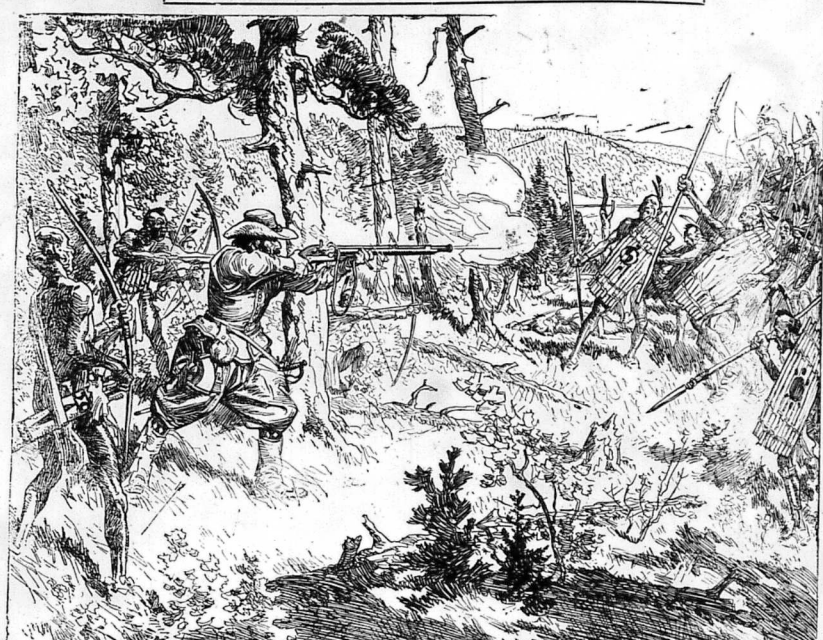
Champlain's Fight with the Iroquois in 1609



It was Champlain's great desire to explore the country whence came the great river on whose banks he had planted the settlement of Quebec, and to search for a passage which would lead to the Western Sea. No one dreamed then of the many miles that stretched between the shores they had discovered and the distant Pacific Ocean. The great Lakes and rivers, the broad prairies, the enormous mountains, all were unknown, and only slowly, through long years and by the toilsome journeys of many explorers was the way found. Champlain had to make friends of the Algonquin and Huron Indians around him, so that they would guide him into unknown land, and allow him to make settlements and build trading posts among them. To gain their good-will he had to promise to help them in their war with the Iroquois south of the lakes, who were their deadly enemies. So in the summer of 1609, the next after the founding of Quebec, Champlain joined a party of his Indian allies on a raid into the Iroquois country. They travelled up the St. Lawrence and the river Richelieu to the lake which is now called by his name. Here they met their enemies. Both parties landed on the western shore and prepared for battle. The Iroquois sheltered themselves behind a rude stockade of tree trunks, from which they came out to attack Champlain's Indians. He, with two other Frenchmen, had hidden themselves in the woods, so as to surprise the Iroquois by their sudden appearance. Led by three chiefs, decked with tall plumes, on either sides. Champlain stepped forward in sight of the Iroquois, who ceased firing in their astonishment. Taking careful aim at one of the chiefs, he fired his arquebus, which he tells us he had loaded with four bullets, while at the same time his two companions fired from the woods. Two of the chiefs fell dead and a third wounded. The Iroquois, who had never seen a white man, and knew nothing of fire-arms, became panic-stricken and fled. It was an easy victory, but the attacks drew upon the French the hatred of the Iroquois, and for more than a hundred years the settlers of Canada suffered all the horrors of savage warfare for this alliance of Champlain with the Northern Indians. The picture shows Champlain dressed in the costume of a musketeer of the early seventeenth century. Sometimes light steel armor, such as breastplates and thighpieces, was worn; but probably Champlain, travelling in summer and by canoe in the wilderness, wore only a sleeveless outer coat of thick buff-colored leather, an under coat or shirt with sleeves, loose cloth knee-breeches, buckskin leggings and moccasins, and a broad-brimmed hat. His heavy and clumsy weapon is an arquebus, an early form of gun, with a long cord of rope or tow, the lighted end of which was brought into contact with the powder at the breech by pulling a spring trigger. A bag of bullets and two powder flasks hang from his belt. These early fire-arms were slow and cumbrous in their action; they took several minutes to prime, load and fire, and the kick was so heavy that sometimes it dislocated the shoulder or collar-bone of the shooter. Compared with them the Indians' bows and arrows were quick-firing weapons. At first the Indians were surprised and panic-stricken by the noise, the smoke and flame, and the penetrating power of the white man's weapons; but they soon realized the superior efficiency of their own arms, and from the shelter of the forest, in many a surprise attack, they were able to gain any decided advantage over the Indians in bush fighting. It may not be generally known that the Indians wore armor; but Champlain and the early writers frequently refer to their shields of wood, or, in the West, of buffalo hide and speak of their chest and leg protectors, made of sticks woven together with rotten fibre, rushes or sinews. In the picture, some of the Indians carry wooden shields decorated with their totems and wear body-pieces made of bark or wicker.

SPIDER'S THREAD IS USED IN SURVEYING

In the construction of surveyors' instruments, utilized for the purpose of surveying and mapping our country, use is made of a number of different materials. The most novel of these, perhaps, is the thread of the spider, which is placed in the optical system of the telescope as an aid in sighting upon definite objects.

The spider thread is stretched across a metal diaphragm or ring, the arrangement of the strands depending upon the particular purposes to be served. With the ring, spider thread is supplied by instrument makers and is often carried in this manner as a spare part by the surveyor in the field.

Occasionally, however, the surveyor may be under the necessity of replacing a broken strand of spider thread in his istrument from one obtained directly from a spider itself. A spider is caught and induced to spin a strand or two which is made to adhere to the metal ring. The strand should be a single one, free from dust, and slightly stretched so as not to sag when in the ring. The manner in which the spider is induced to spin its thread and the methods used by the surveyor to affix the strand to its containing diaphragm are extremely interesting. The operation is always a delicate one, requiring much skill on the part of the operator and a very fine sense of touch in handling. Secreted in the body of the spider is a fluid, which crystalizes upon exposure to the air. This hardened fluid constitutes the thread. Sufficient fluid for the spinning of a surprising length of thread—stronger than the same thickness of silk—is contained within the body of the spider.

At the Physical Testing Laboratory of the Topographical Survey of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, many yards of spider thread are used during theyear in the overhauling of the Government's survey equipment. In the early fall an instrument maker visits the green-houses at the Central Experimental Farm and returns with five or six spiders of medium size and of a mottled grey color. One at a time these spiders are made to run about on a wooden stick until their web has adhered to the stick. The stick is then gently tapped until the spider falls, spinning a strand from the stick as he does so. This thread, which is under the tension of the spider's own weight, is wound on wire forks which have been given a light coat of shellac to hold the strands in place. These forks are then stored away until thread is required.

EARLY FOREST FIRE PATROLS

The Forest Service of the Department of the Interior has found that, by use of aircraft equipped for winter flying, it is now possible to commence the patrol of forest areas in Manitoba and Saskatchewan in March instead of late May, as formerly. In this way fires started by trappers, prospectors, and others during the winter months are detected and reported, and means taken for their suppression before they attain serious proportions.

NEW CALENDAR NOW DESIGNED

A new calendar with 72 weeks in the year, six weeks in the month and only five days in the week, has been drawn up here. It is designed to fit the non-stop, round-the-clock, five-day work week recently instituted in Russian industry. The Academy of Science has gone over the projected calendar and approved it. It has now been referred for further study to the Council of People's Commissaries, which corresponds to the ministerial councils in other countries of Europe.

Saturdays and Sundays are simply done away with in the new calendar. There will be thirty days each month and each day of the week will always fall upon the same days in each month. A bit of calculation reveals that this fixed calendar calls for only 360 days in the year. This does not agree with the sun on its course, for old Sol insists upon taking 365¼ days for his annual round. The fraction being enough to make an extra day every fourth year, calling February 29 in western calendars and making Leap year, the delight of spinsters.

It simply decreed that these extra five days each year and the added 24 hours of leap year should be celebrated as holidays.

These days are off in a category by themselves. They belong to no one month and are scattered through the calendar. The day devoted to the memory of Lenin, who is venerated as father of the proletarian revolution, is first on the list. It is fixed to come at the end of January, or rather, right after that month. In between January 30 and February 1 Lenin will be revered for 24 hours, but the event will not be allowed to disturb the arrangement making January 30 fall on Friday and February 1 on Monday, the next official day.

Similarly there will be holidays between May 1st and May 2 and between November 7 and November 8. It is pointed out that this arrangement will always make May 1 the 121st. day of the year, which it happens to be in the present calendar. In Leap Years the extra day will come as usual at the tail end of February, meaning that there will be an extra 24 hours every fourth year between February 29 and March 1.

BIG VALUE IN FERTILIZER

Commercial fertilizer when applied to various crops in conjunction with good farming methods give big returns. Phosphates increase yields of almost all crops on almost all types of soil in the province. Potash pays, especially on the sandy soils. Nitrogen for most farm crops should, as far as possible, be obtained for growing legumes.

CROP YIELD AVERAGE

The estimated yield of fall wheat, spring wheat, oats, barley, rye and peas in Ontario for the year is given at 114,140,939 bushels as compared with 133,377,224 bushels last year. The total acreage in Ontario for these grains was 367,881 acres less than last year. Oats are lower by 19,500,000 bushels than last year. The potato crop was below normal and turnips and mangels, due to a continuous drought are smaller in size than usual. Small fruits proved to be a light crop, but winter apples are plentiful although small in size. The tobacco average was 30 per cent below 1928. Taken all in all, the crop yield is an average one, and the quality good.

GRADING IS VITAL

The fact that more than 180,000 acres of potatoes are grown in Ontario every year, it is highly important that an efficient marketing system be perfected. This means that every grower should co-operate in properly grading his potatoes and in placing them on the market in a suitable container. Only in this way can the competition of the outside product be met.

WEED ADVISERS

It is the opinion of the provincial weed inspector that when councils are selecting inspectors they should choose "weed advisers" rather than "policemen." Excellent progress has been made this year and it was found that this was most pronounced where a man was chosen as inspector, who was enthusiastic about weed control and could advise farmers how to reduce their weed menace. Much better to encourage a man to properly prepare a field than to come along late in the season and order the crop cut because of weed infestation.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Ned Kelly, the iron-clad bushranger, whose skeleton has just been disinterred, is the subject of innumerable legends, but there is an uncanny story concerning the close of his career which is perfectly authentic (asserts a correspondent). Sir Redmond Barry the judge who presided at his trial, concluded the death sentence with the customary formula. "And may the Lord have mercy on your soul," whereupon Kelly immediately retorted, "And on yours, too, for you will follow me." The unexpected comment and prophecy so completely upset the judge that he left the bench visibly affected. Next day he took to his bed, and five days after the execution of Kelly the prediction from the dock was fulfilled: —Manchester Guardian.

Cheapest of All Oils.—" Considering the qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil it is the cheapest of all preparations offered to the public. So, being easily procurable and extremely moderate in price, no one should be without a bottle of it.

There are many stories in Dame Clara Butt's life story, just published, but the best thing of all, in my estimation is contained in a letter to her from the one and only George Bernard Shaw.

It appears that the famous singer, who in private life is Mrs. Kennerly Rumford, had asked him to write a foreword to the book.

"Good gracious, I'd never dare!" was his characteristic reply. "And anyway, what could I say?

"Witnessed her debut as Orfeo. Loved her. Would have married her if she'd asked me. She didn't. Might actually have chosen Bernard Shaw, and chose a Mr. Rumford instead! What a woman!

Cools and relieves all skins flushed or irritated by weather conditions. Magical in results. A little gentle rubbing and a youthful freshness and daintiness is instantly created. Invaluable for softening the hands and making them flawless white. Truly the perfect toilet requisite for the woman who cares.

Among many good stories of the studio told by Miss Betty Balfour, the famous film star, is one concerning a youthful movie actress who, in a certain scene that was being rehearsed prior to being "shot," was supposed to be fiercely resisting an attempt on the part of the villian to kiss her.

The rehearsal however, was far from satisfactory, so far as she was concerned, and at length the producer lost patience.

"Come, my dear," he exclaimed, "do please put some life into it. Think, now; haven't you ever tried to stop a man from kissing you?"

Spare the children from suffering from worms by using Miller's Worm Powders, a most effective vermifuge wihi which to combat these insidious foes of the young and helpless. It is an excellent worm destroyer and when its qualities become known in a household no other will be used. The medicine acts by itself, requiring no purgative to assist it and so thoroughly that nothing more is desired.

There is a story of the late Earl of Roseberry which gains peculiar significance through his death. One night, at dinner he was observed in deep conversation with his partner, paying no attention to any other member of the company. In the smoking-room his host rallied him upon his undivided attention to the lady in question, suggesting that they must have found a topic of absorbing interest. "We did, indeed," replied Lord Roseberry, "we were considering what it must feel like to be dead."

Attacked by Asthma.—The first fearful sensation is of suffocation, which hour by hour becomes more desperate and hopeless. To such a case the relief afforded by Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remeedy seems nothing less than miraculous. Its help is quickly apparetnt and soon the dreadful attack is mastered. The asthmatic who has found out the dependability of this sterling remedy will never be without it. It is sold everywhere.

The short skirt is making changes everywhere. Out in Indiana several churches have decided to place curtains around the lower part of their choir lofts in an effort to put over the idea that knees should be looked upon chiefly as adjuncts to prayer.

Wise mothers who know the virtues of Mother Graves's Worm Exterminator always have it at hand, because it proves its value.

Is your daughter enjoying life?

IT is just in her "teen age" that a girl should be getting the most fun out of life!—Yet so often it happens that girls of sixteen - to - twenty have outgrown their strength —are quickly tired, pale, nervous, generally run-down and unhappy!

These are sure signs of anaemia, a condition that results from thin, worm-out, under-nourished blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have corrected this in thousands of girls. Here is the actual experience of Mrs. Ben Nicholas of Ernea, Ont.

"My daughter was in a run-down state. She was easily tired and did not wish to associate with others. As this was unnatural, I began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they soon made a strong healthy girl of her. Now she is happy a girl as one would wish to see."

Start your daughter on this proven treatment now by buying Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your druggist's or any dealer in medicine or by mail, 50 cents, postpaid, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. S-25

PLAY A SUCCESS

On Thursday evening, November 7th, Grace Church Sunday School Room was filled to capacity, the attraction being a play, "Mary Made Some Marmalade," presented by the young people under the auspices of the Mission Circle. Each character in the play was particularly well chosen, and played his or her part in a very creditable manner. Special mention must be made of the splendid portrayal of "Mother" and "Father" around whom the whole story of the play centred. These difficult roles were ably presented by Miss Lois Stalker, and Fred Knapp.—Elsie Root and Wilfred Smith; Gerton Gibson and Vera Bernard, Ward Sexsmith and Helen Joyce were all very attractive in their dramatic roles; while the comedy parts, presented by Marion Thompson and Roland Stalker, Marjorie Thompson and Mr. J. W. Thompson, were most amusing and well played. — Miss E. Vanalstine is to be complimented on her splendid training of the cast. The evening was a wonderful success and a substantial sum realized for the Mission Circle. Black's orchestra provided some fine musical numbers throughout the evening.

MUSICAL COMEDY TO BE PRODUCED HERE

The Frontenac Regiment officially makes the announcement that their activity for the coming season will be directed chiefly toward the production of a big Musical Comedy which will be seen at the Armouries on December 5th and 6th. The cast will be made up of more than one hundred of the town's most talented people. The Frontenac Regiment has been fortunate enough to book the latest offering of the well known John B. Rogers Producing Co., an ultra-modern musical play, showing under the name of "That's That!" "That's That!" is bright, brand new, up-to-date in every particular, and is to be the Rogers feature for 1930. The costumes and scenic effects are reported to be extravagantly elaborate, and the musical score, written by one of the best known modern composers, Charles Gilpin, who for several years composed the music for the University of Pennsylvania's Masque and Wig Shows, is of the nature that raises it high above the plane of the usual offering of this kind. Lieutenant Grant L. Paul has been named to act in the capacity of general production manager, and on the general committee are Major H. L. Babcock and Mrs. Catherine Powell.

—In the concentration of the Canadian legion colors at Napanee, Sunday, Canon Major A. Creegan used the same cassock, gown and stole that he wore when he consecrated the colors of the 16th Overseas Battalion in Belgium and the 13th and 14th in Germany. In giving an address at the later, Prince Arthur of Connaught stated that it was the first time in history that a victorious army had received, and had their colors consecrated on the soil of a foreign foe.

—Here is an illustration of the advantages of exhibiting cattle at County Fair. Mr. John Craven of Bath, Ont., never exhibited cattle at Napanee Fair before, but this year Mr. Craven exhibited one Holstein cow winning $45.50 in prizes, and the fact of his winning first prize in the Dairy Test gave him the Holstein Friesben Cup for the best cow to be sent to the Holstein Friesben Association, Brantford. The cup in turn gave his name to an American buyer from Massachusetts, who paid Mr. Craven $500 for the cow and also purchased two other cows at $250 each.

OBITUARY

Franklin Byard Allison

There passed away suddenly on Saturday evening one of our well-known and respected citizens, Frank Allison.

Mr. Allison had lived in Napanee for many years and had been in the employ of the Canadian National Railway and for ten years as the express company's agent at Napanee. He is survived by his widow and his aged father and mother.

Mr. Allison took a deep interest in fraternal organizations and was very regular in his attendance at Napanee Lodge, No. 86 I.O.O.F. He also belonged to Union Lodge No. 9 A.F. & A.M.; Mount Sinai Chapter, R.A.M., No. 44, King Baldwin's Preceptory, Knights Templar, No. 9, and Shalmeses Shrine.

The funeral was conducted by Union Lodge No. 9, A.F. & A.M. and the large attendance of citizens and railway men was evidence of the esteem in which the late Mr. Allison was held.

VIOLET W. I.

The Violet Women's Institute held a very successful Bazaar and Tea in the institute room at Mrs. E. A. Wright's, on Wednesday, October 23rd. The sum of $59.60 was taken in from the different booths which were in charge of each following: Home cooking—Mrs. Ross Hogle and Mrs. Wm. Sagar. Candy—Miss Mona Hagerman and Ruth McCormick. Fancy Work—Mrs. Wright, Mrs. J. N. McCormick. Touch and Take Table—Mrs. J. Robinson and Mrs. Ford Scouten. Tea Room—Mrs. Hannah, Mrs. Kellar, Mrs. H. Smith and Miss E. McMillan.

Tickets were sold for lucky numbers on teapot, bridge set, table runner and cup and tray. At the close of the sale little Leita Kellar in her cute manner drew the following names: Mrs. Lakins, Mrs. Hannah, Mrs. J. McCormick, Mrs. Wm. Sagar.

Several members acted as auctioneers and disposed of the remaining articles to the highest bidder.

We extend a vote of thanks to all those, who so kindly donated, and to Mrs. Wright for her untiring efforts to make the day a success.

SILLSVILLE-HAWLEY-W. M. S.

The Sillsville-Hawley W. M. S. met at the home of Mrs. Bruce Robertson on Thursday afternoon, November 7th.

Opening hymn 4 was sung, followed by sentence prayers by the members. Mrs. Wm. Hill read the Scripture lesson, Luke 12th chapter, beginning with the 22nd verse. Mrs. Parks gave an address, "Nevertheless I must walk today and tomorrow." A duet by Mrs. Parks and Mrs. Will Pretts, "Building for eternity, we are building day by day," which was beautifully rendered. Mrs. Isaac Asselstine then gave a talk on "Our immediate duties." The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Mr. and Mrs. Plant then favored us with a duet, followed by responsive reading. Mrs. Harold Hough then read from the studybook "Missionaries and the progress made in Africa. Mrs. Hough's reading is always very interesting. Mrs. Plant gave a reading on, "Who is my neighbor." The meeting was closed with prayer by Mr. Plant, after which a delicious lunch was served by the hostesses. We were delighted to have the Hawley ladies with us and hope to meet together again some time.

BASKETBALL

N. C. I. Junior and Senior girls' basketball teams drove one more spike into their steady drive for the league championship when, on Friday evening in Belleville, they defeated the well balanced Belleville Collegiate aggregation in both games. The Seniors emerged victorious over the Belleville Seniors, to the score of 45-15.

N.C.I. as usual were never headed and proved their superiority over Belleville exactly as the score indicated. The Seniors took the floor and at the end of the first period they had the substantial lead of 9 points, which proved sufficient to win the game. The Juniors followed that example for at the end of their first period they led Belleville 16-6. In neither game did B. C. I. overtake the girls.

N.C.I. played a fast combination which resulted in the overwhelming scores. Their passing was faultless and the speed and accuracy of the forward line was impressive.

With the winning of these two games Napanee have established an enviable record of eight wins and no defeats. No team from any other school has defeated them. Picton seem to be their closest rivals as Picton Juniors made close bid for the Junior game played in Napanee. N.C.I. play their next game in Picton this Friday evening. A win for each team will practically mean the championship. As Picton have been defeated here and in Belleville, by the Belleville Juniors, they do not rank as high as N.C.I.

The teams:

Belleville Seniors—Forward, Lenore Stafford, Grace Arnott; S. Centre, Gladys Urch; J. Centre, Veronica Gray; Guards, Jean Fairbairn, Edna Baker; Sub., B. Davidson.

Napanee Juniors—Forwards, Kay McFarland, Margaret Walters; S. Centre, Lois Stalker; J. Centre, Marion Exley; Guards, Jean Graham, Mabel Jackson; Subs., Marion Thompson, Edna Thompson.

Belleville Juniors—Forwards, Annie Crul, Bertha Gilbert; S. Centre, Marion Fairbairn; J. Centre, Julia McNab; Guards, Sally Stillmad, Helen Doyle.

LENNOX BOY IS NEW EXECUTIVE HEAD

Fred A. Newman, of Picton, elected President of The Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, at the Royal York hotel, Toronto, last week ex-Mayor Fred Newman, of Picton, was elected president of the provincial association.

This is more important as the Dominion Association meets in Toronto next year.

Mr. Newman spent the first 24 years of his life in Lennox and Addington. He served for a few years as agent of the B. Q. Ry. at Larkin, Mazenod and Marlbank. After moving to Picton he opened a branch grocery store in Napanee under the name of Newman-Livingstone Co. About 14 years ago he sold out his interest in the retail stores to open a wholesale grocery business in Picton, which business he is still conducting successfully.

Mr. Newman served Picton seven years as Mayor and besides several local positions held by him. He is also Vice President of the Ontario Hydro Electric Association and a director of the International Waterways Association.

At the Provincial election three years ago, Mr. Newman left the Conservative party and worked for the retention of the O.T.A. This year he supported the LCA., with its proposed amendments and was the chief speaker in the Conservative meeting in the Armouries at Napanee and Picton, with the Hon. Premier Ferguson.

It may or may not have been a mere coincidence that for several elections both Prime Edward and Lennox has elected the candidate supported by Mr. Newman.

HOCKEY NEWS

The Napanee Hockey Club took a step in the right direction last Thursday night at their annual meeting when they entered a team in the Junior series of the Ontario Hockey Association. Our town has never before been represented in this Provincial wide Association, but from the interest already shown by the teen age boys of our town and by many of the grown up townspeople, too, it looks as though we were in for a real seasons hockey.

Although the weather was far from pleasant a fair crowd was in attendance and the feeling was strong that the boys have several promising youngsters in town who have been playing town league hockey for the past few years and should form a strong and fast team.

The following are the names of those elected to the Executive of the Hockey Club

Honorary President—Mr. John G. Daly.

President—Mr. P. C. Killorin.

Honorary Vice President—Mr. John McPherson.

Vice President—Mr. Wm. Gault.

Treasurer—Mr. Harry Skitch.

Secretary—Laurie Douglas.

Manager—Harry Roe.

Coach—Ed. Watts.

Trainers—Messrs. Waitson and Ford.

Executive Committee—Messrs. C. N. Loucks, Jas. Naphin, Ernest Gibbard, C. Shoemaker, Jas. Whitton, Fred Bentley and Thos. Kirby.

Financial Committee—Messrs. J. G. Daly, J. McPherson, E. J. Roy, W. J. Wiggins and M. P. Graham

Manager Harry Roe, Coach Watts, and Trainers Waitson and Ford have already taken the boys in hand and expect to have them in perfect condition even before they have any ice to play on.

The boys from Deseronto are eligible to play for Napanee and from the wealth of material already turning out to the training periods in the Armouries, the management feel sure they can place a strong team on the ice.

Although it is not yet certain it is quite possible Napanee will be grouped with Trenton and Belleville.

Manager Roe has declared that only those in the pink of condition can hope to catch a place on the team. But from the way things look now Mr. Roe is going to have a hard time picking the best out of the host of material that are beginning to get in shape.

The parents of the boys wishing to try for a place on the team are asked to sign their boys in getting their earth certificates at an early date and hand them in to the Secretary. Any boy eligible to play Junior hockey must be under twenty-years of age on the first day of January, 1930.

Manager Roe requests not only the following boys but anyone else who wishes to try out for the team to report to him at the Armouries at 6.45 p.m.

Albert Hayes, Gilbert Howitt, Wm. Howitt, Wm. Bentley, Schyler Thompson, Roy Wilson, Ben Davy, Wm. Vandusen, Harry Moore, Eldon Edgar, Lucas, Dinty Green, Roy Conger, Ralph Vanalstine, Maurice Kinkley, Laurence VanLuven, Arthur VanLuven, Buffman, Ray Derry, Walter Hagerman, Arthur Prink, Lorn Whitney, Jas. The Canteen Thanksgiving Supper was a real success. There was plenty of good things to eat and the crowd was in a very efficient manner. The program was usually good given by the Empey Hill choir assisted by Mr. Jim Thompson, Mrs. Valkman and Mrs. Reid, Napanee.—Owing to the wet weather the paving of the River Road has been delayed. NAPANEE W. M. S.

The W. M. S., of Grace United Church, Napanee, held their Thanksgiving service in the Sunday school room of Grace Church. After the opening exercises, Mrs. Gerald Smith sang so feelingly, a solo, "I shall not pass this away again." Rev. A. Wilson, of St. Andrew's United Church then addressed the meeting giving to the audiences his impressions of Japan, Korea and China, as he received them this summer during his trip through the Orient.

It is not often the Auxiliary has the privilege of listening to so interesting and instructive an address. Long shall those who heard remember. Mr. Wilson's plea that they try to understand the people of the Orient as heretofore less favored perhaps, but nevertheless with the same degrees of working out their own destinies.

The economic conditions of these people were graphically described, making the hearers realize as never before the advantage of living in a country with Christianity the national religion and that no effort of theirs is too small or too great but that it will all be needed to bring even a small degree of their advantages to those less favored nations.

The meeting was closed by prayer. After which a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

CHECKING THE COMPASS

Since 1809, field officers of the Topographical Survey, Department of the Interior, in the course of their regular surveying and mapping operations, have made about 25,000 measurements of the direction of pointing of the magnetic compass needle. Such measurements are taken by the surveyor in a few minutes, at very little additional expense when he is already on the ground with the necessary instruments.

PRISONERS LACK POLICE ESCORT FOR TRAIN TRIP

"When is a prisoner not a prisoner?" was the question brought to mind on Friday when two men sentenced to terms in the Guelph Reformatory were put on the train at Napanee and started for Guelph without a guard of any description.

It all happened this way. The Sheriff of Napanee, was instructed to meet the C.N.R. International Limited Friday afternoon at Napanee and have his two prisoners ready to board the train, as Jailer Ryan, of Guelph, would be there to take them on. Owing to a wreck the night before, however, the train carrying Mr. Ryan, who started collecting prisoners at Cornwall, was an hour and a half late and a section of the train was made up at Brockville which went through Napanee on time. The Sheriff placed his men on the train, mistaking someone else for the jailer, and the train went on to Belleville with the prisoners.

Finding out his mistake soon after the train left, Belleville Police were notified, the message arriving at 2.45 p.m. The train was due to reach Belleville at 2.50 o'clock, so a fast run was made in the police car to the North station by Sergeant Marmon and Sergeant Truaisch, who arrived in time to meet the train, and took the men into custody again. They were detained for an hour and a half, when they were placed on the second section of the train, under the care of Mr. Ryan, who by that time had nine other prisoners under his care.

IS HOME SAFEST SHELTER?

Does the home offer the safest shelter against fatal accidents? According to a study which was made by the Statistical Bureau of the Metropolitan Life, stairs, open windows, slippery floors, chairs and beds make of the home the most dangerous place for the happening of fatal falls.

In 1928, over 60 per cent. of the fatal falls which occurred among women—in Canada and in the United States—happened in the home. Among men, the proportion was 33 per cent.

The street offers less danger than the home, so far as fatal falls are concerned, the proportion of deaths from such a cause being in 1928 eight per cent. among men and seven per cent. among women. In the case of fatal falls happening during athletic games or other sports, the proportion was only one percent.

Stairs are responsible for 33 per cent. of fatal falls happening in the home, and slippery floors for 13 per cent. Those are the two most important causes.

HERD IS INCREASING IN BUFFALO WOOD PARK

When in 1925 Honourable Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, announced that the great herd of buffalo in Buffalo national park had outgrown the grazing limits of the 200 square miles of range near Wainwright, Alberta, and that the surplus animals would be shipped north to Wood Buffalo park near Fort Smith, Northwest Territories, one of the chief aims behind the movement was that one day they would form a source of food supply for the natives to supplement that provided by the diminishing wild life in northern Canada. With the slaughter this autumn of twenty or more bulls, outcasts from the different herds, the first fruits of this foresighted policy will be realized. The flesh of these animals will be frozen and used for the relief of needy Indians and for the various missions and residential schools at nearby posts.

The buffalo in Wood Buffalo park are now estimated to number approximately 10,000 head. This total is made up of the herd of about 1,500 wood buffalo for which the reserve was originally set aside; the 6,672 animals shipped north from Wainwright during the four annual movements beginning in 1925; and the increase from these animals. The North West Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of Interior is charged with the administration of Wood Buffalo park, and during his recent inspectional tour through the Northwest and Yukon Territories, Mr. O. S. Finnie, Director, visited the great 17,300 square mile preserve. Reports he received indicated that the big herd was increasing rapidly, wardens having noted a high percentage of calves with the various bands.

The twenty or more bulls to be slaughtered in November are former heads of herds which have been cast out by younger and stronger bulls and are, therefore, left to roam the range alone. Ordinarily these animals would soon fall a prey to wolves or other predatory animals and their disposal as at present intended will aid in solving the problem of relieving the natives during time of stress. These animals will on average scale about one thousand pounds dressed, so that a considerable supply of fresh meat will be available for relief work during the coming winter.

CLEAN SPRAY OUTFITS

W. G. Evans, practical spraying expert in the Department of Botany, O.A.C., emphatically recommends that all spray outfits be cleaned up before being put away for the season if the best results are to be obtained next year. They should be carefully overhauled, the tank being filled with water to soften the spray residue and after a soak of several days, the machine should be started and the water forced through the pump and hose so that any collection of spray material will be carried away. As the water leaves the gun it should be used to wash down the exterior parts of the machine. After emptying the tank the drain plugs should be removed and the engine run for a few minutes. It is important also, to see that the different parts of the pump are protected by a coating of oil to prevent rust.

Children Almost Hate Cross, Nervous Mother

For 30 years doctors have prescribed Vinol because it contains important mineral elements of iron, calcium and cod liver peptone. The very FIRST bottle brings sound sleep and a BIG appetite. Nervous, worn-out people are surprised how QUICK Vinol gives new life and pep! Tastes delicious. At Wallace's Drug Store.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

WARM WATER A BENEFIT

Good feeders have long recognized the value of liberal quantities of water to all classes of live stock. Hogs do better and are more thrifty and cows undoubtedly give more milk when they are watered freely. Experimental station tests have established beyond a doubt the value of warm water for stock during winter weather. In an actual test with fall pigs, the use of automatic heated waterers saved $1 per pig in feed costs. A cow producing five gallons of milk a day will drink 20 gallons of water. If she is compelled to drink that much ice water, her energy is required to heat it to body temperature and her production suffers.

AN EXPENSIVE SECRET

As an example of the correspondence which reaches the Ontario Department of Agriculture, the following is of interest:

"Being so many cases of chicken stealing throughout the province set me thinking and I tumbled to an idea which I honestly believe would be in nearly every case a sure and final tracing and conviction of the ones who are doing such work.

"But it would need government assistance and control, also the co-operation of all poultry dealers or certain compulsory registration of all poultry handled.

"I am too busy to do anything to this myself, but rather than keep it secret (if it could be made a benefit to the province) I would make my plans or ideas known for $500."

"Mr. W. Dawson, managing editor of the Ontario Farmer, referred me to you. I await your reply with thanks."

Needless to say the Department is not paying large sums for "secrets" of this or other nature.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

An Irish priest offered sixpence to the boy who could tell him who was the greatest man in history.

"Christopher Columbus," answered one boy.

George Washington," answered another boy.

"St. Patrick," shouted a bright little Jewish boy.

"The sixpence is yours," said the priest; "but why did you say St. Patrick?"

"Right down in my heart I knew it was Moses," said the Jewish boy, "but busines is business."

Simple and Sure.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is so simple in application that a child can understand the instructions. Used as a liniment, the only direction is to rub, and when as a dressing to apply. The direction are so plain and unmistakable that they are readily understood by young and old.

In the smoke-room of a club two business men just past middle-age were adversely critizing the young men of today.

Said one: "Look how reluctant the young men are to marry and settle down."

"That's so," replied the other. "They seem to fear marriage. Why, before I was married I didn't know the meaning of fear!"

Persian Balm is the true family aid for skin health and beauty. Aids the mother in additional loveliness. Protects the tender skin of the child. Delights the father as a hair fixative or cooling after shave lotion. No matter to what use it is put, it is always beneficial to the skin. Every woman should use it. Persian Balm cools and caresses the skin and creates complexions of surpassing loveliness.

He was a good-tempered little man and very chatty, and it was unfortunate that he should have got into so dull a carriageful of passengers. He beamed upon them all and tried to start a conversation in two or three directions, but without success. Silence reigned; the interest in newspapers was intense. The snubbed one, too, sank into silence, but at the first stopping-place he got out, and before slamming the carriage door, witheringly remarked, "Waxworks, by gum!"

No Rest With Asthma. Asthma usually attacks at night, the one time when rest is needed most. Hence the loss of strength, the nervous debility, the loss of flesh and other evils which must be expected unless relief is secured. Fortunately relief is possible. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has proved its merits through years of service. A trial will surely convince you.

Chance had made two strangers partners in a golf competition. One was Colonel Thunder, red of face, wild of stroke. The other was a meek man, introduced simply as Dr. Pywell.

"Pardon me, doctor," exclaimed the colonel from the depths of his first bunker; "before I tackle this confounded lie, would you mind telling me if you're a D.D. or an M.D.?"

Miller's Worm Powders are complete in themselves. They not only drive worms from the system, but repair the damage that worms cause and so invigorate the constitution that it speedily recovers from the disorders of the digestion that are the result of the work of those parasitic intruders. They do their work thoroughly and strength and soundness follow their use.

Jim to Jack, who has already been asked the question ten times: "Who gave you that black eye?"

Jack: "No one. I was looking at a cricket match through a hole in the fence, and it got sunburnt!"

There was a young fellow named Pratt,
Who stopped near a mule for a chat;
When he woke up in bed,
A day later, he said:
"Well, I sure got a kick out of that."

Many people are almost crippled with corns. But it is needless suffering which can be speedily ended with Holloway's Corn Remover.

A Minister had been urging his congregation to give a hearty welcome to the stranger within the gates, not forgetting to maintain a proper interest in their own household.

After the service he went to the door as usual, and began to shake hands with the people passing out. He was interested in a well-dressed and intelligent-looking young woman, and greeted her heartily.

"I hope we may see you here often," he said. "We always have a warm welcome for new faces."

"Thank you," replied the girl, modestly.

"Now," went on the minister, "if you will give me your address, my wife and I will call on you one evening."

"You won't have far to go," she said. "I'm your cook!"

LIMBERS 'EM UP JOINT-EASE

It's for joint-troubles in fingers, ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, knuckles or spine—whether rheumatic or not.

It limbers them up, reduces the swelling, chases out the pain and inflamation—when Joint-Ease goes in agony goes out—no time wasted.

But lately thousands of people have discovered that it's also supremely good for quick relief in lumbago neuralgia and neuritis.

Made in Canada—Joint-Ease is a stain emollient that soaks in almost instantly. A tube 60 cents. All druggists sell lots of it.

DEATHS

IN MEMORIAM

In fond and loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Lewis Fox, who fell asleep in Jesus, November 16th, 1927. Tenderly remembered by daughters, Beulah and Irene. 47ap

IN MEMORIAM

A precious one from us is gone,
The voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home
That none can ever fill.
Mother and Father,
47ap Brothers and Sisters.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Claude Clancy, who passed away Nov. 22nd, 1928.
Out from the home so dear to him, he passed,
Out from a life of usefulness,
Out from the home his smile was wont to bless,
Into a land of never-fading day,
Where pain and sorrow never find their way.
When day was first begun the summons came,
The tired heart was stilled—
And hope's bright flame went out,
To shine for us no more below,
But it will be rekindled, this we know:
For love immortal cannot pass away,
And we shall find our own some day;
Somewhere dear hands shall clasp our own once more,
And those whom we have lowed in days of yore
Shall come to meet us in the morning land,
And there at last our souls shall understand.

By his loving Aunt Clema,

OBITUARY

Mrs. R. J. Delong

Who passed away at her home, West street, on Thursday morning, Nov. 7th, was the youngest daughter of the late Frederick (Squire) Olliver, and his wife, Sally Price Olliver. She was born on May the 4th, 1852, on the fine old farm four miles west of Napanee, which farm she inherited. On October 31st, 1877 she married Robert J. Delong, of Prince Edward County, and together they made a success of farming and tenderly cared for her mother, to the end of her ninety-two years. Twenty three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Delong decided to take life easier and sold their farm and moved into Napanee, where she retained the esteem of her old neighbors.

She was a loyal member of Trinity United Church, her father having helped to build the former church on the same ground. Mrs. Delong suffered a stroke on the morning of her husband's death, about nine months ago, and gradually failed till the end came.

She was the last of a family of five children, here brother and sisters having predeceased her years ago. Mr. Jas. H. Delong, of Arkney, Sask., an only son survives.

ERNESTTOWN W. I.

The Ernesttown Women's Institute held their regular meeting, November 14th, with a fair attendance. Roll call was answered by Foods containing vitamines A. B. C." Financial reports were given and minutes read and approved.

A committee was formed to find out what could be done re railway crossing above N. B. Ham's. This is a dangerous crossing as cars coming in opposite directions ar e unable to see each other until they get right on the track. A very excellent report was given by Mrs. W. Kellar, our delegate to Kingston Convention. An interesting paper on "Florence Nightingale," was given by Mrs. L. Aylsworth. "Current Events," by Mrs. H. Priest was much enjoyed by all. We were sorry that Dr. Lindsay was unable to give his address on "General Health." The national Anthem was sung. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. Our next meeting is December 12th, at the home of Mrs. S. Weese.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Huffman, Moscow, was the scene of a very happy event on Monday evening, November 11th, when about thirty of their relatives gathered to celebrate with them their tenth wedding anniversary.

With sounding horns, merry voices and gay laughter the party arrived and totally surprised the bride and groom.

However, ere long to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. Fred. L. Bell, sister of the bride, the bridal party entered the living room. The bride looked very sweet in her wedding dress and veil and was attended by her sister, Mrs. B. E. Flaglay, who wore her bridesmaid frock of ten years ago. Mr. Kenneth Huffman, Napanee, supported the groom, who wore his khaki uniform in memory of Armistice Day.

After congratulations, "Love's Old Sweet Song," was sung by Mr. Ward Wartman, and Mrs. Hurrel Huffman.

The bride then received the beautiful gifts which were presented by her friends. A delightful evening was spent in music and visiting. After refreshments were served the guests dispersed, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Huffman many happy years of wedded life.

SUBSTITUTE FEEDS

Certain by-products and miscellaneous feeds are now receiving increasing attention in reducing the cost of milk production. Pumpkins afford a good supplement for fall or early winter feeding but their nutritive value is not nearly as high as corn silage. It is safe to practice to feed cull potatoes to cows providing they are not fed too heavily. Apple pomace silage, the by-product of cider and vinegar manufacture is now being safely and profitably used by many dairymen.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION CONVENTION

The Convention of Religious Education for the County of Lennox and Addington was held in Tamworth on Thursday, November 7th, 1929.

The Sunday schools of the county were well represented. About one hundred and fifty delegates including five ministers and several superintendents were present. This year the program was given by our interested local Sunday School workers, aided by the pastors.

The morning session was opened at 9.30 by Rev. L. N. Beckstead. The president, Mr. E. Purcell, presided. After the appointment of committees and press reporter, the president gave a short but pithy address on the work of the S. S. Executive. Throughout the County the S. S. work is handicapped by lack of workers. We need consecrated men and women to spend their energies in S. S. effort. The departmental reports showed 931 children in attendance in our Sunday Schools and 894 adults. The Temperance Superintendent, Mr. Hudgins, reported systematic temperance instruction being given in most of the schools.

Mr. Vannest reported 20 schools giving missionary instruction and sending $799.51 to the missionary board, besides $90.00 for charitable purposes. Mrs. (Rev.) Anderson gave a very interesting outline of a day's doing at Girl's Camp, which was held last July at Varty Lake. This camp is a splendid place for a girl's outing and from the early rising bell until the last song at camp fire the girls were bound about by religious influence. Lack of attendance at the camp was thought to be because of time of year, so a more suitable time is to be planned.

Rev. Jas. Beckel, of Bay Circuit, conducted a Round Table Conference, where many pertinent questions were presented.

In the afternoon the program aimed to portray to the Convention the ideal Sunday School. This was ably done by those who took part. Mr. A. C. Baldwin opened the session as superintendent. Messrs. Carl and Clare Sexsmith assisted in reading the Scripture lesson and leading in prayer. Truly the school was brought into touch with God in that worship period. Our devotional service must prepare our hearts and minds for the teaching of the lesson.

Then followed the Primary teacher, Mrs. Stanley Bell, of Enterprise, who led us with undivided interest through the activities of a beginner's class. Our best teacher must be for the Infant Class and her first and greatest equipment must be her love for children. When children are promoted to a junior grade—make them a present of a Bible, as a suitable gift. Each child ought then be the proud possessor of a Bible.

Mrs. Thos. Wilson gave us a look into the Ideal adult class with its far reaching influence in the community. The adult department might be called a school of religion for adults and its purpose is to deepen, enrich and strengthen the religious life of its members. Every adult member of every congregation and every father and mother should be in the class. We can never outgrow Bible study. If each adult in each S. S. would assume responsibility for its own particular community life, we could do much to make it a better place for the development of our boys and girls.

Rev. H. W. Foley, of Selby, closed the Convention with the address, "Evangelism, the main purpose of the S. S." It is indeed a pitiful situation if our S. S. goes on year after year with none added, aim to win some one every year. It's not so much the method as long as the work is done.

The Resolution Commission brought forward the following which were accepted—that we express to the pastor, officials and people of Tamworth Church our thanks for—

The use of the church so comfortably prepared for us.

For the sumptuous repast which we all very much enjoyed.

We recommend that the Annual Convention have two sessions—morning and afternoon—and that it be held as late in the year as the Provincial Convention will permit.

That we urge that this country make plans to conduct a Temperance campaign in the Sunday Schools during fall and winter months—using either program sponsored by the Witness or our Religious Education Council—also that pledge signing be a regular feature of our S. S. work.

That we express our appreciation of the work of the county officers in conducting this convention without the help of a Prov-Sec., for we feel the experiment has proved very satisfactory.

HERE AND THERE

Some interesting extracts from the last reports of the agricultural representatives in the different counties are presented herewith:

Wellington—A total of $20,000 in cash was paid for geese at the Arthur Thanksgiving Fair. The price ranged from 21 to 25 cents per pound. We expect about 150 tons of chicken in fine crate-fed condition for the Christmas market. Some of this should bring 35c a pound.

Manitoulin—The subject of turkeys is now everywhere discussed. Where-as we used to think 16 and 17 pounds good weight for young gobblers, they now run 20 and 25 pounds. Local stores are offering 40c per pound for dressed turkey. The bulk of the crop, however, will be shipped alive.

Algoma—Good 2-year-old steers netted the farmers from $66 to $70 per head according to size. Lambs for 59 to $10.50 per head.

Brant—Small quantities of red clover being marketed at $8 per bushel cleaned.

Dundas—A great deal of ditching has been done and is being done. The dry weather this fall has been particularly adaptable for drainage work.

Durham—Some of our larger poultry farms are getting 60c and better per dozen for their eggs.

Kent—A decided drop in the number of cattle to be fed appears probable. Hay is a splendid crop, but barley and oats were light and the general feeling seems to be that it is rather speculative to feed cattle with present high prices of grain.

Lambton—Sugar beets are of a large size and more free from disease than they have been for the past two years.

"Yes," said one man to another, "motoring is a great thing. I used to be sluggish before the motoring craze, but now, I'm spry and energetic."

"I didn't know you motored."

"I don't—I dodge."

Contemporary says a statitician is a man who comes to the rescue of figures that can't lie for themselves.

The horseshoes that were laid aside when the Ford replaced Old Dobbin are being resurrected all over the country, for horseshoe pitching is spreading like an epidemic. Widespread interest is already being exhibited in the contests that will be staged in connection with the Royal Winter Fair.

Champlain on the Ottawa River

In 1613 Champlain made a journey up the Ottawa River, at that time unknown to the white man. Like all early explorers, Champlain hoped that it led to the sea—that sea which stretched to the Far East of Asia. The year before there had come to his ears a strange tale that seemed to encourage the Algonquins on the upper Ottawa to learn their language and explore their country. He returned with a story that he had seen the North Sea, on the shores of which he had found the wreck of an English ship, whose crew had been killed by the Indians, all except a boy who was still living among them. The story seemed probable. It was known that Henry Hudson had made a voyage to the Northern Seas two years before, and that since then no word had been heard of him. Vignau swore that he had followed the Ottawa to a lake which emptied into the North Sea. Persuaded, after much questioning, that the tale was true, Champlain resolved to explore the route for himself. With Vignau and three other Frenchmen and an Indian he started up the Ottawa, at the end of May, 1613.

With great difficulty they made their way, hauling their canoe against the swift current, or portaging around rapids, until they reached Morrison's Island, just below Allumette Island. Here they met a band of Algonquins who, on hearing the object of Champlain's journey, told him that Vignau had never fronted with their statements, fell on his knees, confessed that his story difficulty controlled his anger at the deception. "Overcome with wrath," he says, "I had him removed, being unable to endure him any longer in my presence." The imposter had foolishly hoped that he would be rewarded for his supposed discovery, and that Champlain would not undertake the difficult task of verifying his story. With the disclosure of Vignau's ignorance of the route, and the refusal of the Indians to guide him through the unknown territory, Champlain was forced to give up his search and turn back. On their return to the St. Lawrence, Vignau made a public confession, and was pardoned on condition that he would continue to live among the Indians and gather further information.

In his account of this journey, Champlain records his latitude at various places with a fair degree of accuracy, up to a point some distance below Allumette Island. Beyond this there is no record of his latitude in his journal. At this point, known today as Gould's Landing, he left the Ottawa, to travel through small lakes and streams to regain the river farther up. Here, he says, he had to make a difficult portage, heavily laden with his cloak, arquebus, etc.

Navigators and travellers in the Seventeenth Century, such as Champlain, found their way by means of the compass, and made out their positions by the use of the astrolabe. The astrolabe was a flat circular piece of brass, divided into degrees, across the fact of which moved a bar, pivoted on the centre of the circle. The bar was pierced with an eyelet, through which the traveller was able to calculate the degree of latitude, and find out where he was.

In August 1867, 234 years after Champlain's journey, a man working in the woods near where the explorer had left the river, turned up a strange brass object, bearing the word "Paris" and the date "1603." It was, most probably, Champlain's astrolabe, dropped as he struggled through the dense bush on the portage. There, for over two and a half centuries, it had lain hidden under the fallen and decayed leaves and tangled under-growth of the forest. The farmer's children used it for a plaything, and neighboring settlers puzzled over it. In time it was sold, and after passing through several hands, was bought by a collector of astronomical instruments in the United States and is now in his possession. Some day, it is to be hoped, it may come back to Canada, and be placed in the Archives at Ottawa, the latitude of which place it helped to mark so many years ago.

The picture shows Champlain looking through the eyepiece of the astrolabe. In order to take a correct position it was necessary to hold the astrolabe in a perpendicular position. It was therefore held by a ring at the top on the thumb or finger of the observer, or suspended from the projecting branch of a tree. The astrolabe was somewhat thicker at the bottom, so as to give it greater steadiness when suspended, and to ensure an absolutely perpendicular position. Some pictures of Champlain show him holding the astrolabe by its bade, but this was not the correct way of using the instrument. One of Champlain's men is recording his reading of the degree of elevation in the note book which Champlain tells us that he carried on his journey. Some Indians watch with wonder, the while man's magic "medicine," while others of the party carry canoe and baggage over the portage beside the rapids.

The largest yields of winter wheat have been obtained in the experiments at Guelph in those years in which winter wheat entered the winter in good condition with a strong, uniform growth. This is an excellent suggestion for sowing winter wheat at the right time in autumn.

CANADIAN NORTH IS BEING DEVELOPED

Probably in no other part of Canada has exploration and development been carried on in so rapid and spectacular a manner as in the northern parts of the dominion. Realizing the immense importance of the changes at present taking place in Northwest and Yukon Territories, Hon Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, keeps constantly in close touch with the progress of the events and had under consideration a tour through the Northwest Territories during the summer just passed. However, more pressing business necessitated his abandoning this plan but in order that he might have a responsible officer of his department gather first-hand information on the changing conditions he requested Mr. O. S. Finnie, Director of the North West Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior, to carry out an inspectional tour through the North.

Mr. Finnie left Ottawa on July 13th. At Edmonton he was joined by Mr. L. A. Giroux, barrister of that city. At Fort Smith, Mr. Gerald Murphy, of the District Headquarters staff, joined the party as secretary and accompanied Mr. Finnie to Aklavik. Mr. Finnie travelled to the end of steel at Waterways, Alberta, by rail; proceeded down the Athabaska, Slave, and Mackenzie rivers, by river steamer; crossed from Aklavik on the Arctic coast to Dawson, Yukon Territory, by aeroplane, and later by plane completed his inspection of the settlements and developments between Dawson and Whitehorse. He returned to Vancouver by Pacific coast steamer and reached Ottawa on September 20th, completing a journey of nearly nine thousand miles.

Notwithstanding the tremendous activity in mineral prospecting, furs are still the chief item of trade in the Northwest Territories and recent changes in the regulations governing the taking of fur-bearing animals formed the principal topic of discussion between Mr. Finnie and the residents of the different posts he visited. At each point of call Mr. Finnie encouraged a frank discussion of the merits of the new laws and made careful note of the suggestions offered. These will be embodied with other recommendations in Mr. Finnie's report to Hon. Charles Stewart.

During his trip evidences of the long strides being made in aerial transportation and communication were found on every hand. The amount of flying in connection with mining operations is immense and hitherto inaccessible parts of the country are now reached in a few hours. A striking instance of this was brought to Mr. Finnie's attention before he began his flight from Aklavik to Dawson. The plane which was to carry him on that journey completed an 800-mile trip into the area east of Great Bear lake between noon and seven o'clock in the evening. This flight rounded out 1,000 miles of flying for the day by the pilot, Mr. W. L. Brintnell, operating manager of the Western Canada Airways.

Mr. Finnie's flight from Aklavik to Dawson, which was completed in 6½ hours, enabled him to not only complete his Mackenzie River inspections in good time but also to visit the principal centres of activity in the Yukon. Aircraft also provided the means of transport during the Yukon tour, and in flying from Dawson to the mines at Mayo in an hour and fifteen minutes, Mr. Finnie avoided a water voyage which would have occupied six days. He also saved much time by travelling by air from Mayo to Carcross, near Whitehorse, from which place he proceeded to his embarkation point for the voyage to Vancouver.

All down the Mackenzie and through the Yukon, health conditions among both the natives and white population were good and there was every indication of a generally prosperous condition. Both freight and passenger traffic down the Mackenzie River system was heavier than in past years and the fur catch of the previous winter was reported good. With improving transportation and communication a general quickening in the trade life of the Territories is noticeable, indicating the beginning of a new phase in the development of the North country.

BRITISH APPLE MARKET

Fruit growers will be pleased to learn from the report of Andrew Fulton, over seas representative of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, that the British market for Canadian apples has been most satisfactory during October, due chiefly to a light offering of transatlantic apples. "Ontario apples have been of exceedingly high quality with correspondingly satisfactory prices," remarked Mr. Fulton. Ontario red apples were well competed for and some excellent McIntosh Reds sold at good prices. However, in a cable on November 9th, Mr. Fulton announced that Ontario apple prices were falling off somewhat on the English market. The cause was attributed to a large number of off-condition apples from all sources while British apples were plentiful. It is expected that the demand for red apples will be very high before Christmas and shippers are warned to go easy on Greenings and Starks before that time. Ontario apple growers should give closer attention to packing, especially in securing a tight pack for the British market. Recent arrivals overseas have shown an excessive quantity of slacks amounting in some cases to over fifty per cent. of the shipment.

. . . Why you should ANSWER PROMPTLY

By the time this woman finishes her hand of bridge and reaches the telephone the party calling will have given up. The tardy bridge-player will be told "Sorry — there's no one on the line now, Madam".

Both of them will be annoyed—the person calling and the person called. Both of them have wasted time. Remember—it takes three to complete a call—

There are over one million local calls in Ontario and Quebec every day which fail to get through. These uncompleted calls mean two million minutes a day wasted—congestion of traffic—constant irritation—a handicap to business.

Some of them are unavoidable and some of them are our own errors. But many of them are mistakes made by the person calling or the person called. It takes three people to complete a call.

We are constantly striving to reduce our own errors. We are now pointing out some of the common errors in telephone usage because our aim is to provide the best possible telephone service* and in telephone service, co-operation is essential.

Answer promptly when your telephone rings. If it is not conveniently located in your home, consult us about it. And when you make a call, wait a reasonable time before giving up and causing a "No one on the line now".

Extensive new construction and replacements of both local and long distance telephone plant will mean an outlay in 1929 of more than $27,000,000.*

FUNERAL SERVICE PARLOR OPENED AT MARLBANK

F. C. Martin & Son, of Napanee, have leased the property from Mr. Robert Perry, opposite the telephone office at Marlbank, carrying an up-to-date stock of funeral supplies and are equipped to give prompt and efficient service. Martin & Son have recently purchased a new Studebaker (straight-eight cylinder) Limousine Funeral Coach. Also a new studebaker limousine invalid coach. The invalid coach is equipped with a bongardner cot, two thermos bottles, medicine cabinet, electric fan and a heater which adds to the comfort of the patient in all kinds of weather. There is ample room in the patient's compartment for a doctor and nurse. The drivers compartment is also equipped with a heater having ample room for three people. Both the patients and drivers compartments are very neatly upholstered in grey leather. The exterior is finished in light grey duco. Mr. George Summerville, of Marlbank is in charge of the branch parlor recently opened there. Night or day calls promptly attended to. 47b

"THAT'S THAT!"

The Frontenac Regiment, which revue has already busy with definite business in connection with the production, preliminary to the arrival of the professional director from the John B. Rogers Producing Co., who will stage the play. The show promises to be a first-class attraction, with high entertainment value. The scenes are laid in one of the de luxe hotels of Palm Beach, Florida. The action has to do with members of the elite social set in the midst of the usual winter social whirl, lending diversion in this exclusive resort. The story is of the romance of the sensible son of a prominent millionaire, who conceals his identity and wishes to be accepted for the girl he loves because of what he is, not because of what he has. There are many interesting indelights involving true-to-life people; there is a wealth of sure-fire comedy; there are singable tunes galore; extraordinary scenic effects and beautiful costumes by some of New York's leading designers, and many other features which build up a colorful, entertaining and satisfactory show. 47a

SACRED CANTATA

The evening service on Sunday last in St. Andrew's was given over to the choir, who sang the sacred cantata, entitled "A Joyful Thanksgiving." The cantata seems to convey through the medium of music the sense of gratitude for all the gifts which nature has abundantly bestows in the autumn. It is therefore a bright and lively tempo. The choir seemed to have caught the spirit of the theme and rendered the various selections in a sympathetic and vivid manner.

In addition to the choir's work, there were solos, duets and a mixed quartette, all of which had a direct bearing in the main theme. Mrs. M. Eppler sang the soprano part, Mrs. Valkman the alto, Mr. J. Caldwell the tenor and Mr. Gordon MacGregor the bass. The four not only sang the solo parts but as well carried the duets and the quartette. Miss B. Baughan presided at the organ.

So many requests have come to the church that the musical committee decided to repeat the cantata at the Sunday evening service next Sunday. This will give many who did not have the opportunity, the privilege of hearing this thanksgiving musical service.

NAPANEE W. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Council rooms Tuesday afternoon, November 12th, with the president, vice-president and secretary. The Vice-President, Mrs. T. V. Anderson occupied the chair, while Mrs. R. Carscallen most efficiently acted as secretary. The meeting opened with the singing of the National Anthem, after which Armistice week very little business came up and the entire afternoon was given over to a program arranged by the directors.

Mr. Herrington, K.C., was present, and gave an address on Peace. Commenting on the fact that the greatest minds of today are centred in evolving a plan, and knows as the League of Nations, Mr. Herrington referred to the two important steps in that direction, which have been taken by Canada, one being the happy relationship existing between the English and French speaking peoples, under the one flag of Canada and the other being the tribunal appointed by the United States and Canada, and known as the International Waterways Commission, having power to settle all disputes concerning the boundaries of the two countries.

Mr. Herrington is a very forceful, interesting speaker and was listened to with a great deal of pleasure. At the close of the address, afternoon tea was served by the directors in charge and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

OBITUARY

William Norris

A large number of friends and acquaintances met in St. Andrews Church on Saturday afternoon to pay their last tribute and respect to the late William Norris, whose death occurred in Calgary, last Monday. Mr. Norris had spent the summer in and around Napanee. On his return to the West he was seized with a stroke and lingered for twelve weeks. His son, William, accompanied the body East. The interment took place in Riverside Cemetery.

The late Wm. Norris was born in Newburgh, the son of parents, coming from Ireland. He spent his early life around Strathcona. He moved on a farm in Tyendinaga with his father. From this farm he was married to Miss Lydia Milligan of Centreville. To them were born one child, Emma, now Mrs. Frank Smith, of Napanee. After the death of Mrs. Norris he married Martha Henry, daughter of Alex. Henry, of Napanee. Most of their married life was spent in what is known as the Grange place, north of Napanee. They had four children by this union, Mrs. Mack Maybee, Saskatoon, Fred, both of Calgary. Mrs. Norris died in 1916 and in 1918 Mr. Norris married Miss Nellie McLaurin, of Napanee, who predeceased him by about three years.

There are left to survive, his sister, Mrs. John McCall, of Napanee, two daughters, Mrs. Frank Smith, of Vancouver, and Mrs. Mack Maybee, of Saskatoon; three sons, Arthur, of Napanee, and Fred and William, of Calgary.

Wallace's Rum, Honey and Tamarac Balsam is a splendid preparation for coughs and colds. An old-fashioned remedy, but hard to improve on. Sold in 35c bottles, at Wallace's.

BATH WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The B. W. I. met at the library on November 12th. The meeting opened by singing the Opening Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer, after which the minutes were read.

Mr. Geo. Loyst called at the meeting and asked the institute to consider taking the library over. The institute decided to have a meeting with the ladies' library board, which they did on November 16th. The Institute not being strong, yet thought that it was up to an understanding. Mrs. A. Rutan gave a splendid paper on the "Story of the Flag," explaining the full story of the different crosses and colors which was very interesting. Mrs. Clement also gave a peper on "The Christmas Carol." The meeting was closed, after which lunch was served. The next meeting will be held on December 9th at the home of Mrs. C. Young's.

Xmas is only four weeks off, and it is time that the Santa Claus Fund was started for 1929. For several years The Beaver has undertaken to collect through its columns the money that is used for this purpose, while the Relief Committee or Social Service workers spend the money to the very best advantage. Then with the help of the Rotarians and other cheerful workers, the parcels are made up and distributed on Xmas Eve. All work is done voluntarily. Every cent contributed is acknowledged through The Beaver. Let every one have a Xmas.

COUNT THE COST

Farm profits are small. They are limited by the selling price of products and, perhaps to a greater extent, by the cost of production. The selling price may be influenced by organizations but each farmer controls his production costs. It is much better to feed and milk five cows which each give a profit than ten which pay costs only. To raise crop cheaply there must be a high yield. The cost for the farm, or per acre, or per cow does not tell much. Comparison should be on a ton, bushel or pound basis.

CURBING CANNIBALISM

Prof. W. R. Graham, head of the Poultry Department of O. A. C., has a good suggestion for curbing the frequent outbreaks of feather-pulling and cannibalism when pullets are first put in confinement. Such an outbreak occurred at the college plant this fall. A quantity of fresh raw blood was obtained from the slaughter house and given the pullets as a drink. In fifteen minutes the appetite had so abated that it was safe to put back in the pen the pullets that had been previously attacked. One gallon of blood was given to each 100 pullets. There has not been a renewal of the trouble.

WINTERING BEES

"Experience has shown that it is better to winter bees outdoors than in the cellar unless you have an exceptionally suitable cellar," says P. Eric Millen, Provincial Apiarist. "Eighty per cent. of the honey bees in Ontario are wintered in various wintering cases outdoors. In Old Ontario almost every beekeeper winters outside, but in Northern Ontario cellars are used extensively. For successful cellar wintering, the cellar must be absolutely dark, dry and kept at an even temperature of about 45 degrees. Poorly insulated and damp cellars make poor winter storage places for bees. Wintering bees outdoors means more expense, but unless one has an ideal cellar, this method is recommended. Bees can be packed any time in October or early November, and need no attention until spring if properly prepared for winter. Outdoor wintered bees must be kept in waterproof winter cases."

AN IMPORTANT RULING

Hereafter persons coming to Canada to buy cattle for export will be permitted to use their motor cars of U. S. manufacture for that purpose without the payment of duty, bond or deposit. This regulation will greatly facilitate the movement of cattle buyers from outside Canada, inasmuch as formerly they were obliged to leave their cars at the port of entry and engage means of transportation in travelling from point to point in Canada. The importance of this international trade in cattle is shown by the fact that since the first of the year approximately 350 pure-bred Holstein leaving their cars at the port of entry States.

SHRINKAGE OF POTATOES

Experiments conducted by the Division of Botany, Department of Agriculture, show that shrinkage of potatoes while in storage can be greatly lessened if correct storage practices are followed. All tubers placed in storage should be mature healthy and as free from moisture on their surfaces, dirt and mechanical injury as possible. The storage of even a small percentage of diseased or field frosted potatoes endangers all the healthy stock. It is, however, practically impossible to keep large quantities in good condition for prolonged periods unless the proper type of storage house is used. For this purpose Pamphlet No. 10, issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, explains the requirements of the perfect type of storage house. It clearly explains the proper methods to follow in order to secure the best prices for your potato crop and may be obtained from the department.

WEEKLY CROP REPORT

A splendid season is reported by the farmers of Ontario, according to the current weekly crop report. Farmers in Durham County report increased egg production and splendid markets for eggs, which are selling locally at 55c for extras, and 46c for firsts. Essex County's tobacco has practically all been bought, and, although prices are no higher than last year, the average is considerably higher. Wheat is looking well in Huron, although drought has decreased the fall output considerably. There has been considerable demand in the County of Haldimand for cattle. American buyers have been quite active, paying as high as $500 for some type of Holsteins. Middlesex County has been less fortunate, owing to drought, and large numbers of live stock are still on pasture. Sheep are reported to be in good condition. Tembkanting sheepmen being of the opinion that flocks were never in better condition than they are this fall.

We trust that the feelings of friendship which has existed between you and ourselves will ever continue.

"A SINGLE SIP PROVES IT"

W. H. Stayton, the anti-prohibition leader, was criticizing in Boston the methods of certain prohibition officers.

"These methods are suspect," said Mr. Stayton. "They make me mistrustful. They remind me of the city missionary.

"This missionary, you know, made, one day, a tour of inspection in a model box factory.

"'What's the big idea, anyhow?' one factory hand said to another when the missionary started on his rounds.

"The second gave a cynical laugh and answered:

PRINT THIS ABOUT JOINT-EASE SAYS DRUGGIST

"Joint-Ease" is selling like hot cakes in my store, because it is a wonderful and speedy remedy for all joint troubles.

"Some say that it knocks out lumbago over night — others that for chest colds and sore throat it has no equal, while many insist that there is nothing they ever tried that is so efficient for neuralgia, neuritis and even head colds and vile nasal catarrh."

Answering the above letter, we, the makers of Joint-Ease, know what what this thriving Ottawa druggist says is true, but we still maintain that Joint-Ease is prepared for stiff, inflamed, painful, swollen joints, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, fingers or spine.

You'll like to use stainless Joint-Ease, for in just one minute's rub-in direct to the ailing bones, joints and ligaments—that's what it succeeds—for when Joint-Ease gets in Joint agony is gone and without any waste of time all swelling and congestion disappears. Made in Canada—costs only a tube. All druggists sell lots of it.

A great philosopher has said, "The most utterly lost of all days is that in which you have not laughed."

Frank Irving Fletcher, the brilliant epigrammatist was praising Henry Ford for advising young men to spend their money wisely rather than to hoard it foolishly.

"Hoarding is a bad habit," he ended, "and it grows on you. Remember the undertaker's story.

"An undertaker enjoyed himself so well at a banquet, the champagne flowed so freely, that when it came his turn to speak he pounded the table with his fist and declared that he would bury his next client free gratis for nothing.

Judge—What brought you here?
Accused—Two policeman.
Judge—I don't mean that—drunk, I presume.
Accused—Both of them.

For Your Protection, Every Zipper Boot Bears The Name Goodrich On The Tab

FOR at least two hundred years, because the Parisian Grisette and the Grand Dame of Versailles have, alike, always demanded the authentic in style, France has been the world's arbiter of excellence — dictator of feminine fashion.

A few years ago, Goodrich created the Zipper; sounding a new note in footwear which has become the perpetual vogue. Because, to be fashionable, style must be authentic, the wiser women of the new world demand to see the name Goodrich on any overshoe that is offered them as a Zipper.

The Zipper Boot is made only by the Canadian Goodrich Company at Kitchener, Ontario. 29

"And you say he is an educated man?"

"Yes, ma'am; I'm a roads' digger."

If America and England can sink their differences, it won't matter so much whether they sink their ships.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Where did Boston, "the Athens of America," become conscious of its intellectual superiority over New York? To quote from Genesis i., 1, doubtless it was "in the beginning." At any rate, evidences of Boston's superior state of mind are observable throughout the history of the city.

A story nearly 100 years old tells of a stranger stepping inside the porch of a Boston meeting-house, during a service, and asking the colored sextion the name of the clergyman, whom he could observe through the doorway. On being told he remarked:

"Fine preacher, isn't he?"

"Well, Sah, peoples has different notions about preachers."

"But he seems quite animated."

"Yes, Sah, consid'ble animated."

"And appears to have talent."

"Well, Sah, as I said afo', peoples has such different notions 'bout preachers. Dar's some dat tinks he's mightily good on de words. I tink mahse'f he's a fair man, Sah—a fair man, but not of de prima facie class. He's a good man, Sah, a well-meanin' man, but not a talented man. He's a New York man, Sah."

One of the commenest complaints of infants is worms, and the most effective application for them is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

Forde—Well, we actually have to disconnect our 'phone at night.

Goodyear—What's the idea?

Forde—Well, our daughter is a somnambulist, but instead of walking in her sleep she always goes to the 'phone and calls a taxi.

Corns are caused by the pressure of tight boots, but not one need be troubled with them long when so simple a remedy as Holloway's Corn Remover is available.

First Lord of Admiralty: Where's the Army?

Second Lord of Same: He's out rowing in the Navy.

The use of Miller's Worm Powders insures healthy children so far as the ailments attributable to worms are concerned. A high mortality among children is traceable to worms. These sap the strength of infants so that they are unable to maintain the battle for life and succumb to weakness. This preparation gives promise of health for life and keeps it.

Two stylishly-dressed ladies were visiting the lower East Side, New York City, in an attempt to find out "how the other half lives." They noticed a youngster sitting on a curb holding an apple. He had reached the age where he was minus both his upper and lower front teeth and he sat looking rather disconsolately at the rosy fruit. On catching sight of the two ladies, his expression changed. He jumped up and came toward the ladies, holding out the apple in the direction of one of them.

"Lady, will you start this for me?" he asked with toothless but smiling confidence.

After 18 Years of Asthma Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has proved the only relief for one fraiteful user, and this is but one case among many. Little wonder that it has now become the one recognized remedy on the market. It has earned its fame by its never failing effectiveness. It is earning it today, as it has done for years. It is the greatest asthma specific within the reach of suffering humanity.

"So Scribbles has quit his good old wife for his young secretary, and Dawb has gone off with his last model, leaving Mrs. Dawb and the children destitute, while Beatrice Baby, the film star, has cut the knot that tied her to her third husband."

Mr. Ringling frowned.

"Artists," he said, "must keep up appearances, of course; yes, they require large wardrobes; but the greater part of their wardrobes needn't necessarily be divorce suits."

Persian Balm creates lovely complexions. Velvety smooth. Cools and relieves the skin. Makes it delightfully soft-textured. Alluring fragrant. Delightful to use. Swiftly absorbed by the tissues, imparting that elusive charm so distinctive of the dainty woman. Persian Balm protects the delicate skin. Preserves and enhances the loveliest complexion. Every discriminating woman should use this silvery lotion. It is unrivalled as a flawless aid to beauty.

During the hearing of a case a man began clattering about in the back of the court-room, pushing over chairs and generally upsetting things.

"Young man," said the judge at length, sternly to him, "You make a great deal of noise."

"Your honor," came the reply, "I have lost my overcoat, and I am looking for it."

"Well, well," snapped the irate judge, "people often lose whole suits here without half as much disturbance."

It Will Relieve a Cold—Colds are the commonest ailments of mankind and if neglected may lead to serious conditions. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will relieve the bronchial passages of inflammation speedily and thoroughly and will strengthen them against subsequent attack. And as it eases the inflammation it will usually stop the cough because it allays the irritation in the throat. Try it and prove it.

The death of Admiral Sir Hedworth Meux recalls a story told of him at the time when he was in command of King Edward's yacht at Cowes. A certain yachtsman came close to the royal yacht and saluted the King, who was standing at the rail. "Do you know him?" King Edward asked of Sir Hedworth, who replied that he did not, but that he understood the individual in question was a rank outsider.

"Are you aware that I have just conferred the Royal Victorian Order upon him?" asked King Edward.

"Have you, sir?" replied Sir Hedworth. "Serve him damn well right!"

The teacher's thoughts were far away but when he heard the boy read: "Here is a warm doughnut: tread on it," he thought there was some mistake, and, glancing at the book, he saw: "Here is a worm; do not tread on it."

"The gentleman who just interrupted me," said Senator Capper in a political address in Topeka, "is a trifler, I am afraid. He reminds me of the high school student.

"This student was one of a group which took delight in discomfiting a nervous young professor. On day the professor's subject was archaeological discoveries and he asked his class:

"'Can anybody give me an example of a commercial appliance that we know to have been used in ancient times?'

"Yes, sir; the loose-leaf system used in the Garden of Eden,' the student replied."

Little Algernon known to have poetic tendencies, was asked by teacher to deliver something along the line of nature study, which he did:

"The man who made that wingless hen
Must be a real fine wizard.
The matter don't concern me much,
I always get the gizzard."

NOVEL IDEA FOR DISPLAY

Hooper's Drug Store, of Napanee, are well known in the district for their novel and up-to-the-minute window displays. During the period when the Parker aeroplane was in Canada and the national advertising featured aviation subjects largely, Messrs. Hooper used a model aeroplane in their display with a concealed electric fan which made the propeller turn. During the recent Desk Set Campaign a huge Desk Set was used as a centre-piece of the window trim. This had been contrived from an ordinary large box covered with a marble effect paper, representing the base. With wooden ends used in paper rolls, the socket was made and this was covered with gold paper. A cardboard cone painted black represented the bowl, and one of the large size paper Parker Pens used in recent advertising took the place of a Parker Duofold. Mr. Laurie Douglas, of Hooper's is responsible for this display, and he is to be commended both upon his novel idea and the results obtained from its use.—From Parker Fountain Pen Co.'s magazine, "Parker-ams," Toronto.

BAND CONCERT

On Friday evening a crowded auditorium testified to the popularity of our local band, when they gave a very delightful concert at the Town Hall.

Mayor W. M. Hewitt acted as chairman and introduced the performers. Mr. A. MacGregor, who has been the efficient leader for the past year, conducted the band in several splendid numbers which were played with expression and finish.

The program was a long one, including some of the finest talent in Napanee. Time will not permit us to give their services to help make the occasion a successful one, and raise the fund which is to buy new instruments and thus build up the efficiency of the organization.

We may not give all the details of the entertainment, but each soloist was heartily encored and deservedly so. The soloists were Mrs. Eppiett, who sang with clarinet obligato played by Mr. Eplett. Miss Hilda McGreer, soprano solo; Mr. Reginald Wiseman, baritone solo; Mr. Robt. Norris, euphonium solo; Mr. Garrett, tuba solo; Mr. T. Maxwell, saxaphone solo; Mr. Caldwell, tenor solo; Mr. R. Smith, saxaphone solo; Mr. Gordan McGregor, cornet solo, and Mr. R. Kendall played a piano solo, as well as accompanying for the evening. A duet was sung by Mrs. Valkman and Mr. Caldwell and a cornet duet played by Mr. Knapp and Mr. Smith.

MORVEN

Quite a number of our people enjoyed the banquet, given in the Napanee town hall on the 19th inst., by the Poultry Association. Mr. Ray Perry and his staff are to be congratulated upon the success of the evening.—Chas. T. Gausden spent Sunday at Mr. A. Fraser's.—The Woman's Auxiliary, of St. Thomas Church, met at the home of Mrs. Matt. Shetler on Friday evening with a goodly number in attendance.—Mr. and Mrs. F. Rawlinson, Oshawa, are spending a few weeks with Mrs. A. Mills.—A Christmas program and concert will be given in the White Church on the evening of Monday, December 23rd. Particulars later.

THE SECRET IS OUT

At the recent autumn shows held in Toronto and Montreal the Dale Estate Florists had 21 entries in roses and captured 15 firsts and 6 seconds. In carnations, 10 entries, in which they won 10 firsts. In chrysanthemums, 46 entries, winning 37 firsts, 6 seconds, and 3 thirds. All flowers sold at Hooper's Drug Store are grown by this enterprising firm.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

YIELD OF SEED CROPS

A larger than usual acreage of red clover has been cut for seed in Ontario, the yield per acre varying from 120 to 300 pounds. It is believed that there may be from three to four million pounds of seed, which will constitute the largest red clover crop in Old Ontario for many years. The quality of the seed is reported good. The crop in Northern Ontario is practically a failure this year.

Alsike acreage in Old Ontario was estimated 20 per cent. larger than in 1928 and yields per acre have varied from 60 to 500 pounds, low yields being general in the southern and lake counties and high yields in the clay country between Toronto and Georgian Bay. In Northern Ontario, Temiskaming District, the total production of alsike is not expected to exceed 10,000 bushels, about half as much as last year.

Alfalfa seed production in Ontario was again light in 1929. The acreage left for seed is not believed to have exceeded 10,000, which may yield from 60 to 120 pounds per acre, about the same as in 1928. An abundance of sweet clover for seeding purposes is expected to be available next spring. Timothy seed production in Ontario is reported as normal, a large proportion coming from the Navan district of Russell County. Production of blue grass in Southwestern Ontario is estimated at 50 per cent. of normal. The heavy per bushel this year.

ROTS AFFECTING STORED POTATOES

Investigations carried on by the Division of Botany, Ottawa, show that the farmer may lose 17 per cent. of the stored potato crop. This loss is due chiefly to the action of rubber rots, of which the most serious is that caused by late blight (the so-called dry rot). In fact, so destructive is this rot that in years when the late blight is common as much as fifty per cent. of the total crop may be destroyed in storage. While late blight rot does not commonly spread from tuber to tuber in the bin, under poor storage conditions this injury paves the way for organisms producing other rots that do spread in storage and cause heavy losses. The fungus or mold causing this well known disease attacks and kills the potato tops usually during the late summer. It spreads rapidly in moist weather, and spores from the diseased leaves fall to the ground where they come into contact with the tubers and decay follows. Those intending to store the crop this year would avoid much of this loss by removing all late blight infected tubers.

Late blight rot is not the only important storage decay of potatoes. Other tuber-rotting fungi known as Fusaria are capable of causing enormous losses and they may be active at the lowest temperature at which potatoes may be safely stored. Fungi of this kind usually become troublesome after the tubers have been injured by cuts and bruises, frost heat and sunburn. Certain form of Fusaria also cause disease by attacking the growing plant and extending down to the tubers. Such diseases are known as wilts and may continue as tuber rots in storage, particularly when the temperature is higher than 50 degrees F.

Bearing these facts in mind it will be seen that storage rots may be prevented only by a combination of precautions which may be stated briefly as follows:

1. Prevent digger and handling injuries.
2. Control late blight foliage infection.
3. Avoid exposing potatoes to temperatures below 30 F. and above 48 F.
4. Maintain good ventilation conditions in the storage house or basement.

"No, Governor, we have barely enough powder for a salute."

OBITUARY

E. F. Lake

What inevitably comes to each one of us sooner or later in tragic or peaceful fashion, when the physical nature of our beings can no longer hold the God-given spirit, and when our labors have ended in the encounter against handicaps and struggles of this world is exemplified again in the demise on Tuesday last of Mr. E. F. Lake at his home of many years in Deseronto.

For several months much of his retired life was spent of late in this city within the circle of his son and daughter, Mr. Louis P. Lake, Sidney Street, and Mrs. F. H. Henry, Charles Street. Also surviving are his widow, five grandchildren here, four sisters, Mrs. W. J. Magrath, and Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, of Edmonton, Alta., Mrs. (Rev.) C. E. Houghton, and Mrs. R. Anderson, of Riverside, Cal., the latter at her advanced age, having renewed during the past summer months former associations in these parts.

The late Mr. Lake was born near Tamworth, the son of Stephen and Mary Lake, and not long ago celebrated his 71st birthday anniversary. Forty-eight years ago his marriage to Mary Dafoe, of Selby, was solemnized.

Over a score of years Mr. Lake was connected with the woodworking mill of the Rathbun Co., in Deseronto. A member of the former Methodist, now the United Church there, his stand was always staunch in the observance of religious duties, in the interest of strict temperance and worthy citizenship endeavors. Children, pet animals and flowers in particular midst his gardening activities attracted and made happy his recreational hours. Possessing a most helpful disposition it was ever known that his word and act knew no unkind motive. A pleasant and unobtrusive personality will be much missed in the daily round of folk as they go and come. Fraternally he was a charter member of Deseronto Canadian Order of Foresters.

A month ago he was afflicted with a stroke which skillful medical attention and devoted nursing could only ease.

The respect and sympathy of a wide circle of friends and relatives in the district were revealed in the large funeral obsequies yesterday under the funeral director Allum at the family residence, Dundas Street, Deseronto to the burial plot at Morven cemetery beyond Napanee.

Rev. W. D. Harrison, as pastor, was in charge of the last rites dwelling upon the time as being not only one of mourning but of victory as well in a soul gone to a creditable reward.

"Face to Face," was feelingly sung by Mrs. (Dr.) Boyce.

As an acquaintance of earlier days and in ministrations in West Belleville United Church, Rev. L. S. Wight was present and spoke in eulogy of the departed. Mankind in two fold naturee, physical and spiritual ought to develop both aspects in the permanent importance of eternal foundations and superstructure in which we have a part through prayer. Scripture reading and consecrated service was the final admonition of Rev. Wright.

To mark the bereavement of a faithful husband, a loving father and a neighborly servant, the following floral tributes were evident:—

Pillow, wife; Gates-a-jar, son and daughter; Wreaths, families of Andersons, Sharpes, Houghtons, McLeans, Riverside, California, Deseronto C.O.F. Baskets of Roses, Mr. and Mrs. J. Allum, Deseronto; Sprays, grandchildren, Belleville; Fred B. Lake, Toronto; Miss E. G. Lake, Toronto; Mrs. I. Embury, Belleville, and Mrs. S. Asselstine, Deseronto; Mr. and Mrs. R. Millard, Kingston; Mr. J. Arthur Marsh, Belleville; Stanley Hutton, Ottawa; Miss Tena Embury and Mr. George Embury, Deseronto; Mesdames Berkley and Ridley, Belleville; Maxwell family, Deseronto.

The bearers for the occasion were Franklin Lake, Hamilton Lake, Floyd Henry, grandsons, Belleville, Messrs. N. Caycallen, N. Gault and S. Aselstine, Deseronto.

One of Boot's Iodized throat tablets, containing Iodine, Carbolic Acid and Menthol), dissolved slowly in the mouth and swallowed acts wonderfully well for sore throat. Made in England and sold in 25c boxes, at Wallace's, Napanee Agents.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear daughter, Bertha Fox, who departed this life on November 25th, 1924.

When evening shades are falling
And we are all alone
In our hearts there comes a longing
If you only could come home.
Every day our thoughts are wandering
To your grave not far away,
Where they gently lowered your body,
Just five years ago today.
Sadly missed by Mother, Sister and Brothers. 48ap

WHY SHOULD HE suffer from rheumatism like this?

IF he would accept the advice of thousands of men and women, he would find relief by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Rheumatism is not a surface ailment that can be banished by rubbing with liniments or oils. Watery, poison-laden blood must be built up and purified before there can be any progress toward permanent recovery.

Time and again, sufferers have proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the treatment of rheumatism. "For some years," writes Thomas Martin, of Novar, Ontario, "I was so badly troubled with rheumatism I could hardly walk and suffered great pain. I had medical treatment but did not get much relief. After taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for some time the trouble disappeared and has not since shown the least sign of returning."

Start today to relieve your rheumatism. Buy a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your nearest druggist's or, postpaid, by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ontario. 2.12

A boy bought a spotted dog from a local dealer. The next morning he thought he would take it for a walk, so he took it into the woods. It soon started to rain, which was too much for the dog, for it washed off the spots, so he trotted the dog back to the dealer.

"Look at this animal," he said. "The spots have all washed off."

"Great heavens, boy," he replied, there was an umbrella went with the dog. Didn't you get the umbrella?"

Keep Them Happy By Keeping Them Well

It is natural for children to be happy, active and full of fun. When they are fretful, fussy and disinclined to play you may be sure something is wrong. Almost invariably that something lies in the digestive tract.

It is to meet the need for an absolutely safe corrective of childhood ailments that Baby's Own Tablets have been designed. They gently regulate the stomach and bowels and thus drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and allay teething pains. Concerning them Mrs. W. E. Forsyth, Dover, N.B., writes:— "I would not be without Baby's Own Tablets as I know of nothing to equal them for fretful, fussy babies who are troubled with colds or sour stomach."

Address and Presentation

On Thursday evening, October 1st, the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lochhead gathered at the Town Hall, Centreville to spend a social evening and bid them farewell before leaving for their new home in Norwood. During the evening the following address was read:

Mr. and Mrs. Centreville Lochhead:—

Dear Friends,—It is with much regret that we have learned of your departure from this vicinity after spending a goodly part of your life in our midst.

Your circle of acquaintances is a wide one and each and all of us will miss you, and we feel that the vacancy you have left will be a hard one to fill. It must be something of an ordeal for you, too, but we know that you will speedily make yourselves at home in the vicinity at which you are going and after all the distance is not so great that you cannot make frequent visits to your old neighbors and attend a few social gatherings where you can renew old acquaintances.

In token of our love and respect for you and a souvenir of this occasion we aske you to accept this humble gift (diningroom chair) and purse. We hope that they will recall to your minds pleasant memories of the days spent with your friends of Centreville, Croydon, Tamworth, Enterprise and vicinity.

It is our sincere wish that your efforts in life and those of your family will be crowned with success and that Providence will shower his richest blessings on you, who we feel sure deserve it so well.

Signed on behalf of your neighbors and friends,

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Doupe.
Mr. James Hughes,
Mr. H. J. Pingland,
Miss Grace Weese.

The same evening and place the following address and presentation.

Dear Sister and Bro. Lochhead,—We the officers and members of Garner L.O.B.A., having learned of your intentions of leaving us, felt that we could not possibly let you go away without in some small way, showing you the love and appreciation we feel toward you for we know and feel the vacancies your places will leave, will be hard to fill. We shall miss you very much we are sure, as you have always taken a keen interest in the Lodge and its work and helped in what ever way you could without any hesitation and we feel that this little verse will suit our feelings tonight:

"There are no friends like the old ones
We love in our earliest days."

And now as a token of our love and good wishes to you, we ask you to accept this silver tea set and as you use it, may it remind you of the many pleasant times spent together and in parting we wish that God's blessing may rest on you and your home in your new home. For what is our loss will be anothers gain. We hope to see you often and you may feel a warm welcome will await you at our homes when ever you have an opportunity to visit us.

Frontenac on the Way to Cataraqui

No governor of New France impressed the Indians with such respect and admiration as did Count Frontenac. He seemed to understand them instinctively, and they, in turn, appreciated his haughty and martial spirit. Frontenac shared the Indians' love of pageantry and display, as well as their regard for ceremonial observances; and his intercourse with them was conducted always with a mixture of dignified magnificence, easy familiarity and fatherly authority. The founding of Fort Frontenac was one of the first and most striking examples of his skill in dealing with the Indians. His predecessor, Courcelle, had advised the King to build a fort and trading post on Lake Ontario to curb the Iroquois, and to attract them and the Northern Indians to trade with the French rather than with the Dutch and the English to the south of the lake. Within a year after his arrival in Canada as governor Frontenac undertook to carry out the project. The time was favorable, for there was truce between the French and the Iroquois. La Salle, the future explorer of the West, who already had won Frontenac's favor, was sent to invite the Iroquois chiefs to meet the new governor at the place selected for the proposed fort and trading post. This was at the mouth of the Cataraqui River, where now stands the City of Kingston. At the end of June, 1672, Frontenac set out from Montreal on his journey up the St. Lawrence. With him were about four hundred men; habitants, voyageurs, Indians, old soldiers of the Carignau regiment, part of the garrison of Quebec, and a number of officers who volunteered for the expedition. His flotilla consisted of 120 canoes and two flat-boats painted in brilliant colors and carrying a couple of cannon. Slowly they toiled up the rapids to the smooth water of the Thousand Islands, till, on the 12th of July, they came in sight of Lake Ontario. Here Frontenac halted to arrange an impressive entrance upon the scene. All the company washed the stains of travel from their persons and dressed in their best; the Indians painted themselves and decked their hair with feathers, the officers put on their most brilliant uniforms, and the voyageurs donned their gayest sashes. Then, bright with color and sheen of silk, velvet, ribbons and lace and gay braid, with fluttering flags and flashing paddles dipping in time to the blare of trumpets and the roll of drums and the thunder of cannon salutes, the procession moved forward over the blue waters. Four divisions of canoes in double lines led the way, followed by the decorated barges. Then came Frontenac and his guards, his staff and the gentlemen volunteers, with the canoes from Three Rivers on his right, and those of the Indians on his left, with two more squadrons of canoes formed the rear. Piloted by an Iroquois canoe which came out to meet them, the French entered the bay, while on the shore along and along the edge of the encircling green forest, the Indians gazed in wonder ing admiration at the brilliant spectacle. At the point now occupied by the barracks, at the end of the present bridge, they landed and made camp. The next week was spent in councils and festivities with the Iroquois. Frontenac distributed presents of tobacco, guns and provisions and addressed the Indians in the grandiloquent speeches they admired, promising them the protection and favor of the great King, and the advantages of profitable trade with the French, if they were peaceful, and threatening them with chastisment by powerful forces, if they were disobedient. The Iroquois were greatly impressed, as he says, "with respect, fear and good-will," and in response to his request next year sent him several of their children to be educated at Quebec. Meanwhile, during all the parleys and entertainments, the erection of the fort proceeded rapidly and on the 27th of July, Frontenac was able to embark on his return to Montreal. By that time the fort was almost ready to house the garrison which was left to defend this western outpost of New France.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Typical of vast work of investigation now in progress at the Ontario Agricultural College is the study of parasites in hogs and of the reasons for lack of vitality in winter-born hogs under the direction of Prof. Knox of the Department of Animal Husbandry. The ultimate solution of these problems will prove of direct value to every farmer.

PRIZES ARE INCREASED

The exhibit of draught horses, which has always been a feature of the Guelph Winter Fair, should be increasingly interesting at the coming show, December 9th to 12th. Over $1500 is being offered in prize money and an additional section has been added to the prize list by which $100 is being offered for yearling geldings. Previously no classification was provided for animals of this age. With the exception of the yearling gelding class, ten prizes are offered in each of seven sections, with $210 being the total prize money in each section. In the yearling gelding class the first prize is $30, with each subsequent prize $5 less.

Was In Bed All Summer

"I have to work in the store and do my own housework, too, and I got nervous and run-down and was in bed nearly all summer. The least noise would make me nervous. I was told to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken seven bottles. It has made me stronger and put more color into my face. I am looking after my store and housework and my four children and I am getting along nicely now." —Mrs. J. Malin, R. R. No. 5, Barton St. East, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada.

THE COST OF REARING DAIRY HEIFERS

Fifty dollars may be regarded as a high price to pay for a young heifer, but if she has been reared this far in a manner to foster her proper development this is little enough. Investment costs are all taken into consideration there is no profit in selling a twelve months old heifer at fifty dollars. These were kept of the cost of food required by six heifers of Ayrshire, Holstein and Shorthorn breeding, from birth to one year of age.

They were fed whole milk valued at forty dollars per ton until from three to four weeks of age when this was gradually changed to skim milk valued at four dollars a ton. A fat substitute valued at seventy dollars a ton was added to the skim milk. This was fed until the calves were three months of age. It was composed of part flax seed and four parts of crushed oats with the hulls sifted out. When the calves got older one part of crushed oats was replaced by corn meal. Each calf was fed from one quarter to one pound of this fat substitute per day, the amount depending on the age and condition of the calf. The coarser foods consisting of hay and roots were fed from the time the calves were able to use them. After the milk and milk substitute were discontinued in the liquid form the calves were fed a drp mixture consisting of three parts bran, two parts crushed oats, one part oilcake, and one part brewers' grains. The aim in feeding was to keep the calves growing steadily.

In the account of this experiment which appears in the report of the superintendent, Fredericton Experimental Station, for last year, published by the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa, it is shown that reared in this way the calves weighed an average of 633 pounds per head and that the year's growth had been produced at a cost of $46.04 for food.

Over 225 Attended Big Poultry Association Banquet at Napanee

Admirable Address Given by Prof. F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman—Interesting Travelogue Disclosed Many Countries Learning About Canada

Napanee, Nov. 21.—Without a doubt one of the most interesting an comprehensive addresses which the members of the Poultry Association of Lennex have heard in recent years, was that delivered by Prof. F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman, at the annual banquet which was held at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening.

It was an address which not only lauded the great Dominion of Canada, but a travelogue which carried the listeners to a number of countries of Europe as well as in Asia. At the same time Prof. Elford, who was elected president of the World's Poultry Congress in London, Eng., a year ago, lauded the great poultry industry, not only in Canada, but in many other countries of the world. The banquet was largely attended, there being nearly 225 members and guests present.

The long tables were laden with roast chicken and the many delicacies which appeal to the inner-man. During the dinner hour several members were given by an orchestra of five pieces from Yarker, their music being much appreciated.

The meeting was presided over by the president, Mr. Ray F. Perry, who introduced the speakers and program for the evening. In Mr. Perry, the Association has a president of whom they may well be proud. A hustler and one who has taken a great interest. The Poultry Association the past year under Mr. Perry has been one continual success and today the membership stands at 140, the largest in the history of the Association. The president has also a loyal staff of officers and members and progress has been their motto this year, a motto which has been sustained all through the year.

The first speaker, Mr. J. F. Fraser, poultry instructor of Kemptville, in his opening remarks, referred to the increased tariff on eggs which the United States Government is proposing and which is going to be a fact. From the speaker's view-point this is going to a calamity from a national standpoint. Notwithstanding this fact, Mr. Fraser said "that there is a bright aspect." The Mother Country today has a big market for Canadian eggs.

There is a scheme in the Old Land which calls for a national market, the eggs being stamped according to the country of origin. It was up to all Canadians to boost as much as possible the egg industry in this country and to ship the highest grade of Canadian eggs. The speaker gave a splendid suggestion which was to have good quality eggs marked Canada instead of Empire. Mr. Fraser in closing, predicted a great future for the Poultry Industry in Canada and urged upon all poultry producers to secure the best breed of fowl. He also extended to the local Association his best wishes of success and was extremely pleased to learn the splendid success which has been attained during the past year.

"If Palestine is going to make any progress it will be by the Jewish people, the only people that can accomplish it." In closing the speaker said that every country which he visited desired two things: 1. Mainly to know more about Canada. 2. To learn more about the Poultry Industry in this country.

During the World's Poultry Congress more was learned about Canada than ever before. "Canada is good enough for everyone—the best country in the world," said Prof. Elford, who received an ovation at the close of his address.

The program was the best which has yet been given.

Mrs. Arthur Kimmerly, Mr. Jack Caldwell and Mr. Reg. Wiseman delighted the audience with vocal solos and duets while Mrs. Powell with her readings certainly captivated all present. Preceding the main addresses, brief address were given by Mayor Howitt, who as a member of the Town Council said that he appreciated the good work which is being done by the Poultry Association—referred to the annual poultry days and extended success to each and every member, by Mr. C. W. Hambly, M.L.A., who also complimented the association and referred to the great success of the Poultry Fair which was due in some measure to the Poultry Association and by the secretary, Mr. E. W. Metcalfe, who said that the association was formed in 1908 and of the original list of members there were only four left:—Geo. Degroff, W. A. Steacy, Mr. Vandebogart and himself.

Mr. M. B. Mills one of the main springs of the association also gave a short address. At the conclusion of the singing of the National Anthem the floor was cleared and a social three hours was spent in dancing.

To President and Mrs. Perry and his loyal staff of members and their wives which appeal to the inner-man. During which appeal to the inner-man. During the dinner hour several members were given by an orchestra of five pieces from Yarker, their music being much appreciated.

"And yet," he said "there's something queer about this kindlier feeling, something puzzling and a little sinister. When Europeans talk about it, in fact, they always remind me of the old colored deacon who had just heard that a Tennessee darkey had been legally hanged instead of lynched.

MUSICAL COMEDY "THAT'S THAT!"

Enthusiasm begins to grow with the beginning of actual work on the recently announced enterprise of the Frontenac Regiment, namely the production of the Musical Comedy, "That's That!" The play will be staged at the Armouries on December 16th and 17th. Great care is being exercised in procuring the best talent in the community, and great attention is being paid to types and ability. "That's That!" gives opportunity for the display of talents of the highest type along a great number of lines, and Lieutenant Paul, the general chairman, feels that this enterprise will be extremely popular here. Reports on the play in other cities where it has been staged indicate it to be a high class performance with a wealth of beauty and music worth listening to." The selection of the talent is being left in the hands of Mrs. Powell, who, with her long experience in this type of work is most capable as an organizer. Each gay, amateur show produced here in the past few years has discovered new stars and new talent, and this will be no exception. There are undoubtedly those, however, who, although they might take much pleasure from participating in the show, may possibly be overlooked because of the fact that they have not regularly appeared in the past productions. It is practically impossible for the committee to make a personal appeal to those; and it is very far from their thoughts to exclude these who will take an interest in "That's That!" Anyone, therefore, who is desirous of taking part, should notify Mrs. Powell, or call at the rehersals, which will be held in the "B" Company Club Rooms in the Armouries. Rehersals commence November 25th.

BAY OF QUINTE HOCKEY LEAGUE FORMED

With the Belleville and Trenton teams refused admittance to the Trent Valley Hockey League at the annual meeting held in Stirling last night those clubs in Bay of Quinte district decided to form a league of their own and the initial plans were laid at a meeting in the Stirling House last night. The group will be known as the Bay of Quinte League and the Bert Cann cup now held by the Belleville Maximites will be put up for competition. It is proposed that the League be composed of Trenton, Napanee, Belleville Maximite Bantams, Belleville-Stewart Warner, of Belleville and a five team group and it is planned to play a double schedule. The teams represented last night were most enthusiastic for the idea and while O.H.A. players will be barred it is expected that some good gamers will be played Trenton Creosote Company is behind the team that represents the firm while Napanee Hockey Club will be the fourth entry. Picton may not enter but in the event that they do not decide to come in, the other four will open the schedule. The following officers were named for the league last night:

President—David Terry, of Trenton.
Vice-Pres.—W. E. Rowsome, Stewart Warner, Belleville.
Secy.—S. R. Curry, Belleville.

The entry fee was fixed at $5. Further details in connection with the League will be planned at a meeting to be held at the Belleville club rooms next Wednesday night. — Belleville Intelligencer, Nov. 23rd.

Sporting Notes

HOCKEY

The hockey coaches have been well pleased with the way the boys have been turning out to the workouts, at the Napanee armouries every night. From fourteen to twenty have been out each night and have been put through an hour's hard training.

New faces are being seen at every workout and from all appearances there is going to be some real competitors for places on the team.

Manager Harry Roe insists that all players must be in the pink of condition by the time the ice is in the rink, and any boys who have not already reported are requested to do so at the earliest possible date.

The O.H.A. Executive meet on Friday night in Toronto to draw up the groupings. From all appearances now it looks as though Napanee would be grouped with Belleville, Trenton, and Picton. This should make a very well balanced group and should furnish some first class hockey.

Picton are said to be entering a team in the Junior series again after having been absent for some years. Trenton and Belleville have last several of their last year's juniors due to the age limit. As a result the Napanee boys are not likely to be thrown against such seasoned teams as they would be if these other teams were intact from other years.

The executive of the Hockey Club are meeting in the Paisley House on Tuesday evening to discuss the many details that have arisen.

There has been some discussion among hockey fans as to the size of the ice surface at the rink. This has been measured and found to be 170 feet long and 67 feet wide. This ice surface is well within the limits set by the O.H.A.

BASKETBALL

The decisive games of the season in the Bay of Quinte Girls' Basketball League were played in the gymnasium of Picton Collegiate on Friday evening, November 22nd, between Picton and Napanee.

The Senior girls came out on the floor first and it looked as though the game was Picton's for at the end of the first half the score was 13-11 for Picton. The girls were not downhearted though and when the whistle blew for the second half of the game the girls were determined to win. The first few minutes of this period the Napanee girls placed three baskets in succession putting them in the lead. The Picton girls gave them a hard fight but Napanee girls showed that they were in trim and when the final whistle blew the score was 34-17 in favor of Napanee. The Napanee girls showed splendid combination work throughout the game.

The Junior game was also closely contested, the score being 15-12 in favor of Napanee at half time. The second half the Napanee girls piled up the baskets to their credit and the game ended with a score of 33-16 in favor of Napanee.

Thus far in the schedule the Napanee girls have an enviable record with no losses and five wins each to their credit.

The final games in the Bay of Quinte League for the Junior and Senior cups will be played in the N.C.I. gymnasium on Friday, November 29th. The result of these games will declare the winners of the cups and if Napanee is successful they will play off in the N.C.I. gymnasium in the near future with Kingston Collegiate. Both these games should be well worth seeing.

Miss Marion Leek, of Queen's University, refereed the games to the satisfaction of all. The line-ups were as follows:

BATH

It is with regret that we have to record the death of two of our highly esteemed residents within the last week. So many familiar faces are passing from our midst that it has cast a shadow over us all. On Friday evening, November 22nd, Miss Gertrude Reynolds passed away in the Kingston General Hospital, a few weeks after an operation had been performed in hopes of bettering her suffering health. She had made her home for many years with Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Northmore, from whom resident the funeral was held to St. John's Church on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Rev. W. G. Swayne conducted the funeral services and interment was made in Bath Cemetery. Besides her many friends to whom she endeared herself by her quiet and cheerful disposition, she is survived by two sisters and one brother, who were present at the funeral services.—Among those in town for the funeral of the late Mrs. Reynolds were: Harold Northmore, of Toronto, and Mr. Simpson and son, Harold of Canada.—On Sunday morning, November 24th, Mr. James Shibley passed away after an illness of only an hour or two. Deceased had been in his usual good health, had attended the rugby game in Kingston the afternoon before and had been around town all Saturday evening, so that his sudden passing was a great shock to his many friends. Deceased was a life-long resident of this village, and was in the fish-buying business for many years, having only recently retired. Funeral services were held from his late residence, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to the United Church, where funeral services were held by Rev. S. Dixon, assisted by Rev. Earl Sexsmith. Interment was made in the United Church Cemetery. His widow and one daughter, Mrs. Ralph Sexsmith survive.—Amongst those in town for the funeral of the late Mr. Shibley were: Mr. and Mrs. Thos. BIG STORM HITS NAPANEE STEADY GALE FOR 24 HOURS

Not even the oldest timer can recall such a strong, heavy wind over a long period in November. Even the best built houses found it hard to keep the wind from finding its way into the living room. Winter coats were substituted for the light ones over night and the stores report a big run on warm underwear.

In many homes there was no fuel to put in the fire, no warm stockings or underwear on the children, who shivered from the cold and frost.

A group, of women are busy now at every opportunity preparing to meet the need and they need friends. The Beaver Santa Claus Fund supplies the money. May we appeal to the public to meet with a generous response. Please be as liberal as possible. Every cent will be acknowledged and spent as economically as possible. Make it a Merry Xmas for all the kiddies in Napanee. Make cheques payable to Beaver Santa Claus Fund, Napanee.

The first ones to come to our aid this year, are the members of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union, and they have been sewing for several weeks. Among the valuable donations made are 24 handkerchiefs, 7 pairs mittens, 7 pairs stockings, 2 sweaters, 12 dresses, 2 toques, 4 scarves, 7 middies.

The Social Service Workers are busy again doing their share, and now Santa Claus asks you to donate some money, no matter how small the sum, to help make a happy Xmas for every little boy and girl in town. Let everyone take an interest this year.

YARKER - COLEBROOK WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Yarker-Colebrook W. I. was held on Wednesday afternoon, November 20th, at the home of Mrs. J. Wright, with 45 members and visitors present. One new member was added to the list, bringing the roll call up to 64.

The meeting was presided over by the president and was opened as usual by the Ode and Creed.

The roll-call was answered by "A remedy for cold," and if anyone in this community has a cold in the future, it won't be for lack of remedies.

The secretary and treasurer's reports were read and adopted. The treasurer receiving well deserved praise for her splendid reports. The regular business of motion for paying bills, etc., was then attended to.

This was very instructive as well as interesting and was thoroughly appreciated by all. Mrs. Boyce was tendered a vote of thanks by the members for her splendid report.

Some new business was then suggested in the way of Christmas-cheer for children, who will be none too bountifully remembered, other wise, at Christmas. This practicularly appealed to the writer, for Christmas giving is being so commercialized that it seems appropriate for the W. I.—meaning what it does—to impress upon its members and the community the true Christmas spirit embodied in these words, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

The program consisted of "A demonstration in candy making," by Mrs. McKnight, and a "Contest," put on by Mrs. Amey and Mrs. R. Jackson. The prize winner being Mrs. P. Garrison.

The meeting was closed by the singing of the National Anthem. A social half hour over the tea cups then followed.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. S. Winter, on Wednesday afternoon, December 18th. The roll call to be answered by "Last Minute Christmas Gifts."

The W. I. wish to extend the sincere sympathy of their organization to the family of the late Mr. Geo. Riddle, whose sudden passing was a shock and grief to the community.

ONTARIO'S TOBACCO CROP

Recent despatches from New Zealand tell of the development of tobacco production on a large scale in what is known as the Nelson district, where land suitable to tobacco culture has been discovered. However, with only 1050 acres of tobacco in the entire district, the New Zealanders still have a long way to go before a comparison can be made with Ontario's rapidly increasing acreage. In Norfolk County alone 10,000 acres of flue-cured tobacco were grown in 1929 and the total will undoubtedly exceed 12,000 acres in 1930. Essex, with a similar total of 10,000 acres this last year, and Kent with 6760 acres, were the other principal tobacco growing counties. The aggregate acreage of all kinds of tobacco in Ontario was slightly more than 25,000. The yield exceeded 21 million pounds, which was one-third less than in 1928, due to a falling off in burley and other dark types. This was the result of low prices obtained for these types in 1928, which had the effect of eliminating many of the smaller and less experienced growers, those growing tobacco on unsuitable soil and the inexperienced grower. On the other hand the acreage of the bright flue-cured type was 50 per cent. greater in 1929, although the yield was practically unchanged.

RANCHER EARL'S LIFE IN RINGWOOD

During the last few days the youths of Ringwood, Hampshire, have seen a lonely looking boy riding a very old bicycle.

Sometimes he stops to talk to them or join in their games. This lad who dresses in the manner of working boys in the market town, is 15-year-old Viscount Percevel. He is the son and heir of the Earl of Egmont, who last March came to England from Canada, where he had been for 25 years a rancher and who has just taken up residence at Avon Castle near here.

When I drove up to the door of the castle, writes a correspondent in a London daily paper of recent date, the shuttered windows gave an impression of desolation.

Before I could ring the bell, a boy with tousled hair, his jauntily worn cap on the back of his head, the neck of his shirt flung open, and a large hole in the trousers of his well-worn suit, descended from an ancient bicycle.

He placed the machine against a stone pillar by the door and demanded: "What do you want?"

"To see the earl. Is he home?"

"No," came the boy's answer. "I am looking after the place."

"That's What They Call Me"

"You are not the viscount, the earl's son?" I asked.

"You're right; that's what they call me," he said with a satisfied nod.

Next he informed me that the legal dispute concerning the possession of the castle has been settled. "This place is ours now," he said.

Claimant's Statement

James William Perceval, the 66-year-old baker of Birkbeck-road, Hornsey, N., a claimant to the earldom of Egmont, who says that he is the son of the 6th earl, said to a reporter last night:

"In August I was persuaded to sign a statutory declaration resigning my claim to the earldom, the condition being that my legal expenses would be paid by the present earl. This is the reason that the earl has now obtained possession of Avon Castle.

"I have consulted another solicitor and on his advice have made application to the Poor Persons Committee of the law Society for aid to continue in the prosecution of my claim. I have also received further information from Australia, which I am satisfied strengthens my claim.

"If the Poor Persons' Committee decides that my claim is a good one, I intend to prosecute the claim to the earldom to the fullest possible extent. I do not intend to let it drop."

Wet, Slippery Pavements

call for special care

THE chances for motor accidents multiply greatly on pavements which are wet or covered with snow or ice. Even when equipped with chains, an automobile will not stop in so short a distance as on a dry pavement.

Motorists and pedestrians should keep this fact in mind. Too abrupt application of brakes is the cause of much skidding. Disengaging the clutch at the same time emphasizes the tendency to skid, and also detaches the most efficient brake on the automobile, viz., the engine itself.

In braking on a skiddy pavement close the throttle, take the foot off the accelerator, leave the clutch engaged so that the engine helps the braking process, and apply the brakes GRADUALLY.

Just before the vehicle is brought to a stop, the clutch should be disengaged.

On slippery pavements that are free from traffic, practice this method of controlling your automobile. The skill you acquire may prevent an accident and perhaps save a life.

Remember, too, that your brake bands pick up moisture from the pavement in wet weather. A wet brake is not so efficient as a dry one.

Driving in fall and winter has its dangers both in city and country. By schooling yourself in handling your machine on wet or slippery pavements, your driving will be safer for yourself and for other drivers. Remember your automobile is a machine. It does just what you make it do.

Care, Courtesy, and Common Sense—on the highways at all times—but particularly now when new dangers are present.

PREMIER KING IN THE WEST

Confronted by sweeping reverses in British Columbia and Saskatchewan and by concrete evidence of similar political upheavals in Manitoba and in Alberta, Premier King has been devoting a month in an effort to stem the Western tide against his government.

He has spoken at many points, but nowhere did plastic and pious platitude give way to any promise of what Canada demands, which is the development of Canada for the benefit of Canadians of this and of future generations.

In Alberta the age-old subterfuge of "hearing" that his opponents were employing a "whispering" campaign to stir up racial and religious enmity was resorted to, to make the very appeal to race and creed which he pretended to denounce. His Ministers—some of them—have been doing the same thing in Quebec, Alberta and Saskatchewan so long that it has lost its novelty, if not its insidiousness. Mr. King knows and his Ministers know that from Confederation to the present day the Conservative party has stood resolutely—many times to its great political disadvantage— for the rights of the minorities. He knows and his Ministers know that the Conservative party is no party to any policy of discord.

It is, however, with his lack of frankness in dealing with the fiscal policy of his Government that Canadians, East and West, will find chief fault. If he had bluntly confessed that the heterogeneous support which keeps him in office at once makes it impossible for him to adopt any definite policy designed for the general prosperity and upbuilding of Canada, he would have commanded a degree of sympathy.

Instead he says we must wait to see what further distress to Canadian agriculture and to Canadian industry will be wrought by the tariff revision now before United States Congress.

His own word is that we must do nothing "provocative." What Mr. King naively and entirely disregards is the situation as it stands today— as it stands, irrespective of any further legislation by the United States detrimental to Canadian trade.

That situation—today—is simply this. Canada is selling $520,000,000 worth of goods a year to the United States, the great bulk of which are the natural resources of Canada in raw materials. And Canada is buying $900,000,000 worth of goods a year from the United States, the great bulk of which are high manufactured products —many made from our raw materials. The condition is simple enough and tragic enough to be appreciated by any secondary school child. We are sending out our raw products to the United States to give employment to labor in that country and for every dollar's worth we send there, we are buying back two dollars worth of manufactured goods from the same country.

Mr. King's own figures supply these facts and his own figures show the trek of Canadians southward, unable to find employment in their own country. No one wants to "provoke" the United States, whatever that may mean. As a matter of fact the word is a bit of cultured bunkum employed by the Prime Minister to whitewash a situation which grows more menacing as he lets it drift. It isn't any matter of "provocation." It is a matter of the welfare of this Dominion. As Canadians we have the same right to legislate for ourselves and in our own interests as have the people of the United States. We not only have the right, we have a solemn duty to do so.

There is no excuse for delay. At least seven years ago steps should have been taken to insure to Canada the industrial development which we have built up in foreign countries. Visualize what the addition of $500,000,000 would mean to the annual payroll of Canada. It would be a livelihood for 2,500,000 Canadians, and addition to the home market of that number for agriculture as well as for other industry and for commerce.

The situation today, not next month or next year, demands immediate remedy. Glib phrases, whether they deal with "provocation" or with "whispering" will not pass for statesmanship. The United States will be monkeying with its tariff quite willing to wait that long before doing anything for Canada.

DORLAND

Winter seems to be setting in early this year. Hay Bay is frozen over and the ground white with snow.—Unless there is a thaw soon there will be a serious shortage of water. The rain last week started creeks and wells, but there is no mean supply.—Nearly every one attended the poultry fair last week. There was some disappointment that prizes were not higher, but on the whole people were well pleased. The usual congestion of traffic was avoided, despite the large crowd, and little time wasted.—Messrs. J. A. C. Price and W. A. Price, of Mountain Grove visited at W. J. Magee's last week—Don't forget to reserve the evening of December 13 for the W.M.S. pageant and that of December 20th for the United Church S. S. Xmas Concert.

BETHEL

We are having real winter weather at time of writing and with some snow. Quite a number from this neighborhood attended the poultry days in Napanee last week and report fair prices.—Mr. and Mrs. Arley Clark and family spent Sunday at Hartington with the latter's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Argyle Goslyn.—The neighbors and friends were shocked to learn of the sudden death of our rural mail carrier, Mr. George Riddle, who passed away at his home in Colebrook on November 23rd. Much sympathy is extended to his wife and family.—Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson have returned home, having spent the past week with their daughter, Maud.—Mrs. N. N. Sutton is in Toronto taking in the Royal Winter Fair.—Mr. and Mrs. Mc-Knight and daughter, Jean, spent Saturday in Kingston.

THUS TO REVISIT—

By Roger Dataller.

To Mr. Harpingden the gulf that lay between manager and ex-manager had never seemed so slight as in the moment when he laid his hand upon the gate that separated the western flank of the colliery. Impossible to believe that in the narrow compass of a week all the farewell speeches had been delivered, the farewell wine dispatched, and the farewell silver from which it had been drunk set finally in dark reflection upon the big sideboard at home. "For thirty-five years' service and association with the colliery—" Well—

Within the darkness, for it was late evening, Mr. Harpingden drew off his white gloves. "Better put these out of the way," he thought. Such things struck significantly even in the blackest night. Besides, one's hands would be decidly freer without them—that is, if one really intended pursuing the adventure? And why not, indeed? Little harm surely in so slight and innocent a visitation. To slip in and out of the colliery premises would be comparatively easy. He knew the runs. Why not?

When a yard or two farther at a turning of the cinder path the valley opened out before his eyes Mr. Harpingden caught his breath, still in the old wonder. There with so marvellous a flowering, in tiny groups and strings of unwavering brilliance, the electric glowed—here in the towering lamp-room, there in the steam-driving engine-house, or where the manifold windows of the screening building lighted river-boat moored securely within the dark reaches of the valley. Burst of steam like veils of faint silver drew from time to time across that bright-ness, and in the scattered outbuildings pools of light from oil-lamps made further enticement. Mr. Harpingden pushed on.

For a few hundred yards the path fell steeply between lines of scraggy hawthorn, and a little farther down with the dismal flanking of a rubble-tip. One walked with difficulty here for the rains had worn a tiny gulley in the middle of the path, and the mud was washed bare of cinder. Mr. Harpingden did not complain. He knew that of the colliery premises this was the least frequented, and that in all probability he would be able to make the welcome shelter of the sidings unobserved. Soon the dark presence of the coal trucks, in bulky mathematical sequence, ran up against the stars. Better stick to the waggons he decided. With these for cover one might penetrate the heart of the overground premises, unchallenged even by watchmen or by the number of workpeople whose duties might bring them thus far in ranging. Already in his mind he was tracing imaginary conversation. "Catched old Harpingden last night—poking about I' the sidings. Soft old beggar, him. Can't keep away from th' pit even now." Well, whatever happened they would-not catch old Harpingden either. He was still spry enough for that. And he lowered his shoulders and stepped underneath the string of wagons. The hard, cold ring of a buffer caught him as he raised himself to full height. "Ha-a-a" he grunted. Not so young as he once was. Then he laughed. It was good to smell the grease again, to hear the thin squeal of the screening machinery, and to rub the dirt from one's eyes as he seemed to be doing in this moment. The way opened clear enough. To the right ran a dim area of timber stacks, and beyond this—little distance—the bright performation of the lamproom windows. Mr. Harpingden stole ahead, working his way to the darker and more distant side of the lamproom. Here the smart clash of briskly handled lamps arose, and, in a moment, singing. A hand arose above the lower panes of frosted glass, beating time with the stump of a brush. Mr. Harpingden smiled grimly as he saw it, envisaging the scene in the possibilities of but a week ago. At the corner of the lamp-room he paused, his eyes upon the blotch of white radiance where the cages came to a standstill and spilled out their dark treasure. The engine pounded and the steel rope slapped slightly as it ran through an aperture into the engine-house. But Harpingden frowned. "They're not drawing fast enough," he muttered. "Faster, you fellows—faster!"

He was still muttering when the metal doors of the adjoining building clashed open and a dark figure appeared in the aperture. Was it possible that he was being observed? He slipped among the timber stacks, pausing at last to watch. Softly now the doors were closed, and then in the silence a little cough lifted. "Ha, ha," breathed Mr. Harpingden, recognising the familiar whine of the watchman. "Daggless—old fool." He backed still farther into his fastness as a bright ring of light shot out and ran along the wall of logs. The rays elongated and disappeared, but the footsteps shuffled nearer. Retreat so soon? Mr. Hardingden, with a tolerant little smile, took the avenue leading along the way he had come. Nothing to fear from Dagless, anyhow. All the same, acting on a sudden impulse, he broke into a cautious trot and quickened his pace considerably as he heard a steady pounding behind him. Really, the situation was beginning to verge on the ridiculous. Was it the watchman after all?

Mr. Harpingden was panting heavily as he made the shelter of the last thorn barrier, and, moving to the field-path, stood securely awaiting what might be. There was the crunching of ashes. From the dark ranking of waggons first a cough and then a voice arose. So it was Dagless, then? And what was the old fool saying? "I know where ye are, I tell ye. Ye can't deceive me."

Mr. Harpingden smiled in his security. "That's a lie," he chuckled softly, as he pressed deeper in the grass. "What else?"

"Be off with ye, now, an' take yerself where you've got a right to be." And Dagless thumped hollowly upon an empty waggon door. "Don't let me catch you a-prowlin' aroun' these sidings again—do ye ear?"

Mr. Harpingden had heard. His chuckling ceased suddenly, and though the chill assertion of the soggy ditch had begun to strike through his trousers he did not move. No sound came from where the watchman stood. Presently the slow, authoritative footsteps edged away, stopped again rather threateningly, then passed once more in the direction of the colliery.

Mr. Harpingden kept very still until the faintest sound had died away. Then he raised himself with a tremulous little sigh, taking no account of it again; never again."

OBITUARY

Erastus R. Sills

One of the best known and most highly respected citizens of Napanee passed to his reward on Tuesday, in the person of Mr. Erastus R. Sills, at the age of 78 years. For the past few months the deceased had been in very poor health, he having been a sufferer from heart trouble. On several occasions he was confined to the house, and to his bed, but rallied and was able to be out and meet his friends. A few weeks ago he was again taken seriously ill, the attack being the severest of any which he had previously had. His illness began to take a critical aspect as the days went by and for the past week, owing to his weakened constitution and advanced age, little hope was held out for his recovery.

Born in the Township of Richmond in the year 1851, the deceased was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sills, his parents being of United Empire Loyalist stock. For 68 years he resided on the old homestead, which is situated a few miles from Napanee, and which he helped to erect. During the years which followed, after he left school, he pursued farming, in which he was most successful. About ten years ago he decided to retire from the active duties of the farm and came to Napanee to enjoy a well earned competence. The deceased was the last surviving member of a family of five, his two brothers, Ibri and Uriah, and two sisters, Mrs. James Empey and Mrs. Michael Pringle, having joined the great majority. The deceased, in his younger days, took an active interest in municipal affairs and was elected a member of the council of his native township. In politics he was a strong Liberal. He was also a sterling christian and a church leader all his life. Of the original official board of the church of which he was a faithful steward throughout his life, he was one of two of the original board, the sole surviving member being Mr. Chas. Stevens, who is now 82 years of age.

The former Western Methodist Church, now Grace United Church, never had a more devoted servant than Mr. Sills, and, health permitting, he was always in his accustomed seat on the Sabbath Day. A number of years ago he and his good wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary and had he lived would have observed their diamond anniversary in another two or three years.

Of a family of six, four survive: Aylsworth, of Toronto, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia; Wellington, of Napanee; Garfield, on the old homestead and one daughter, Mrs. Will Ballance of Strathcona. Two daughters, Mrs. W. A. Davis and Mrs. John Fennell, of Oshawa, passed away some years ago. To the bereaved widow and family, as well as his many relatives, the sympathy of the community is extended.

The funeral took place on Friday afternoon from his late residence, to Grace United Church, of which he was a devoted member for many years. The esteem in which he was held in the community was evidenced by the large attendance of relatives and friends present to pay their tribute to one who was greatly honored. Fitting eulogies were given by the pastor, Rev. W. P. Woodger, and Rev. E. N. Baker, Principal Emeritus of Albert College, Belleville, who was a former pastor and a close friend of the deceased. Mrs. Harold Denison contributed a very appropriate solo. Interment took place at Riverside cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs. F. L. Hooper, Wm. Dunbar, C. A. Wiseman, A. M. Caton, O. S. Reddick and J. W. Hambly.

OBITUARY

Margaret Dunlop Sherlock

The sad news was announced of the sudden death in Toronto of Margaret Dunlop, formerly of Napanee, and wife of J. M. Sherlock, the celebrated tenor, who was also a former Kingstonian, leaving here many years ago to take up his residence in Toronto where he made a distinguished name for himself in musical circles.

Mrs. Sherlock had many friends both here and in Toronto and the news of her sudden death will be a genuine shock to them. She was a kindly, gracious, Christian woman, noted for her benevolent and charitable acts. The family here was one of the oldest in the city, with the family homestead at 40 Rideau street, Kingston, where Miss Rachel Dunlop, the last surviving member of the family now lives.

The funeral will be by motor from the Sherlock family home, "Eastcliff," 22 Kingston Road, Toronto, to arrive at Cataraqui cemetery on Wednesday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock.

AUTOIST HURT IN CRASH TORONTO DRIVER HELD

Oshawa, Nov. 26.—Jack Radowelsky, Bay street, Toronto, is in Whitby jail charged with criminal negligence as the outcome of a bad smash here tonight when it is alleged that he cut out of traffic and crashed headon into a car driven by H. R. Clarke of Collins Bay, Kingston. Radowelsky, who was driving east, it is alleged to have turned out to pass another car and on the instant crashed into Clarke who was coming in the opposite direction.

O. H. Clarke, father of the driver of the west bound car, was taken to the Oshawa General hospital suffering from severe cuts and bruises that demanded immediate medical attention. The force of the impact hurled him through the windshield of the car Radowelsky, who was alone, was also cut and required four stitches in his lip but was otherwise uninjured.

P. C. McCammond of the Oshawa motorcycle squad investigated the crash and immediately placed Radowelsky under arrest. Bail was set at $5,000. Hospital authorities stated that Clarke was progressing well and was not seriously injured. The crash occurred shortly after one this afternoon. Both cars were practically demolished by the impact.

Don't take chances on your car freezing up. Our 75 cent per gallon mixture protects to 30 below zero. At Hooper's Drug Store. All testing free.

STARTED ON DRAGON HUNT--FINDS TREASURE

Berlin—One must go back to the darkest of the dark ages, to the days of the Nibelungen and Siegfried, to find a match for the tale that has just perturbed out of the Bulgarian backwoods village of Braca. Apart from the fact that the villagers are now begining to doubt that there ever was a dragon, because no one can be found who really saw it, the tale is complete.

Several months ago a herder of woodsmen working in the mountains about Braca brought down to the village a report that a huge looking animal of one sort or another was lurking about the summit of one of the mountains. It was suggested that the animal might be a dragon. Never doubting this for a moment, the peasants of the neighborhood and the villagers, including even the most prominent residents, took up the story and passed it about.

With its very retelling the dragon became larger and more ferocious, the flames it threw off more poisonous, and the fire it spat from its gargantuan mouth ever hotter. It was soon possible to describe with minuteness the cave in which the beast dwelled and, ultimately, the size and the nature of the treasure which it was guarding. There were, to be exact, just eight cartloads of purest gold and twenty cartloads of precious jewels hidden away in the deepest recesses of the cave.

As might have been expected some of the brighter and more courageous young men of the village wished to organize an expedition to slay the dragon and recover the treasure. Eight wagons loaded with gold and twenty chests filled with gems were not to be sniffed at. A retired colonel of the Bulgarian army was found willing to head the Siegfriedian expedition. He and the widow of a wealthy landowner agreed also to finance the party, the men who gave birth to the idea having been careful to point out that a first-class dragon hunt would require expensive as well as extensive preparations.

Virtually everything was set for the big hunt; the widow had given much of her personal fortune; the colonel had followed suit, and had also provided himself, among other things with a gas mask with which to protect himself against the poisonous vapors from the dragon. Then, unfortunately, the colonel's wife happend to find among his effects a few papers which revealed to her for the first time that he actually was to lead the expedition. Fearing for his safety, she took the papers to her brother, an attorney in a nearby city, to solicit his aid in attempting to dissuade the colonel from carrying out what the wife conceived to be exceedingly dangerous project. Albeit the lawyer saw quite another story in the colonel's papers.

As a result of his investigation the dragon hunt ended in a criminal court chamber instead of ending in the mountains. The men who originated the idea and who took charge of the expedition's funds were sent to prison on charges of obtaining money under false pretences.

ELEPHANT LIKED SEASIDE TOO WELL TO LEAVE FRIENDS

Trumpeting her defiance, Rosie, an elephant loaned to Skegness Amusement Park for the holiday season, refused to leave the town.

A special elephant travelling box arrived in a goods siding at the station, and Rosie was led there, being expected to embark decilely for her winter menagerie engagements. But Rosie delighted the 60 children who had followed her by sitting and refusing to budge.

The station staff took the matter in hand and an official ordered the elephant Pullman car to be shunted down the passenger platform.

A Little Whisper.

The trainer whispered in Rosie's ear, but she remained unresponsive, and after two hours the trainer led her back to the park.

The news quickly spread among the carnival visitors that another effort was to be made the next day, and this time over 1,000 children followed Rosie to the station

Her trainer and his staff wheedled, bullied, pulled, pushed, and held out loaves, cabbage leaves and other choice tit-bits, but Rosie signalled her refusal by flapping her ears.

To the great delight of the rapidly growing crowd Rosie stood on her head and did every trick she had been taught in her circus.

In response to an urgent S.O.S., Mahomet, the elephant trainer of the menagerie to which Rosie belongs, motored from Mexborough to Skegness.

On learning that Rosie had been treated every day by a friendly hotel proprietor to three gallons of ale, he ordered a bucketful to be placed in Rosie's travelling box, together with tomatoes and other delicacies.

Chains were thrown over Rosie, and at midnight she was led once more to the Railway station, accompanied by a retinue of attendants.

The lure of the ale proved stronger than that of the Skegness ozone, and Rosie entered her box without a protest.

"GOLDEN AGE" FOR HOGS

The "golden age" of hog production is between the third and seventh months when the weight attained should be about 220 to 230 pounds. Each month from its birth it takes progressively more feed to produce a pound of pain. But between the third and seventh month, when the rate of gain per day and cost of gain per pound are combined, give the most mum productive efficiency. After that age the combined increasing cost of gain per pound and lowered value due to overweight for the better grades make it unprofitable for the producer to feed hogs longer.

HAY BAY CHURCH AND MACDONALD PARK

(By Allen Ross Davis.)

When "The Christian Guardian" began its career in 1829, the Hay Bay Methodist Church—the first in Canada to had been erected thirty-seven years and many distinguished ministers had succeeded William Losee, the original missionary responsible for that United Empire Loyalist chapel in the wilderness of Adolphustown. Some thirty preachers had come and gone since 1792, when Rev. Isaac Puffer was sent in 1816 to the Bay of Quinte circuit, and presided the following year on the 20th of August, at that memorable quarterly meeting, where ten young men and women were drowned in Hay Bay, when their overladen boat, containing eighteen passengers, on their way to church, sank within a short distance of the shore. Their piercing cries alarmed the worshippers, but only eight of the number were rescued.

Forty-one years elapsed in that prosperous rural community, with faithful ministers coming and going, and leaving their mark upon the spiritual life of the whole Bay of Quinte district, when, in 1860, the Hay Bay Church was sold for a pittance, abandoned and forgotten, and became a farm storehouse and nesting place for mice and bats. Thus it remained half a century, when, in 1910, through the liberality of Toronto citizens and the Bay of Quinte Conference, the grim old Mother of Methodism became alarmed one day at the sound of hammers and saws and strange voices, which, however, proved to be constructive and friendly, and assured a longer lease of life. That partial renovation, with an expenditure of $1,500, sufficed to preserve large sound timbers from decay, and to afford a rough interior for public worship up to the present.

Any one familiar with the biographies and speeches of the first prime minister of Canada, Sir John A Macdonald, will recall the fact that he spent some of his happiest boyhood days with his parents and two sisters, in a frame house on Hay Bay adjoining this old Methodist church, shortly after the family emigrated from Glasgow to Kingston in 1822. Here Hugh Macdonald kept a country-store in one room of the house, while the children walked three miles to the Adolphustown village school. The rigid discipline from contact with the sturdy United Empire Loyalist descendants of that school helped to tame the high-tempered mischievous Scots lad, nine to ten years old, and to fit him for that wonderful self-confidence and leadership he developed in manhood years, at the bar in Kingston, and on the floor of Parliament.

After a few years the Macdonald family returned to Kingston, and the Hay Bay home fell a prey to flames. A full century had passed, and Canada's lamented premier had lain in his grave in Cataraqui cemetery thirty-six years, when a Liberal Government at Ottawa, under Mackenzie King, erected a beautiful cairn suitably inscribed, on the site, and out of the foundation stones of the Macdonald boyhood home, as another tribute to the memory of that illustrious statesman.

Thus we have two historic landmarks in the Centre of Canada, on the Bay of Quinte, skirted on the north shore by both of our transcontinental railways; and the latter in a few years will be hauling many passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific, enquiring the way to Hay Bay United Empire Loyalist Church and the Macdonald Cairn. The motor agents from Cobourg to Kingston will need to begin full soon to show many tourists the water and land route to these landmarks in one of the earliest settlements of Canada.

In order to make those landmarks enduring and attractive the committee concerned have again been making an appeal for funds to complete the Hay Bay Church, and fit up its grounds, together with the MacDonald plot, into a respectable park, stretching a thousand feet along Hay Bay between the shore and roadway. There has been a generous response to private appeals to citizens of Toronto and the Bay of Quinte Conference of The United Church of Canada. About three thousands dollars are required to carry out the plans the committee have in view. The work is now under way and a wider appeal is being made for subscriptions to decently complete these two memorials, which all Canadians will desire to see as future decades come and go.

This interment has been on foot for twenty years, and now when the Premier, the Chief Justice of Ontario, leading citizens in the financial world of Toronto, and, the people in the east as far as Napanee, send in generous cheques with words of approval in response to personal appeals by the committee, like-minded citizens of Canada may rest assured that any cheques sent in through The New Outlook, for the completion of the work in hand, will be assured—will be most gratefully received by the committee, and applied in the most economical way, and will hasten the consummation of an interesting piece of State memorial yet to be reopened and unveiled.

United Empire Loyalist descendants, even from Chicago, and readers of The New Outlook, have written to say they would be glad to contribute to such good cause when the proper time came. Kindly assure them, Mr. Editor, that the psychological hour has struck, and fits in nicely with your celebration of the centenary of the founding of The Christian Guardian in 1829, with the heroic Rev. Egerton Ryerson as first editor, whose clear ringing voice was heard from time to time from over the walls of the Hay Bay Church, where, it is to be hoped, great Canadians may still be heard preaching and changing truth a century hence. 47 Maitland Road East, Toronto.—The New Outlook.

Maisonneuve's Fight With the Indians

Montreal, to-day, the largest city in the Dominion, was founded as a mission station in 1642, by a little band of pious devotees, who planted this outpost of the Christian faith in the heart of a savage heathen world. A fort was built near the shore, low down in the present city, in the heart of what is the now wholesale and shipping district. Then, all was forest, broken only by the small clearing around the fort.

Life in Ville-Marie, as they called Montreal then, was full of daily peril. Iroquois lurked in the surrounding forest, falling upon wood-choppers and workers in the fields. On the river, their canoes hid among the reeds or under the tree-clad banks to dash in swift pursuit of the solitary voyageur or fisherman.

But their Governor, Paul de Chomedy, Sieur de Maisonneuve, was an ideal leader for the crusading colonists. He was a soldier, in the prime of life, pious, brave, and self-sacrificing. But he was also prudent. He knew that the settlers were no match for the Indians in bush fighting, and he refused to allow them to venture in pursuit of their elusive foes. Constant watch was kept, but the fort's most efficient sentinel was a dog, named Pilotte, who with her puppies, scouted the edge of the woods, and barked a loud warning whenever she scented the presence of hidden Indians.

Irritated by the continental ambuscade and siege, Maisonneuve's men clamored to be led out against their enemies and taunted him with cowardice when he refused.

At last, one day in March, 1644, Pilotte gave warning, and Maisonneuve granted their desire. He called for thirty men, and led them out to the attack. In the woods a swarm of Iroquois met them and shot at them from every side. The French fought stubbornly, but at length, under the hot fire, they began to fall back. Maisonneuve, a pistol in each hand, found him down; but they wished to take him alive and torture him as a trophy of their victory. Slowly he retreated, till, in sight of the gate of the fort, through which the French were crowding, the Iroquois chief dashed at Maisonneuve. He fired but his pistol missed. The Indian dodged and rushed again. Maisonneuve fired his other pistol. The Chief fell dead. Pilotte at his heels, still barking defiance at the Indians. The dog and her master had won the honors of the day.

On the Place d'Armes, in the heart of the city of Montreal, near the spot where the fight took place, Herbert's magnificent monument today commemorates Maisonneuve's exploit. The picturesque figure of the Governor crowns the pedestal, while in one of the groups which flank the base crouches the alert and faithful Pilotte.—(Copyright by C. W. Jefferys, R.C.A.)

DAIRY PRODUCTS OUTPUT SHOWS STEADY INCREASE

The total output of dairy products in Canada since 1921 has continued to rise. From year to year there have been fluctuations in the relative amounts of the different products manufactured due to variations in market values of these commodities, but on the whole the increase has been steady. Naturally milk tends to go into that line of manufacturing most profitable to producers, so that the total production of milk is the index of the state of the industry as a whole. The following table gives the production from 1921 to 1927, which is the latest year for which figures are available.

1923—	11 765 564 229	411 794 743	233 629 638
1924—	12 045 078 272	421 577 734	234 629 363
1925—	12 539 076 284	433 867 601	266 901 793

These figures are made up from the milk equivalent of the creamery butter, cheese, and other manufactured products and the milk and cream exported, the quantities of which are definitely known, together with an estimated quantity of milk and cream used for direct consumption and that which goes into dairy butter. Because of these estimations, which can be checked only in the decennial census years, strict accuracy is not claimed for the yearly totals, but as the same basis of calculation is being used every year, it is believed that increases shown from year to year are fairly reliable.

Whereas, as shown, above, the increase in the quantity of milk produced has been steady and substantial it has not been large enough during the last two years to meet the greatly increased home consumption of milk and its products. These home requirements in 1928 exceeded those of 1926 by the equivalent of 70,000,000 pounds of butter or 143,000,000 pounds of cheese. There has not been any large increase in the output of creamery butter in Canada during the past two or three years. The increase in the eastern provinces have been offset by decreases in the Prairie Provinces due to the pre-occupation of the farmers with their big wheat crops. In the autumn of 1928, when the prairie grain crop did not meet the high expectations formed, there was a revival of interest in dairying, and since November there has been a substantial gain. From January 1 to April 30 1929, the increase in dairy products in Saskatchewan was 11 per cent. as compared with the same period in 1928.

The price of Canadian cheese has been relatively high because of the premium which it brings in the world market over any other cheese of the same type. There has been a remarkable improvement in the quality of Canadian cheese in recent years under the grading system. In 1928 the percentage of first-grade cheese for all of Canada was 92.1, as compared with 78 per cent. in 1923, the year in which the grading system was inaugurated. The percentage of cheese made in central and western Ontario which reached the first grade in 1928 was 97.2. This improvement in quality, coupled with a new demand in the Old Country for high-grade Cheddar cheese (the type made in Canada) owing to the rapid increase in the production of this type of cheese in England and Scotland, has placed Canadian cheese in the most favorable position it has occupied since the export trade began in 1886. There was a substantial increase in the output of cheese in 1928 as compared with the previous year.

. . . if one slips . . . the call fails

THERE are three people to every telephone call. If any one of them makes a mistake the call fails. It may be the operator, it may be the person calling, it may be the person called.

There are over one million local calls in Ontario and Quebec every day which fail—"Line's Busy" —"No Answer"—"No one on the line now, sir"— "Wrong Number".

These uncompleted calls are a serious matter. They mean two million minutes a day wasted — congestion of traffic — constant irritation — a handicap to efficient service.

Some of these cannot be avoided and some of them are due to our own errors, and many of them are due to lack of co-operation by the other two parties.

*We are constantly reducing our own errors and we are constantly striving to give the best possible telephone service at lowest possible cost. As part of this effort we are now giving publicity to common faults in telephone usage in the hope that there may be mutual endeavour to secure and maintain maximum efficiency.

It takes three people to complete a call — if one makes a mistake, the call fails.

*It is costing more than $27,000,000 this year to extend and improve telephone services in Ontario and Quebec.

CANADIANS ARE LAMB-EATERS

Canadian lamb is a marketable product which is rapidly growing in popular demand. Canadian consumers are lamb eaters the year round and consequently the production, marketing and distributing of lamb must be so organized that the consumer demand will be catered to at all seasons of the year.

Unfortunately production and marketing are not sufficiently organized at the present time, and the industry is faced with the depression of competition from imported lamb which this year has already reached a volume of over 3,000,000 pounds.

Medium weight carcasses weighing from 35 to 45 pounds with a preference for the lighter weights is what the market wants today. Such carcases are produced from lambs weighing 80 to 100 pounds at the farm. Finish, too, is important. Grain feeding in Canada is essential if choice, well finished carcases are to be produce in volume.

About 35 years ago he married Miss Ida Lucas, who with four children (Grace) Mrs. Kinkle, Cartierville, Sask., (Beatrice) Mrs. J. Lewis, Bethel, Harold, of Boston, and Alex, at home, together with two sisters, Mrs. D. Kingsbury, Desercrito and Mrs. T. Townsend, Colebrook, are left to mourn.

Cattle running at large on the highways can be impounded and action taken against the owners. This may seem harsh but it is better than for some motorist to have an accident by trying to avoid a collision.

A farmer having very light land suffered much from his surface soil blowing and wasting away. Now he draws manure out and leaves it spread on the surface. He says that he saves his soil as well as enriches it and generously acts that this idea be passed on to others likewise situated.

The movement of clover and grass seeds is reported slow and generally at lower prices than last Fall. With the exception of timothy and sweet clover the production in Canada and the United States is reported larger than last year. This fact, coupled with a good crop in Europe, has resulted in a slow export demand and lower prices to Canadian growers. In Ontario it is estimated that about 50 per cent. of the alsike crop is not yet sold, 65 to 75 per cent. of the red clover and 25 per cent. of the sweet clover.

RATES OF SEEDING

In an experiment conducted at O.A.C. for a period of eight years the results show that the greatest yield per acre with winter wheat was obtained from sowing one and three-quarters bushels of seed to the acre. When the amount of seed sown per acre was taken into consideration the yield at the one and three-quarters bushels rate of seeding was only slighly greater than that obtained from sowing one and one-half bushels per acre.

ONTARIO'S BIG SHARE

Ontario made a generous contribution to Canada's hog supply in 1928 the sales of this province totalling 1,158,618 or 54 per cent. of the aggregate for the entire Dominion. The County of York made by far the heaviest contribution to the total, the marketings from that district amounting to 126,469 head. Perth was well up with 97,060 odd, and Kent, Grey, Lambton, Middlesex, Bruce and Oxford also made notable contributions. The average by counties would be 28,653 head.

900 TURKEYS RAISED

Approximately 900 turkeys have been raised at the Ontario Government Turkey Farm near Forestville in Norfolk County during the past year. About one-half of these will come under the axe prior to the holiday season. The better type of birds, however, are retained for breeding purposes. Very valuable information with respect to turkey raising, particularly the conditions under which turkeys thrive, has been obtained since the farm was established a few years ago.

PERSONAL ATTENTION NEEDED

Egg-eating among chickens is largely a vice that can by be discouraged with a very little care and attention. Leaving the birds in colony houses after they have started laying will start the habit; too few nests in the laying house will force the hen to lay on the floor and the first ace quack to realize the palatability of their own product. The easiest way to end the trouble is to stay in the pen for half a day, locate the ring-leaders and remove them. This treatment is usually 100 per cent. effective.

SMUT IN WHEAT

It is estimated that the two smuts, stinking smut or bunt, and loose smut, damage the winter wheat crop in Ontario more than $1,000,00 annually. Much of this loss can be prevented by smut treatments. Stinking smut of wheat the more serious disease of the two, can be controlled by using formalin, bluestone or copper carbonate dust. Loose smut of wheat cannot be controlled by these treatments. Where the crop has been damaged by loose smut the grower should obtain seed from a crop that is free from this fungous disease.

BAY CIRCUIT WEST W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting was held on Wednesday, November 13th at the home of Mrs. Wilfrid McCabe with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. A. C. Parks was in the chair.

The meeting opened with hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," followed with prayer by president. Mrs. F. Parks read Psalm 100 and responsive reading followed. Another hymn was sung and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved after which came the roll call and each member that attended the Convention was asked to tell what she thought was the most important thing to remember from the Convention. Mrs. C. B. Parks gave an interesting talk on "Missionary work in China." Mrs. Ezra Huffman, Mrs. F. Parks, Miss D. Spragett and Mrs. L. F. Parks all gave short readings. Mrs. Nolan and Mrs. Ratz then favored the gathering with a piano duet. After its conclusion Rev. Beckel explained a chapter in the study book being followed by a hymn and closing prayer. Refreshments were served and a vote of thanks was tendered to the hostess for her hospitality. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Jas. Robertson.

HOCKEY

The O.H.A. Executive met in Toronto on Friday night of last week to draw up the schedule for different districts. Napanee was placed in Group No. 1, Section B, along with the following clubs: Queen's University, of Kingston, Belleville Hockey Club and Trenton Hockey Club. Mr George Van Horne, of Kingston, was appointed convener and a meeting will be held at Kingston in the near future to settle the dates for the games. Mr. Harry Roe will represent the Napanee Hockey Club at this meeting.

President Butler of the O.H.A. announced that all groups in the Junior series must declare a winner not later than February 3rd, 1930.

Manager Roe has been working hard with his boys at the Armouries every night and every one of the twenty odd boys who are turning out are staying in line for the full hour. That shows that the boys are getting into good shape for there are no dull moments at these training periods and the players must be in condition to go for the full sixty minutes of play if necessary.

Mr Reg. Douglas has taken over the management of the skating rink for the winter and has already started to make ice. Ben Lairy is in charge of the ice making and they promise to have a good sheet for hockey practice and skating at the earliest possible date.

Season tickets for skating are being reduced to be within the reach of everyone and everything points to a big year at the rink.

NAPANEE POULTRY DAYS

The Napanee Annual Poultry Days were as usual days of crowded streets, busy stores and anxious sellers and buyers.

People came from far and near to dispose of their poultry at the fair, which has now become recognized as the leading poultry fair in Canada.

The prices were lower than a year ago and the total amount received by the farmer was less than last year by about seven thousand dollars, while the tonage was one ton over last year.

Buyers report the quality of unusually uniform high grade and were pleased with the poultry they bought.

The weather which was unusually bad may have prevented larger sales. But all in all the two big days were successful both to the buyers and the farmers.

Price paid	Tonnage	Cash Value

1925	125½	68,000

1927	175½	89,500
1928	133	77,000
1929	134½	70,000

The general quality was good, some exceptionally fine lots of chickens. Turkeys were scare, but of fairly good finish. Very few geese and ducks.

SCREEN SPEAKS

Opening on Saturday with talking and sound pictures, Wonderland was crowded to the doors for matinee and evening performances. For the past ten days experts have been installing the equipment for the Northern Electric Sound System, the best that can be procured. The opening headliner was "Broadway Scandals," one of the latest releases, and was exceptionally good. In addition to the feature picture a Movietone News and a comedy, "A Happy Birthday," was shown. The music throughout was good, especially the two tenor and baritone solos. The interior of the Theatre has all been redecorated and is now one of the most comfortable and best equipped theatres in Eastern Ontario. Mr. Tustin is to be congratulated and we are sure the public will show their appreciation by their patronage, for his enterprise in providing them with the latest and best in pictures.

RE-OPENING SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, BATH

Large congregations were present at the morning and evening services in St. John's Church, Bath, when it was re-opened for service on Sunday last, November 24th. The rector, Rev. W. G. Swayne, celebrated the Holy Eucharist and preached in the morning and in the evening, the Very Rev. Dr. Craig, Dean of Ontario, delivered a clear and powerful sermon, setting forth the duty and true nature of real worship. The Rev. W. H. Smith Portsmouth, assisted at the evening service. The stately little church has just been beautifully decorated. The colors are soft and restful, and the ecclesiastical designs admirably conceived and most skillfully executed. The work reflects great credit on the artists, Messrs. P. C. Brown and Sons, Willowdale, Toronto.

"GREAT DIVIDE" ON ITS WAY TO WONDERLAND THEATRE

The First National screen version of "The Great Divide," known as "The great American drama," has been acquired by the Wonderland Theatre and will open Saturday with Dorothy Mackaill in the feature role. "The Great Divide," as a play, ran for many years and broke box office records throughout this country and in Europe. In the screen version, Miss Mackaill portrays an emancipated, cocktail imbibing modern girl, the type of role in which she has had such success in her recent pictures. She has an opportunity for splendid dramatic work when she is kidnapped by the man she both fears and hates, and is brought out into the silent desert of Arizona. The Vitaphone talking scenes amid this beautiful country are a feature of the picture.

"THAT'S THAT"—MUSICAL COMEDY AT ARMOURIES DECEMBER 5th, 6th

The cast and choruses have been busily rehearsing for the past two weeks for "That's That," the musical comedy which is to be staged at the Armouries on Thursday and Friday nights, December 5th and 6th, and promises a finished production is ready for the public. There are 125 people in the show, consisting of local talent, who have had the faithful study of their various roles and dances have become quite proficient and will appear with the ease and grace of professionals.

The story of the play is based on the love affair of Kenneth Neilson, son of a wealthy bottle manufacturer, who while posing as a lifeguard at Palm Beach, rescues and falls in love with Jean Clark, a Palm Beach society girl. Wishing to continue his romance under his assumed name of Kenneth Jones he does not reveal his true identity, and when his father and sister arrive at the beach, he manages to elude his father but is discovered by his sister. Just as he is embracing her, he is discovered by Eloise and being unable to explain matters many complications arise. Of course Mrs. Southweld, Eloise's aunt and chaperone frowns on the romantic inclinations of her niece oh a mere lifeguard and of course, she doesn't know that Kenneth is the son of the country's most prominent millionaires, John Neilson.

Humorous phases are added by the romance of Eddie Dewey, a young man from the states with his former sweetheart, Letitia, frim his home town, and Martin Morris, Kenneth's room-mate at college, with Nanette, Kenneth's flirtatious sister. Building the comedy further are Mamie and Mickie, sweethearts from the East side of New York, who are taking in the sights at Palm Beach. Situation after situation build up a riot of comedy and the play seems with interest until the final curtain.

And so at last we're going to have an O.H.A. team.

* * * * *

And Junior at that. Well, boys, there's wishing you the best of luck in the world. You are in pretty fast company but championship teams have come from smaller towns than Napanee.

* * * * *

Remember when Desoto won the Interscholastic Championship!

* * * * *

I have heard more than one fan say that he'd rather watch a good junior game than either senior or pro. It's fast and clean, and while it may not be as good hockey as senior, it provides plenty of thrills.

* * * * *

What this town needs is a winning hockey team. Then perhaps the local hockey experts would get together and put up a good rink down town with adequate seating accomodation. It would give the teams a chance to get a crowd and end up the season somewhere else besides in the hole.

* * * * *

But what a game it would have to be to get a crowd up to the local grounds with a blizzard like we had last week making—a fur coat feel like a lace curtain. The weather man doesn't always watch the hockey schedule when he is delivering the goods either.

What about a senior team. The Toronto papers say that Napanee has entered a loop with Belleville as member. Nobody seems to know much about it around here. There isn't enough of the old game around to [illegible] play the survivors of Prince Edward League and they play-off with the winners of the Valley League. How about it?

ROD AND GUN MAGAZINE SOLD

An old established local institution of national fame, the outdoor life magazine, Rod and Gun and Canadian Silver Fox News, is leaving Woodstock. W. J. Taylor, prominent publisher, announced today the sale of the magazine to a new company, Rod and Gun Limited, with headquarters at Gardenvale, P.Q., near Montreal. The December issue of the magazine, which appeared on November 15, was the last issue to be printed in the local plant. The January number will be printed and published at its new home in Gardenvale.

The departure of Rod and Gun from Woodstock will be felt as a keen loss by citizens of Woodstock. Apart from its position in business activities of the city, it has for years been the means of advertising the name of Woodstock in many corners of the globe as well as in every part of Canada and through the United States. Many a man abroad on mentioning of Woodstock has at some time been countered with the remark, "Why that's where Rod and Gun is published."

Rod and Gun occupies a respected position among Canadian magazines. The only magazine devoted to the typically Canadian recreations of fishing and hunting and outdoor life generally, its appeal has been very popular not only in Canada but in the United States, where it has a larger circulation than any other Canadian magazine. It has for many years enjoyed the reputation of being one of the leading magazines of its class on the continent.

The magazine was founded by Mr. Taylor in Montreal in 1899 and when the publisher came to Woodstock in 1902 to take over the Sentinel-Review, he re-located the headquarters of the magazine and it commenced publication here in 1904. From a very small publication Mr. Taylor developed the magazine to its present splendid national status.

C. O. Tatham, of the investment house of Coles and Tatham, was for ten years editor and manager of Rod and Gun and on his retiring from the position a little more than a year ago to engage in the stock broking business he was succeeded by Alec M. Ferdyce, who will continue as the editor of the magazine under the new publishers.

The sale of the magazine will mean the removal of several others of its staff from Woodstock to the new headquarters, including Miss K. A. Marshall, circulation manager; Miss Ivy Everette, Miss Dorothy Henson and C. W. Slater, composing room foreman.—Sentinel-Review, Woodstock, Nov. 27, 1929.

TO THE DAIRYMEN OF NAPANEE DISTRICT

Gentlemen.—Your disappointment in the meeting of December 6th and its lack of beneficial results to encourage and promote organization are at least equalled by the discouragement of those who had planned the meeting with great effort and care. It had been the hope of many that after considerable preliminary work had been done; as it has been done; that a county meeting offering a much larger opportunity for attendance and being addressed by experienced and able men would result in an enthusiasm and membership which would set the organization on its feet.

That able speakers should have so completely misjudged the angle of approach that would give confidence and enthusiasm and decision to join an organization of their own, is hard to explain. If the type of speeches delivered had been delivered before an audience already organized and convinced of its value to them, and if this audience had planned co-operation of their organization by the distributors and were together in one accord and agreement over prices, then a further analysis of increasing profits by lowering the cost of production, if at all possible, would have been in order and kindly received.

The day is past when speakers able or otherwise can administer the opiate of greater economy, more and better and higher quality products, and trust providence and the gullibility and policy of handling firms, that all will be well. There is such a possibility as surplus and we have learned from sad experience that even products of high quality can be offered under conditions that will produce disappointing prices.

We know the value of covers of all sorts and we sow them in large volume but we have no control of drought and frost and where will the legumes of 1930 come from? Probably in no section on this continent grows as much corn for silage for milk production as the dairymen of Ontario. And grain, we all know the value of our corn, grain and God knows we work 14 hours a day, 6 months a the year trying to obtain, and if successful, to harvest the abundance of cheap feed. Cheap feed to manufacture, but 6 months more hard work, into cheap milk and for anyone who believes this statement over-drawn I refer to the thousands of dollars which the business needs and proceeds.

No, the Ontario farmer needs no instruction in economy, they are past masters of the art. They do need the awakening of a class consciousness, born of antagonism toward any other group, built on a respect for themselves. They must equipt themselves to meet the business world, not in the inferior position of an individual but with the prestige of group combination.

This is the aim and object and hope of organization among the dairymen of this country.—DAIRYMAN.

FOURTH LINE

It is making many people think of, refuelling their coal bins.—The radio fans of this neighborhood enjoyed a concert by Napanee talent which was evidently from the King Edward, Toronto. THREE ROBBERS FOILED BY CONSTABLE COOK

Great excitement prevailed in Napanee early Thursday morning of last week when it became known that three men had attempted to burglarize Mayhew's jewelry store on Dundas Street.

About 2.30 a.m. while Constable Cook was patrolling Dundas Street he noticed a car pull up near Mayhew's store. One of the occupants alighted and immediately threw an auto jack through the plate glass window. Mr. Cook ran towards them, pulling his gun as he went, and fired a shot to alarm them, puncturing a tire on the car as he did so. The men turned from the window, got into the car and started to speed away. The damaged tire hampered their speed, however, and in endeavoring to make a turn north at West Street the robbers came to grief and the car was wrecked.

In the meantime Constable Cook turned in an alarm. Chief of Police Watts, on coming down town, found the wrecked car at the corner of Dundas and West Streets. In it he found some of the jewelry and a loaded rifle. He was soon joined by Provincial Constables Barrett and Tompkins, and a search was started for the robbers. Chief Watts procured a car and on going up Piety Hill he noticed a car turn south and gave chase. The car which had been stolen from Brady Bros. Garage, contained the robbers, and the trail got so hot that the men abandoned the car and ran through some gardens on Water street the chief in pursuit. He fired a shot at them, which caused Wm. Stroud, aged 15, Toronto, the youngest of the trio, to surrender. The search was then kept up by the officers.

Later some citizens notified the constables that a strange man was walking along Water street. Chief Watts, officers Barrett, Tompkins and Deacon investigated and traced the man to Wm. Contes' barn, which they searched. Wm. Muskabuk, of Ottawa, was located in the hay loft by Messrs. Barrett and Tompkins. Later on the third of the trio, Tommy Canning, of Toronto, was apprehended by Officers Tompkins and Byles on ex-Mayor Roy's corner. Canning had been out the Selby road, evidently mistaking it for the Provincial Highway. On discovering his mistake he turned back and was making for Toronto when captured.

The car used by the robbers was a Chevrolet coach, and was stolen in Toronto. Moskibuk, police records show recently escaped from Burwash.

The three men appeared before Magistrate Graham and were remanded to jail until next Friday, the 13th, without bail.

The jewelry was practically all recovered and congratulations are extended to all the officers taking part in the capture, and especially to Mr. Cook for the admirable manner in which he handled the affair at the outset.

Arrangements were made for the renewal of the Missionary Monthly and delegates were appointed for the Presbyterial to be held in Napanee in the home of Mrs. Hanes and the study book to be taken by Mrs. Ramsay. Although the society has suffered much by death and removal of members, the reports were all very gratifying. Rev. Mr. Anderson gave an address introducing the new study book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem." A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Anderson for his address. The officers for the year 1930 are as follows: Pres., Mrs. Anderson; 1st Vice-Pres., Mrs. Hanes; 2nd Vice-Pres., Mrs. J. Wartman; Rec.-Sec., Mrs. Joe Perry; Cor.-Sec., Mrs. F. On Wednesday evening, December 4th, sixty friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Vandervoort quietly gathered in the basement of United Church to bid them farewell, as they are leaving for their new home in Belleville, N.Y. Juanita Wartman read an address and Hubert Simpkin presented to Mr. and Mrs. Vandervoort a purse of gold. Gerow presented John with a club bag and Stewart with a pen and pencil. Mrs. Vandervoort thanked the friends for their kind remembrance in a brief reply. John thanked them for such a useful present, saying he had appreciated remembrance of his school days, since he has been in the store. Rev. T. H. P. Anderson, in behalf of the village, spoke very nicely of them saying they had lived most of their life in the vicinity of Newburgh. Mrs. Vandervoort had resided in the village. The boys would be missed in League and Sunday school. Refreshments were served and a social half hour followed during which Juanita Wartman played an instrumental and by request of friends Mrs. Yeomans gave a recitation, as she often gave recitations at concerts and social evenings. The evening closed with all joining hands in a circle and singing the second verse of "Can Old Acquaintance be Forgot."

A gloom was cast over the village on Thursday morning, when it was heard that Lorne Fox, Jr. had passed away in young manhood. He had many attacks of pneumonia, but recovered with a hard struggle, so his friends were hoping that he would recover again. These last few years he conducted a repair shop for boots, shoes and harness. He will be greatly missed by the community, also his pleasant jovial personality. He leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife and two sons, five and three year's old, also a loving father, Lorne Fox, whom he always resided with, and a sister, Mrs. E. Rendel, of Strathcona. THE NEED IS GREAT

A lot of children in Napanee have no visit from Santa Claus, except that which the "Beaver" provides. You may think there is no need in Napanee for you to some homes and see for yourself, children without proper clothing insufficient food and little warmth. The need is great.

A group of interested women have canvassed the town. They know the exact needs of each worthy case. They are working in the Town Hall every Monday afternoon, mending and preparing worn clothing, sorting and packing boxes and stockings. There is a real need and these women know it.

But they need clothing and goods. We are short of money this year and this when the need is greatest. We would prefer money, for then the women can buy the things fitted for each child. But other goods are acceptable. Mr. Merchant—send a box of shop worn stock to the Town Hall. Mr. Farmer send a bushel of apples so the kiddies may have at least an apple apiece on Christmas morning. Mothers tell your children to give their contribution to the fund, and above all don't neglect it yourself.

Drop in to the Beaver office with it. Any amount acceptable. The need is great.

"THAT'S THAT

On Thursday and Friday evening the Prontenac Regiment presented a musical comedy in the Armouries, under the direction of Miss Vennetti Kelly, of the John B. Rogers Production Co.,

The cast was chosen from our most talented actors and actresses, and several new artists made their appearance, disclosing new talents to be counted on for future use.

The opening scene at the Palm Beach Hotel would be done credit to a professional stage. The setting was brilliant, with glimpses of ocean and beach; and fashionably dressed girls parading about in usual summertime attitudes. The choruses were well trained by Miss Kelly, who, herself, played an important part in the comedy. Miss Hilda McGraw did her part cleverly as did also Ruth Graham, Nina McKim, and Muriel Garrison. The latter had a funny little scene with her plump little brother, Francis Thompson.

Mr. Joe Marshall, who always pleases his audience, played the immensely important "Bottle King," in his usual inimitable way and Mrs. Irving Went as his daughter made a tremendous hit in her first Napanee appearance. Her song with Mr. William Gault was a great success. Mr. Gault's baritone voice showing up to great advantage. Mr. Jack Caldwell is always to be relied upon in a musical way, but this time, as the hero, he excelled himself as an actor as well.

Miss Margaret Nolan as a society matron, portrayed her part with her usual grace and dignity. Miss Essa Canaan and Mr. William Powell made their debut as principals in the cast, and were immensely successful. As the typical "Noo Yoik" East-siders, they were extremely funny and their two vocal numbers, "Down by the Winnegar Works," and "That's That," were among the very best numbers. In the latter Mr. Grant Parks, as Eddie, also took part and the dancing was clever and the music catchy and pretty. Mr. Paul, a past-master in the role of country bumpkin was "just the funniest thing." Everybody greeted his appearance with gusts of laughter, and applauded his exits with appreciation.

We have mentioned the principals, but not to do justice to them. The choruses, the scenery, the costumes and the entire ensemble were a credit to Miss Kelly and those who assisted her in training the company.

It is to be hoped that a Prontenac Regiment will have another entertainment at a less busy time of the year, when everyone may have an opportunity of attending.

AIRCRAFT EMPLOYED BY GEODETIC ENGINEERS

Aeroplane journeys totalling 22,000 miles were made during the field season of 1929 by officers of the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Department of the Interior, in the performance of their duties. Although the aeroplane has been in use for some years in various kinds of surveys, this is the first season in which it has been widely employed for geodetic surveying in Canada, and, while aerial work constitutes only a small part of the year's program, the results achieved point to the possibilities of still greater usefulness for the aeroplane in this field for the future.

An additional advantage of the aeroplane is that it permits operations in districts otherwise difficult of access to be carried on throughout the winter. For the operator, flying is much more arduous in winter than in summer, but aside from that working conditions in cabin planes are quite as good when the ground is covered with snow as they are in summer. Heretofore geodetic operations have been found inadvisable in winter by previously employed ground methods. The closing down of considerable aerial work in the winter sets free planes which may be used for certain work of this character. In February and March, 1929 winter flying in connection with geodetic surveying was tried for the first time in Canada, and the results were highly successful.

The advent of the aeroplane has thus introduced a new and powerful, ally, and full advantage is being taken of it in speeding up geodetic work. The reconnaissance engineer nowadays in establishing triangulation can select the most suitable routes in a mere fraction of the time devoted to the necessarily slow methods of ground travel. Difficult and distant territory that previously entailed months, even years, of strenous labor can now be covered in a matter of days, and formerly inaccessible regions are no longer unattainable.

In the development of the Dominion's industries and natural resources, the work of the Geodetic Society is an essential factor because it provides an accurate basis for all other kinds of surveys whether relating to the making of maps, the laying down of interprovincial or other boundaries, or to the construction of powerhouses, dams, canals, railways, irrigation ditches and the like. For example, the geographical position can be obtained with greater accuracy from maps in the preparation of which the data of the Geodetic Survey have been made use of, than from any others. Similarly the Geodetic Survey furnishes the most accurate information regarding the "drop of rivers," required in connection with waterpower and other engineering enterprises. The Geodetic Survey of Canada came into existence in 1906, and, up to the present time so great is the extent of the Dominion that only about ten percent thereof has as yet been surveyed geodetically.

There are two principal divisions of the work, triangulation and levelling. Triangulation, which fixes the geographical position of points on the earth's surface begins from a common point, or datum, and proceeds by exact measurement, through a series of triangulation nets over the country. Under an arrangement entered into with the adjacent continent of North America has one common geodetic datum by which the geodetic engineers of Mexico, the United States, and Canada are able to co-operate, and the results of their work are of greater value than if each country worked independently. After twenty-four years of work Canada's main system of triangulation extends from the Maritime Provinces and the St. Lawrence valley as far westward as the mining areas of northern Ontario, and from the west end of lake Superior to the Pacific coast. The problem which is of great scientific importance.

co-operation with the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, each surveying undertaking certain subsections thereof. In addition a system of triangulation has been carried up the Pacific coast from the 49th parallel to Alaska, while additional nets are being extended as rapidly as possible into other parts of Canada, especially to those where an accurate foundation is required for surveys in connection with the development of water-power, mining, railway, and other enterprises.

Another important function of the Geodetic Survey is its work in cooperating in the determination of the size and shape of the earth. The great geodetic mathematicians in this world are attempting to solve the work of this latter section was done in

NAPANEE ON THE AIR

It would be safe to say that on Wednesday night, December 4th, every radio in Napanee was tuned in on CKCOW, at 10.30. It was with a thrill of anticipation that the announcer was heard to introduce the Napanee Artists who were giving the program through courtesy of the Satin-Finish Hardwood Flooring Co., and each number brought smiles of pride and sighs of satisfaction. Even the elements were in sympathy, for the entertainment came through with wonderful clarity, and almost no interference.

Mrs. Valkman and Mrs. Denison, both of whom possess beautiful soprano voices, sang delightful numbers. The Messrs. Caldwell, Pearse, Wiseman and Pringle, not only sang three splendid quartettes, their lovely voices blended in perfect harmony, but each favored his audience with a solo as well.

Mrs. J. E. Madden, who except for the brief interval when Mayor W. M. Hewitt gave his interesting address on Napanee, never left the piano, playing the accompaniments with exquisite sympathy, every note being heard yet never intruding upon the singer. Her two solo numbers were well chosen and most beautifully rendered. The number of messages sent in congratulation, were only a small part of the actual appreciation, felt by those of us who listened-in.

The County Roads Committee presented its report of 1929, operation and expenditures thereon. Total expenditure $340,478.62.

Six miles of new road constructed this year does not appear in this year's expenditures as the cost of these extensions is being carried mostly by the Highways Department and partly by the Raynor Construction Co., and will have to be dealt with by next year's Council.

The other expenditure above the appropriation is about $45,000.000, over and above the construction of that extra six miles, which cost probably $100,000 additional.

The County Council were in a large measure forced by the Highways Department to make the extensions which the Highways Department were prepared to build themselves if the County had refused to enter into the contracts for these extensions.

On motion the report was adopted.

LICE CAUSE DISCOMFORT

Eggs are worth big money these days, and the busy hen is the one that pays. Hens that are continually irritated by external parasites cannot give their full energy to egg production.

The Department of Entomology at the Ontario Agricultural College gives the following practical suggestions regarding poultry lice.

"All poultry lice are biting insects, and do not live on the blood of the birds, but feed instead on substances found on the feathers and on the surface of the skin. In doing this they irritate the birds and interfere with their rest, so that it pays to destroy them.

Destruction may be brought about at this time of the year in either of two ways. First, dust every bird with equal parts of sodium fluoride and corn starch mixed together (Corn starch is merely added to lessen the cost.) One person can do the dusting by himself by placing the bird on a table and holding it in position either by the legs or wings with one hand, while with the other hand a small pinch of sodium fluoride mixture taken between the thumb and finger is placed among the feathers next to the skin, one pinch on the head, one on the neck, two on the back, one on the breast, one just below the vent, one on the tail, one on each thigh and one scattered on the underside of each wing when spread. The powder can be distributed a little by pushing the thumb and finger among the feathers when the mixture is released.

If a large paper or pan is placed beneath the bird, any dust which drops out can be recovered.

Another way of applying is for one person to hold the bird by the legs, head down, while another, with one hand opens the feathers and with the other dusts the material with a salt cellar or a small can with holes punched in the bottom and with a tight fitting lid, into the places mentioned previously. Be sure that the dust reaches to the skin.

If every bird is treated, one dusting will edstroy all the lice present and all those that hatch from the eggs later.

A second and newer method, and one requiring less time, but which is not quite so safe, is to put the required amount of Black Leaf, 40%, or nicotine sulphate 40%, in an ordinary small machine oil can with a moderately large spout, and with this run a continuous line of the liquid along each roost, then spread it out with a feather. One ounce of the liquid will make a line twelve feet long. One pound of the liquid will make a line two hundred feet long. The nicotine should be applied about half an hour or a little more before the birds go to roost. The fumes from the nicotine go up among the feathers and kill the lice. A second application ten days or two weeks later is necessary to kill young lice that will have hatched in the meantime from the eggs.

Caution—Do not apply large quantities of the nicotine lest you injure the birds. This method will kill some mites, but not all.

"Charlie hasn't had a drink or been out for an evening for three weeks."

"Turned over a new leaf?"

"No, he turned over a new car."

HOCKEY NEWS

About two days more of cold weather and the ice at the rink will be in shape for hockey practice and skating.

The boys are getting into fine condition and should go the full hour as soon as they can get on the ice. Friday night at the Collegiate they went through an hour and a half of hard training and not a boy dropped out of the line.

Harry Roe and Laurie Douglas attended the schedule meeting in Kingston last week and the schedule is as follows:

First Half

Napanee at Belleville, Jan. 3rd.
Belleville at Trenton, Jan. 6th.
Trenton at Napanee, Jan. 10th.
Belleville at Napanee, Jan 14th.
Trenton at Belleville, Jan. 17th.
Napanee at Trenton Jan 21st.

Second Half

Belleville at Napanee, Jan. 24th.
Trenton at Belleville, Jan. 28th.
Napanee at Trenton, Jan. 31st.
Napanee at Belleville, Feb. 4th.
Trenton at Napanee, Feb. 10th.

Queen's University Juniors, who were in our group asked to be put in the lower group with Gananoque, R.M.C. and Kingston Frontenacs. This was agreed to by our representative, Mr. Roe, so Trenton, Belleville and Napanee form a group and play a double schedule.

The Napanee Club were invited to enter a team in a pre-season series of games to be held in the new Belleville arena. Eight teams are being entered and a handsome cup has been donated. However, the Club felt it would be difficult to finance a team in this series this year so decided not to enter a team.

This series should be encouraged, however, as it would be a good thing for hockey in this section. The Napanee Club are in favor of it and hope to be in a position to enter a team another year.

The Gibbard Furniture Company are said to be forming a League in the factory this winter. The forming of a Church League is also being discussed.

These juvenile leagues should be encouraged for if we are ever going to get anywhere in hockey we must start the boys on the right path when they are young and there is no better place than in a well managed Juvenile League.

The town have more or less overlooked the youngsters these last few years and as a result we have not advanced very far in senior hockey.

Last year Clint Shoemaker ran a juvenile league and several boys were developed whom we hope will go over big in the Junior O.H.A. line-up.

WELSH IMPERIAL SINGERS VISIT NAPANEE

It was great tribute to the Welsh Singers that following last Wednesday night's concert in Trinity Church, attended by four hundred and fifty people, that on their return on Sunday morning they should be greeted by a congregation which overflowed into the Sunday School auditorium. It would be difficult to bring together a finer lot of male voices and under the discipline of the conductor, Mr. Festyn Davies, they have reached a high degree of attainment. Though the whole group merit the greatest praise, much commendation was given to the soloists when the singing of Harvey Williams, Jack Newbury, Jabez Trevor, and Elwyn Edwards made a great impression, and all listeners were full of admiration over the playing of Norman Evans the brilliant seventeen year old pianist.

Mr. Davies and his singers were greatly appreciative of the fine reception accorded them by the people of Napanee at both concert and the Church service. The enthusiasm of those who heard was partly explained by the fact which the Montreal Gazette stressed when the singers appeared in Montreal " the performance played an unusual trick on concert goers in being better than its advance reputation."

Your Christmas gift is at Hooper's.

On Thursday, November 5th, 1929, Mr. and Mrs. Burgess opened their home to the Woman's Auxiliary for a candy shower, the candy to go to the Santa Claus Fund on the Mohawk Reserve. After indulging in cards for two hours, an address was read by the Corresponding Secretary and Miss Dorothy Bardy and Miss Viola Maracle presented Mr. and Mrs. Pringle with a beautiful vase and candle sticks, donated by the Woman's Auxiliary, for their cherished work among them. The following was the address. "In behalf of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Tyendinaga Reserve, we take great pleasure in presenting to Mr. and Mrs. Pringle a token of our affection. The members of the Auxiliary who are present this evening know that words cannot express Mr. and Mrs. Pringle's devout kindness and good will in the missionary field at home and abroad." Signed on behalf of the Women's Auxiliary. After this a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess, after which the guests departed.

ADOLPHUSTOWN W. M. S.

The December meeting of the Adolphustown W.M.S. was held on Wednesday, December 4th, at the home of Mrs. John Humphrey. The president, Miss Hattie Magee was in charge of the meeting, and conducted the devotional exercises. Hymn 295 was sung, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Plant. The scripture lession, St. Mark, 2nd chapter 8-20. Verses were read by Mrs. James Bird. Hymn 299 was sung. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. A. C. Davis, and were approved and the treasurer, Miss Annabel Magee, gave her report.

Owing to the resignation of the president, the election of officers resulted in two changes in the executive, Mrs. Ross Humphrey was elected as president for the year 1930 and Miss Hattie Magee was elected as secretary. Delegates were appointed to attend the convention to be held in Napanee in January. The heralds reported progress in the mission fields. The thankoffering was then received and met with a generous response, with more to be handed in. Rev. Mr. Plant offered the dedicatory prayer. Roll call was answered by a verse of scripture pertaining to Christ's birth and the meeting closed by all singing, "God be with you, till we meet again," and all joined in repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

The meeting adjourned to meet in January. A committee meeting is being held by the executive to arrange for the program for next year. The members of the W.M.S. are giving a sacred pageant, "The Light Eternal," depicting the birth of Christ, on Friday evening, December 13th, in the U. E. L. United Church in which fifty characters representing the twenty centuries since the Nativity, the Magi, shepherds, angels and etc. appear most vividly and beautifully, portraying the Christmas story. The choir, assisted by Rev. Mr. Plant and Mrs. Plant will sing appropriate Christmas music.

The choir was peeved at the minister, and to get even with him all agreed they would not join in singing the hymns at the morning service. But some layol soul told the preacher about the plot.

"We will now sing that grand old hymn, 'We're marching on Zion,'" the preacher announced, "committing the first verse."

The second verse begins, "Let those refuse to sing who never knew our God." The whole choir sang.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

"Are the whisky and cigars aboard?" asked the other.

"Yes," replied the other.

"The lunch?"

"You bet!"

"The hooks and lines?"

Search revealed that the tackle had been left behind.

"Well," said the first speaker, after due reflection, "we'll just have to get along as best we can."

Persian Balm—alluring, provocative and charming. Fragrant and refreshing as a cool breeze in summer. Delightful to use. Creates complexions of surpassing loveliness. Makes the skin velvety soft in texture. Soothes and dispels all irritation caused by weather conditions. Softens and whitens the hands. Persian Balm is a peerless toilet requisite for women who care for charm and distinction. Use it for hands and face.

"Promoters are promoting a tunnel from Gibraltar to Africa and a tunnel under the channel from England to France, but the authorities show an enmity towards these tunnels that is foolish and harmful.

"The authorities, opposing a good thing, remind me of the bachelor whose girl friends said wistfully:

"'Better still,' growled the bachelor, 'they prove that suicide is a preventive of marriage.'"

Whether the corn of old or new growth, it must yield to Holloway's Corn Remover.

"Did the doctor treat you yesterday?"

"No, he charged me five dollars."

Many mothers have reason to bless Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator because it has relieved the little ones of suffering and made them healthy.

Fond Father: "So you propose to take my daughter from me without any warning."

Suitor: "Not at all. If there is anything threatening her you want to warn me about, I'm willing to listen."

Wretched from Asthma. Strength of body and vigor of mind are inevitably impaired by the visitation of asthma. Who can live under the cloud of recurring attacks and keep body and mind at their full efficiency? Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy dissipates the cloud by removing the cause. It does relieve. It does restore the sufferer to normal bodily trim and mental happiness.

Dr. John Roach Stratton in Greenwood Lake interview praised religion.

"Religion is a joyful thing," he said. "It's a mistake to think that the religious life is like life in a jail or poorhouse.

"Yet this mistake prevails. An agitator was addressing a band of strikers.

"'Only $12 a week!' he yelled. 'How can a man be a Christian on $12 a week?'

"'How,' yelled a voice, 'can he afford to be anything else?'"

The Oil for the Athlete.—In rubbing down, the athlete will find Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil an excellent article. It renders the muscles and sinews pliable, takes the soreness out of them and strengthens them for strains that may be put upon them. It stands pre-eminent for this purpose, and athletes who for years, have been using it can testify to its value as a lubricant.

Constable: "Did you get his number?"

Victim speevishly): "No. I missed that. I got the mudguards, the wheels and the axle!"

Wise and experienced mothers know their children are troubled with worms and lose no time in applying Miller's Worm Powders, a most effective vermifuge. It is absolute in clearing the system of worms and restoring those healthy conditions without which there can be no comfort for the child or hope of robust growth. It is a most trustworthy worm exterminator.

The teacher was trying to explain the meaning of recuperated.

"Suppose, Bessie, your father has worked very hard all day; he is tired and worn out, isn't he?"

"Yes, teacher."

"Then when night comes and his work is over for the day, what does he do?"

"That's just what mother wants to know," replied Bessie.

Angus, a mason, was slipping out of the yard to get a "refresher" during working hours when he suddenly ran into the boss.

"Hallo," said the boss, pleasantly, "were you looking for me?"

"Aye," answered Angus, "I wis looking for ye, but I didna want tae see ye."

Mugs—You say you were in Paris only one week. That was a disgrace—too short a time to see a city of that size.

Bowers—Not at all; we divided the work between us. My daughter took in the numerous museums, wifey the stores and shops, and I the theatres and cabarets.

"Was your uncle's life insured?"

"No. He was a total loss."

CANADA'S WORLD TRADE

For many years we have sold more goods abroad and to foreign countries than we bought. Despite the fact that we bought largely of manufactured goods and sold largely of our raw materials the net balance in our favor in dollars has been acclaimed by the Government as evidence of our prosperity.

I accept for the moment that such a balance be the gauge of prosperity. What then is the answer of Mr. King, when within twelve months a favorable balance of $133,000,000 per year is swept away and replaced by an actual deficit of $23,000,000? That is the situation reflected in the return of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, just issued for the twelve months, ended October 31st. The figures for the seven months of the present fiscal year, ended the same date, are even more ominous. They show a favorable balance of $35,000,000 for the corresponding period of the previous year wiped out and replaced by a deficit of $86,000,000, an adverse shift of $121,000,000, within the last seven months for which figures are available.

Imports	$1,203,304,859	$1,363,471,475
Exports	1,335,402,273	1,290,564,667

	1928	1929
Exports	773,902,159	690,877,154

Decrease in wheat exports is only partially responsible for the discouraging reversal. Meats, cheese and many items which most directly affect the prosperity of the farm show substantial export decreases. The unfavorable foreign trade conditions would be much worse were it not for increased shipments of raw materials such as copper and nickel and asbestos to the United States, to be manufactured there and returned to Canada in finished products at from five to a hundred times the value of the raw materials drawn from here.

Most recent figures on Canadian trade with the United States indicate the likelihood that during the present fiscal year that country will unload close to $1,000,000,000 worth of goods—mostly manufactured—into Canada, taking in return approximately half that total and chiefly in raw materials. That is the situation under the present tariff wall. Premier King says his Government will wait until even greater tariff obstacles are placed against Canada before acting in the interests of Canada.

President Bizzell of Oklahoma university — the university recently abolished hazing—said at a dinner in Norman:

"When the new generation and the old tackle one another, the new generation usually wins. Sometimes, though, it's the other way about.

"A grandmother tackled her granddaughter about an evening gown; she said the gown was immodest; but the granddaughter lit a cigarette and retorted:

"'You know, grandma, I wouldn't be seen in the kind of dresses you wore when you were a girl.'

PRINCE ALBERT PARK IS POPULAR WITH TOURISTS

The success of Prince Albert national park, the most recent addition to the system of recreational reserves administered by the National Parks of Canada Branch of the Department of the Interior, has been immediate. Although only established for a little more than two years it has already built up a reputation which is evidence that it will soon become one of the most popular of the Dominion's playgrounds. Until its establishment few people outside of the province itself had any conception of the rich recreational resources of Saskatchewan, a province whose name has been synonymous with vast expenses of golden grain and busy elevators. Last year, although the park was not open, been opened until August 16th, and those who came had to bring with them camping equipment and supplies, over 5,000 people motored the seventy miles from the city of Prince Albert to the park. This year the total number exceeded 10,000 and it is interesting to note that registrations included cars from all the provinces of Canada and from practically every part of the United States, showing the reputation which this interesting section has already gained among nature lovers.

The unique canoeing opportunities appeal strongly to the adventurous. Starting from Waskesiu lake, the park headquarters, one may travel, with brief portages, literally for hundreds of miles, reaching in the west Great Slave lake and the Mackenzie river, and on the east the waters flowing into Hudson bay. The entire circuit of the park may be made by canoe passing through nearly a score of lakes tied together by small streams. Immediately east of the park lies Montreal lake, about thirty-four miles in length and seven miles in breadth, for many years a waterway to the Indian hunting grounds.

One of the first concerns of the Government when the park was established was the creation of an effective fire and game protective service. There were cut through the wooded regions forest telephones constructed, and modern fire-fighting equipment including portable pumps and power boats, installed. As the park had no telephone communications with the outside world a wireless station was erected which connects with a similar station at Prince Albert.

An area on beautiful Waskesiu lake, in close proximity to a fine bathing beach, was cleared and equipped with open fireplaces, kitchen shelters, and other conveniences. A sit for business and residential purposes was laid out by a landscape architect, and already a good deal of building has taken place.

With a view to conserving, and if possible increasing the game fish supply of the park, the Fisheries Brahch of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, undertook a survey of several typical waters of the park and the work has been carried on for the past two years under the direction of the Biological Board of Canada.

A great deal of information has been gained with respect to the species which can be made to thrive in these waters. Pike, pickerel and lake trout are already found in abundance and it is thought certain species of bass can be successfully introduced.

One of the chief objects of interest to visitors is the cottage presented last year to the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, by the people of Prince Albert city and district, and occupied by him during his visits to the park. Several of the rooms were furnished by different cities of Saskatchewan, and the house also contains many interesting objects of western manufacture.

A site for an aeroplane landing has been laid out and already several transcontinental fliers have landed in the park. In view of the rapid increase in the use of aeroplanes it seems not unlikely that this may soon become one of the regular means of access to the park and that the reserve may also be a starting point for flights to regions in the far north.

The people of Saskatchewan, with characteristic enthusiasm, are warmly supporting the new park and they are co-operating with the Government in every possible way to make it a success. Recently there was formed a special organization known as the Saskatchewan National Park Association, which has as its object the furtherance of the conservation and development of this outstanding recreational asset. The organization is province-wide and includes representatives of the boards of trade in the principal cities, service clubs, farmers' associations, and other important organizations.

Dramatic Milestones in Canada's Story

BY C. W. JEFFERYS

Hennepin at Niagara Falls

On the 6th of December, 1678, a little party of Frenchmen were toiling through the snow-clad forest that crowned the cliffs of the Niagara gorge. Far below, the tossing rapids raced towards the whirlpool around which the travellers had circled. Ahead of them, up the river, was the great fall. Indian stories had told them of it, and years ago it had been marked on Champlain's map; but so far as they knew no white man as yet had seen it. In the stillness of the winter woods they could hear its distant roar, and as they advanced, sometimes they could see between the bare branches the column of mist that rose from the falling waters in the still air. At last they came out upon the brink of the cliff, and the great semi-circle of the cataract lay before them.

Perhaps some unknown wandering runner of the woods had already looked upon the wonderful scene, but this is the first visit of which we have any record. We know of it from the account written by one of those who stood and gazed at the falling waters on that wintry day in 1678; a bearded man dressed in the brown-grey robe of a Franciscan Friar, with the knotted cord of his order girt about his waist, and his pointed hood pulled over his head to shield it from the cold. He was Father Louis Hennepin, missionary priest and explorer, whose book of travels is a wonderful story of adventure and peril. We cannot believe all that he tells us, but in spite of many lies and exaggerations about his own exploits, much of his story has been proved to be true. He had always longed to visit strange lands, and he says that in France he used to listen behind doors of taverns to the stories which the sailors told of their voyages. At last his desire to travel was gratified.

In 1675 he was sent as a missionary to Canada. On the ship in which he sailed he met La Salle, who was returning home from France to take possession of Fort Frontenac, which had been granted to him. Hennepin was stationed at this post as priest, and when LaSalle, in 1678, set out on his expedition to explore the West, the missionary was permitted to go with him. Late in the year the advance party, which included Hennepin, left Fort Frontenac in a little vessel of ten tons for the Niagara River. Stormy weather forced them to land close to the north shore of Lake Ontario and drove them for shelter into the mouth of the Humber. Here they were frozen in and had to cut their way out through the ice with axes. They reached the Niagara on the 6th of December, and landed on the eastern side, where now stands the Historic fort. Hennepin with some of the party paddled up the river in a canoe as far as the Queenston of to-day, where the rapids prevented them from going farther by water. They went ashore and made the rest of their way to the falls on foot. They went on to Chippewa creek, where they camped in the snow for the night, returning the next morning to their companions at the mouth of the river. This was the beginning of over two years' wandering among the Indians and coureurs de bois in the forests and on the plains and rivers and the great lakes. In the spring of 1681 he was again at the Falls of Niagara, on his way back to Montreal, where he arrived, lean and sun-burnt and lean, with his robe in tatters and patched with pieces of buffalo-skin, and told his amazing tale to Count Frontenac. Soon afterwards he went back to Europe and published the account of his travels. In his book appears an engraving of the Falls of Niagara on which the present picture is based. This engraving was made possible from a drawing by Hennepin himself, or from his own description, and under his own supervision. It is of great proportion, but its general features give an accurate idea of the appearance of the Falls at his time. It is the first picture of the Falls ever printed, and is valuable because it shows the changes that have taken place in them since he saw them. On the right of the picture, in front of the western end of the Horse Shoe Fall, is seen a small cross fall which plunges over an overhanging rock projecting from the edge of the cliff. This fall no longer exists, for the rock, later known as Table Rock, split off and fell some years ago, and the course of the river has altered considerably, owing to the gradual wearing away of the crest of the Falls.

POTATO A POULTRY FEED

Small unmerchantable potatoes may very profitably be fed to poultry. In an experiment planned to compare boiled potatoes with corn meal in the laying mash at the Fredericton, N.B., Experimental Station, it was found that the potato-fed pens did even better than when corn meal was used in the mash.

Each group was fed a scratch mixture of two parts of cracked corn, two parts wheat, and one part oats. One group received a dry mash containing equal parts of corn meal, wheat bran, wheat middlings and crushed oats. The other group received a moist mash consisting of equal parts of wheat bran, wheat middlings and crushed oats mixed with boiled potatoes. The proportions fed were two parts potatoes and one part mash. Each group received charcoal grit, milk, green feed and water.

The experiment ran from the first of December until the end of May in each of three years. The average egg production for the six month periods for the three years was 82.3 for the corn meal fed lot, as compared with 88.69 when the potatoes were fed. The potato feeding also showed an advantage in hatching results, as it is shown in the report of the Station for 1928, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, that in all the matings the hatches were higher from the birds, both male and female, that received potatoes instead of corn meal in the mash.

PRESENTATION TO MR AND MRS. L. S. PEACOCK

On Friday evening, November 29th, the members of the A.O.T.S. Class of Grace Church Sunday School met in honor of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Peacock, who are taking up their residence in Niagara Falls, Ontario. On all sides were heard expressions of regret at their leaving Napanee, where they have spent nearly two years, and during which time, they have, by their willingness to help and their cheerfulness of manner, won for themselves warm friends. After an hour of games and contests, Mr. and Mrs. Peacock were presented with an address and a beautiful walnut magazine and bookstand, as a token of appreciation from the class. Although completely surprised, both Mr. and Mrs. Peacock made fitting replies, expressing their regret at leaving and their gratitude for past associations with the class. After singing "For they are jolly good fellows," refreshments were served, which brought to a close a very enjoyable evening. Mr. Peacock has assumed the management of the Service Department of a fine new garage in Niagara Falls, and his many friends here wish him every success.

ST. ANDREW'S BAZAAR

On Friday last in the afternoon the ladies of St. Andrew's United Church held their annual bazaar. The schoolroom was prettily and artistically decorated in Christmas colors, red and green. In the centre of the room was a square table with green and red festoon strung from the corners to a large Christmas Bell suspended from the ceiling. Grouped around this were various other tables, tea, cooked goods, candy and vegetables, while on the platform was a Christmas tree loaded with inexpensive Xmas gifts. In spite of the great pressure of counter attractions the room was filled all afternoon and the visitors were in a buying mood, so that the ladies were amply repaid for all their labor and voted it one of the most pleasant and successful of their church events for the year.

FREE SHOTS ON Local Sport

Wow! What a record.

* * * * *

Two championships and not a single defeat. Not even a real close game in either series. Sounds something like the Tigers' record, eh?

* * * * *

* * * * *

Anyway this year the girls of the local knowledge foundry are to be greatly praised for winning both the Junior and Senior Bay of Quinte basketball loops. They certainly left no question in anyone's mind as to who was the best team.

* * * * *

They scored a total of 445 points against their opponents 170. The seniors registered 285 to 101, and the juniors 160 to 69 making an average score for the 6 games of 47-17 and 27-11. Since the B. of Q. league was inaugurated no team has ever won so decisively.

* * * * *

That's a great mark for the boys to aim at and it will take a lot of straight shooting to hit it.

* * * * *

It's five years since the senior sextet have brought home the silverware. They won it the first year the cup was donated; the Belleville Rotarians doing the Santa Claus act. The juniors won it in 1927, but they had to put up a real fight for it.

* * * * *

I don't know what they usually give girls when they come out on top, the way the locals did. If it were the boys, I'd say they ought to have a real big oyster supper or a turkey dinner or something, but maybe a feed wouldn't be appreciated by the fair athletes.

* * * * *

Perhaps they'd rather have a powder-puff or a hop, or maybe a lollypop, I dunno. But whatever they want, if any team ever deserved it, they do.

HYDRO MEETING

The Napanee Chamber of Commerce called a special meeting for the purpose of discussing all the facts in respect to the purchase by the Town of the Napanee Hydro.

The meeting was held at the Paisley House on Thursday evening and was addressed by Mr. Drewry the engineer in charge of the Central Ontario Hydro System and by Mr. Watson, the local manager of the Napanee System.

Mr. Drewry explained that the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario was a commission appointed by the Ontario government under a statute passed by the Legislature and under that statute their duties and powers were defined. They are constituted for the purpose of purchasing and generating power or electric energy to retail at cost to the Municipalities of the Province. They were not constituted to operate local systems like Napanee—but only to sell power. In 1916, however the government purchased the several municipal electric systems and other public Utilities in the Central Ontario system which were then owned and operated by the Seymour Power Company and the government gave the bonds of the Province in payment.

The government thus had these several municipal plants on their hands and as it was war time the Hydro Electric Power Commission were asked to operate the several plants thus purchased until such time as the municipalities were able to take over the plants and operate them under the supervision of their own local Public Utilities Commissions.

The Hydro Electric Power Commission and the government now feel that the local systems which have become properly organized and have been put on a paying basis should be turned over to the municipalities. Several of the local systems have already been taken over, namely: Oshawa, Belleville, Lindsay, Picton and several other municipalities are like Napanee—voting on the question now.

The Napanee system made a profit for the year ending October 31st, 1929, of $15,720.00 and when the completed figures for October 31st 1929 are available it will be shewn that this year's profits are considerably larger. The actual figures for 1928 are as shown:

Total Revenue	$55600 00
Total cost for power and maintenance and operation	39870 00
Profit	$15730 00
Deduct for annual depreciation 2½ of $470000 00	3420 00
	$14330 00
Deduct annual amount for payment of bonds	9498 00
Net Surplus	$ 4832 00

This surplus of $4832.00, which is left after all payments are made will become available to reduce Hydro rates or for the purchase of our bonds before maturity at the discretion of the local Commission.

The local plant when taken over will be operated under the direction of the Napanee Public Utilities Commission and will be subject to the general supervision of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, in respect to the manner in which the local Commission keep their books. Hydro Electric Power Commission shall not discriminate between different classes of users and will see that there be no improper use made of the profits that are made from year to year.

From the information made it is quite clear that the purchase of the Napanee system cannot in any way affect the taxes.

The Beaver would be pleased to answer any questions that may be submitted to it in the future and in writting and will publish the questions and answers.

At the conclusion of the Board of Commerce meeting a resolution was unanimously passed approving the purchase of the Napanee System by the Town.

A real Christmas gift is a Sheaffer Lifetime Fountain Pen. Last year the sale of Sheaffer Pens was greater than the next two largest sellers combined. Sheaffer pens are $8.75 and when you buy one, it is insured for your lifetime . Wallace's, Napanee agents.

A hundred children are depending on you. Please do all you can. Bring or send your gift to The Beaver Office, Napanee.

Plans were made for remembering the needy at Xmas. Members are asked to make a small donation in form of toys, food and clothing. These to be wrapped and placed in a box in Mr. Harry Mott's Store, left there for that purpose.

The January meeting is at Mrs. R. J. Oak's. The date and hour is changed. The meeting will take the form of a social evening and be held Friday, January 10th, beginning at 7.30 p.m. Mrs. Stevenson, our president, and delegate to Kingston, gave a very interesting report of what took place there. Many points of interest and value were brought up. A vote of thanks is extended to Mrs. Stevenson for her efforts. After singing the National Anthem the hostess served lunch.

MAPLE LEAF INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Maple Leaf Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Carmon Day on Thursday, December 12th at 1.30 p.m. The chair was occupied by our genial president, Mrs. J. W. Cummings, with an attendance of seventeen.

The usual opening was followed by naming a committee, consisting of Mrs. Raymond Preits, Miss Hazel Cummings and Mrs. J. R. Ackerman to arrange about holding a social evening in the near future. It was decided to donate the sum of seven dollars for Christmas welfare work. The business part of the program being ended, the president called on Rev. Mr. Dixon for his address on "Christmas Spirit," which was very much enjoyed by all present. Mrs. Carmon Day gave a splendid report of the Kingston Convention stressing many important items.

Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. J. R. Ackerman were asked to judge the exhibit of articles made from one yard of cotton (articles to be donated to Christmas Sale). The prize was won by Mrs. Geo. Vankoughnet. Collection $1.45. Roll call was responded to by a "Quotation from the Bible." A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Dixon and Mrs. Day for her report and also for her kindness in opening her home to the members of the Institute on this occasion. The National Anthem closed the meeting after which delicious refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

One of the features of this meeting was our annual Christmas Sale, which was held at the close of the business meeting, the results of which were most wonderful. Mrs. Cummings, our president, got busy and certainly made a royal success of our sale, the proceeds of which amounted to $17.30. We are very grateful to all who helped make this such a decided success.

another cause of "LINE'S BUSY" —business lost

WHEN a call comes for a man at the far end of the office the line is tied up for useless minutes until he reaches the telephone. Anyone else trying to call is told: "Line's Busy", but in reality the line is idle.

An office with only one telephone when it needs two or three, or an office in which telephones are poorly located, is a sure cause of unnecessary "Line's Busy", a sure time-waster, a sure business loser.

"Line's Busy" is the chief cause of the million telephone calls a day in Ontario and Quebec which fail to get through. They mean two million minutes a day wasted — congestion of traffic — constant irritation — a handicap to all business.

We are making every effort to provide the best possible telephone service.* But it takes three people to complete a call. Only through public co-operation can we reach maximum efficiency.

We would be glad at any time to have our experts survey your telephone facilities and submit a report. It will save time — yours and other people's — and it will get business for you which you are now losing through "Line's Busy."

*New telephone plant and service improvements will mean an outlay for 1929 alone, of more than $27,000,000.

Martin Birds Won

White Wyandottes owned by Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, scored several notable victories at the recent Chicago Poultry Show. In keen Competition they captured the "best display" award in their class. The complete list of winning birds was as follows: 1st, 2nd and 4th, cockerels; 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th hens; 1st, 3rd and 4th, old pens; and 2nd and 3rd, young pens. A total of 46 birds were entered by Hon. Mr. Martin, who had not shown at Chicago for three years.

Celery King

From a recent announcement of the Vegetable Growers' Association of North America, it appears that George Bycroft, who resides near London, Ont. is the "Celery King of America." Mr. Bycroft grows the new Paris Golden variety and his celery soil is a sandy loam watered by an overhead irrigation system. A good coat of manure was plowed down in the spring and before the plants were set out, 2500 pounds to the acre of 0—12—15 mixture was broadcast and worked in. When the plants were a foot high they were side-dressed with Chilean nitrate of soda at the rate of 150 pounds to the acre. This was repeated two or three times. By giving his plants an adequate supply of plant food, Mr. Bycroft was able to secure the succulent growth necessary in high quality celery. The plants were bleached by boarding the sides of the rows.

BAZAAR AND PLAY A SUCCESS

The Annual Bazaar and Play, under the auspices of the United Church Ladies' Aid was held in the Church hall at Camden East on Tuesday, December 10th. The opening exercises were conducted by the Pastor Rev. T. H. P. Anderson. There was a fine display of fancy and useful articles for sale and the hall was tastefully decorated for the occazion.

A booth where home-made candy was displayed also occupied a prominent place. Lunches were served during the afternoon also.

The play entitled, "Sonny Jane," a comedy mirthquake in three acts was presented in the evening by the young people of the United Church. Despite the inclemency of the weather there was a record attendance from far and near. The entire action of the play takes place in the Foster boarding house in the town of Orchard Centre. The characters were delightfully humourous.

There were Charlie Mitchell, energetic Larry and peppery Sam Streck, who arrive in Orchard Centre with the unchivalrous purposes of squelching Sonny Jane and Pansy, slowest hired girl in the world and Sonny-Jane, who objects to being squelched. Joe Martin, who doesn't intend to be a yokel all his life; coy Lucille; blunt Peggy; troublesome Ruby; snappy Nancy Wade; Freddie Beadle, the "shriek" of Orchard Centre, and Mrs. Spitzendorf, who has had "such poor luck 'mit husbands" but it willing to take another chance on unwilling Sam. Every character admirably portrayed their various roles in a very capable manner.

The action throughout is rapid, with uproarious comedy and a plot that reaches a tremendous climax. The orchestra, including Messrs. Helen and Edith Williams, Mrs. John Fairbairn and Mr. Fred Brown delighted the audience with their selections between acts and while the hall was being seated.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Peggy Foster, who runs the boarding house—Mrs. B. Yeomans.
Lucille Brander, a pretty neighbor—Edith Williams.
Pansy, slowest hired girl in the world—Gladys Amey.
Mrs. Amelia Spitzendorf, three times married and looking for the fourth—Mrs. A. Amey.
Ruby Wade, who is engaged in newspaper work—Marjorie Saul.
Nancy Wade, an unexpected visitor—Mary Scott.
Charles Mitchell, the enemy—Carman Hyland.
Sam Streck, enemy number two, on whom Mrs. Spitzendorf has designs—Arthur Amey.
Larry Randolph, enemy number three—Irvine Russell.

It has been requested that this splendid amateur play be repeated again in this village at an early date in the new year. Numerous were the comments of praise heard immediately after the presentation. The players were entertained following the play.

SANDHURST

On the afternoon of Thursday, December 12th, the members of the W.A. of St. Paul's, Sandhurst Church, met at the home of Mrs. James Hill, one of the oldest members of the Church, in order to spend a social hour with her.

Proceedings opened with the singing of the familiar Christmas Hymn, "O come, all ye faithful." This was followed by a short scripture reading, part of the Christmas story taken from the second chapter of the Gospel according to St. Luke. Prayers were then said, after which "Nearer my God to Thee" was sung.

Just before the guest of honor was presented with a lovely box of chocolates, the rector, Rev. Arthur Strether, gave a brief address, stating the meaning and purpose of the gathering.

The ladies then served a dainty and delightful lunch.

One verse of the hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," and the pronouncement of the Benediction brought the joyful and profitable function to a close.

While in Switzerland a traveller was about to make an ascent, when he thought he might as well institute some inquiries about the guide who was to accompany him.

"Is he a thoroughly skilled climber?" he asked his hotel-keeper.

"He should say so," was the reply. "He has lost two parties of tourists down the mountain-side, and each time has come off without as much as a scartch himself."

"The secret of happiness is not in doing what one likes, but in liking what one has to do."

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

With the coming of winter, fire hazards on the farm are on the increase. The tractor and the gasoline engine have also introduced a new fire menace and care should be taken in their operation and storage. The storing of gasoline and kerosene is a kindred subject and the proper facilities for both should be provided.

An outstanding feature of the recent International Live Stock Show at Chicago was the O.A.C. exhibit built around the theme "Canadian Lamb Has a Place in the Sun." It was prepared under the direction of John Buchanan, director of extension at O.A.C., in co-operation with the Industrial and Development Council of the Canadian Meat Packers.

York County is reputed to have more great young Jersey bulls than any other county in America. One reason is that there are three Bagg herds in the county and for two decades only outstanding sires have been used in these herds. Production combined with show ring quality is considered essential, therefore sires are selected only from families known both in the show ring and at the pail.

Any elaborate account of Canada's part in the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago is rendered prohibitive in this column due to lack of space. However, we believe that Canadian farmers generally followed with keen interest and pride the daily newspaper reports of remarkable victories scored by Canadians in the departments of field crops, live stock, poultry and others.

How to Produce Layers

Poultry farmers will find it profitable for the purpose of building up the laying capacity of their flocks, to select the best laying hens of the flock and mate them with males from heavy-laying stock. In one experiment, fifteen of the best layers were set apart for the production of hatching eggs and were mated with sons of heavy laying hens. The first year of the test the fifteen best hens laid an average of 123.6 eggs and five years later the yield of the best fifteen had gone up to 246.2 eggs per hen.

New Uses For Barley

Until recently the use of barley on the farm was restricted to the feeding of live stock. In Germany, however, barley is used for a multitude of purposes. Millions of bushels yearly are used in the manufacture of malt coffee. Besides this an enormous quantity of the grain is used in the manufacture of bread, breakfast foods, biscuits, infant and invalid preparations, tonics, condiments and food preserves. In view of this, it would seem that barley is destined to occupy a position of increasing importance in all farm rotations that may be devised from the weed scourge.

Canadian Hogs Improve

The gradual increase in the number of select bacon hogs indicates two things, namely: better breeding stock and more attention to rations. Competitions conducted last summer show that there is a very good profit over the cost of feed if the pigs are bred right and have the necessary feeds in the right proportion. Although Danish bacon still brings a higher price than Canadian on the British market, the quality of our bacon is constantly improving and prospects are that with the improvement that have already been taking place, the time is not far distant when Canadian bacon will be on an equal plane with that of any country in the world.

Cost of Yearling Heifers

Fifty dollars may be regarded as a high price to pay for a yearling heifer, but if she has been reared thus far in a manner to give her proper development, this price is little enough. Indeed, when the costs are all taken into consideration there is no profit in selling a 12-months-old heifer at fifty dollars. This has been proved by an actual computation of the cost of feed consumed by heifers of Ayrshire, Holstein and Shorthorn breeding from birth to one year of age. It shows that the year's growth had been produced at a cost of $46.04 per head for feed, the calves weighing an average of 633 pounds at the end of that period.

Poultry and Potatoes

Small, unmerchantable potatoes may very profitably be fed to poultry. An experiment to compare boiled potatoes with corn meal in the laying mash showed that the potato-fed pens did even better than when corn meal was used. Each group was fed a scratch mixture of two parts of cracked corn, two parts wheat, and one part oats. One group received a dry mash containing equal parts of corn meal, wheat bran, wheat middlings and crushed oats. The other group received a moist mash consisting of equal parts of wheat bran, wheat middlings and crushed oats mixed with boiled potatoes. The proportions fed were two part of potato and one part mash. Each group received charcoal grit, milk, green feed and water. Both egg production and hatching results showed an advantage in the case of the potato-fed poultry.

Controlled Bee-Mating

Beekeepers have for years been troubled by the handicap entailed in their efforts to bring about controlled mating. The queen bee always mates on the wing and attempts to devise a form of selective mating have always failed. For five years a scientist in Cornell University has been working at this problem and now announces that he has been successful in devising extremely fine instruments so that queen bees can be artificially mated to selected drones. This success, when put into use, will enable beekeepers to improve the quality of the honey bee. The O.A.C. is working on the new invention in an effort to assist Canadian beekeepers.

Custom seems to make anything respectable.

DEVELOPMENT OF HYDRO ELECTRIC IN THE CANADIAN WEST

With four large undertakings at present under construction, which will ultimately provide 645,000 horse-power, hydro-electric development in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta is more active than at any period in the history of these provinces. Two of the undertakings are situated on the Winnipeg river in Manitoba, and have ultimate designed capacities totalling 325,000 horse-power; another on the Churchill river in Saskatchewan will generate 84,000 horse-power, and the fourth on the Bow river in Alberta will develop 36,000 horse-power. All four undertakings are being constructed under interim licences from the Department of the Interior, and the department maintains resident inspecting engineers at each to ensure that the works are safe and efficiently constructed in accordance with the terms of the license and the Dominion Water Power Regulations.

In Manitoba, the lower of the two new plants on the Winnipeg river is being constructed by the North Western Power Company Limited, a subsidiary of the Winnipeg Electric Company. It is the Seven Sisters Falls, just above the confluence of the Whitemouth river and about twelve miles upstream from the town of Lac du Bonnet. The distance in an air-line to Winnipeg is approximately sixty miles. The project embraces a power station to contain six 37,500-horsepower units, a solid concrete masonry dam with regulating sluices and free spillway to span the river, low dykes on both banks extending several miles upstream, and a rock-cut immediately below the plant to lower the tail-race level and obtain a normal operating head of about 66 feet. Work was commenced in October, 1928, and excellent progress has been made to date. Three units are being initially installed and are expected to be ready for operation under partial head early in 1931. With the completion of the Seven Sisters development the portion of the river flow which now passes down the Pinawa channel to supply the Pinawa plant of the Winnipeg Electric Company, will be stopped, the plant abandoned, and the entire river flow utilized in the new development.

Farther up the Winnipeg river another new project is actively under construction at Slave Falls by the city of Winnipeg. This site is situated about five miles below that municipality's Point du Bois development and the undertaking comprises construction on both sides of an island a short distance below the falls. The right channel will be spanned by a rock-filled dam while the power station, sluiceway, and spillway dams will be located in the left channel. The power station will contain eight 12,000-h.p. units operating under a head of about 30 feet, two of which units will comprise the initial installation. The general contract for the works was let in June, 1926, and it is expected to have the initial installation ready for operation in the latter part of 1931.

Saskatchewan's first hydro-electric development is now under construction at Island Falls on the Churchill river a short distance west of the Manitoba-Saskatchewan boundary. Here, the subsidiary of the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company, is building a power station designed to contain six 14,000-h.p. units to operate under a head of about 56 feet. Three of these units are being initially installed. The power station is situated in the main river channnel and is flanked to the north by a sluiceway dam, while to the south in a natural depression the main sluiceway dam is located, and in addition several earth cut-off dams require to be built. Construction materials were delivered to the site during the winter of 1928-29 and camps constructed. With the spring, active construction commenced and has been prosecuted up to the present with expedition. It is expected that power will be available towards the end of 1930 for delivery over a sixty-five-mile transmission line to the Flin Flon mine.

In Alberta, the Calgary Power Company placed in operation on October 22nd, 1929, the first unit of its new development at the Ghost site on the Bow river, about thirty-five miles west of Calgary. This was the culmination of a very active period of construction which began in August, 1928. The power station which it is designed for an initial installation of two 18,000-h.p. units under a head of 105 feet, with provision made for a third of like capacity, is situated in the main river channel and is flanked on each side by a massive concrete dam which spans the river. To the south a hydraulic earth-fill dam extends for a distance of 2,000 feet to the main sluiceway dam, while to the north an earth-fill dam connects the structures to high ground. Power from this development will be fed into the company's extensive transmission system which, when complete, will extend from Edmonton on the north to near the International Boundary on the south.

These developments, which will provide large quantities of low-cost electric energy for use in mining, for industry and general commercial and domestic use, presage an era of industrial expansion which is of the utmost importance to the progress of the three Prairie Provinces.

CAMDEN VIII.

Autmun Thankoffering service was held in the church as a public service on the afternoon of November 17th. Mrs. George Switzer was present as speaker and gave a very fine address on "What Missions have done for women and what women have done for Missions," sketching the life history of Naomi, her loyalty to her God, even in the strange land of Moab and under such trying circumstances, yet of such beautiful and steadfast faith in God that Ruth was won from her strange gods to the worship of Jehovah and proved one of the worthy progenitors of Jesus of Nazareth. In the second place Mrs. Switzer gave a general survey of the fields and work of the W.M.S. in our home land and in the foreign fields. The offering for the day was $11.74, with, no doubt, some envelopes to be handed in later.

CONWAY W. I.

A very interesting meeting of Conway W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. H. R. Young, on Tuesday afternoon with a fair attendance. Meeting was opened in usual manner. Presidential greeting; Roll call was answered by suggestions for Inexpensive Xmas gifts. Mrs. E. Ham, librarian, reported donation of 60 books to our library for which the members were very grateful. This announcement disclosed the fact that our bookcases are already filled but that the majority of books have been read and re-read in our community. After a short discussion it was the unanimous vote that our surplus books which had already been read be passed on to the Ernesttown branch. A donation of the proceeds of the concert held in the Parish Hall in November was voted to the Sick Children's Hospital. Several new members were added to the roll. The planning of arrangements for the Xmas boxes to be sent finished the business. Everyone was pleased to have our district president with us and to hear her splendid talk on Do's and Don'ts for the Institute members. Music by Misses Dennee was appreciated by all and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Ham and Misses Dennee. The meeting closed with National Anthem, after which the goods on the sale table were sold, and money added to the Xmas cheer fund.

A dainty lunch was then served, all leaving for their homes with a feeling that they had spent a happy afternoon and also looking forward to the next meeting in January which will be held in the evening in the Parish Hall, with a very interesting program promised.

HIGH TEST GASOLINE OF NO ADVANTAGE IN WARM WEATHER

The extra three to five cents per gallon paid for millions of gallons of gasoline in Canada during summer months was wasted, according to H. K. Cummings, chief of the automotive power plant section of the Bureau of Standards at Washington.

Following several years of study of the matter Mr. Cummings declares use of high test, or premium grade gas in warm weather increases expense without any gain in efficiency. In fact tests proved that lower mileage was obtained in premium gas in warm weather. This was accounted for by the heavier evaporation of high test grades in summer and to the fact that engine trouble results from "gassing."

Cold weather, however, does bring with it easier starting and better engine performance from premium gasoline, he finds.

Mr. Cummings declares it should be emphasized in general that there is little to be gained by the use of anything but gasoline in cars which do not knock when ordinary gasoline is used. No increase in mileage or benefit in performance is to be expected under such conditions. On the other hand, a fuel which knocks appreciably in a given engine will give less power and fewer miles per gallon than one which does not knock.

"In general, "Mr. Cummings says, "the prices paid for premium gasolines are not justified by the results obtained."

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Little Jimmy visited his father's office, after examining the type-writing machine, asked his mother: "What do they take those to the theatre for?"

"My boy," replied his mother, "they do not take them to the theatre."

"Well, it's mighty funny then. Pa was telling a gentleman that he took his typewriter to the thea—"

"James," said his father sternly, "I will see you privately after we get home."

Miller's Worm Powders act mildly and without injury to the child, and there can be no doubt of their deadly effect upon worms. They have been in successful use for a long time and are recognized as a leading preparation for the purpose. They have proved their power in numberless cases and have given relief to many children, who, but for the good offices of this compound, would have continued weak and enfeebled.

Science is a wonderful thing when it works.

Sandy (to his London host): "I wonder The noo if ye can tell me the definition of Capital and Labor?"

Host: "I guess I can. It's quite simple to get an Englishman to treat a Scotsman to a drink—that's capital, but to get a Scotsman to treat an Englishman, well—that's Labor."

Always Ready and Reliable—Practically all pains arising from inflammation can be removed with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Simply rub it on the sore spot and it is quickly absorbed by the skin. Its healing power is conveyed to the inflamed tissue which is quickly soothed. This fine old remedy is also a specific for all manner of cuts, scratches, bruises and sprains. Keep a bottle handy always.

The teacher asked her class if any of them knew what an ophthalmic hospital was, but received no answer.

"Well, I'll tell you," she said. It's for people who suffer with their eyes."

"That's where my father ought to go. "Is he troubled with his eyes?" asked the teacher.

"Yes," was the reply. "I heard mother tell the next door neighbor that he came home almost blind every night."

Dust Causes Asthma. Even a little speck too small to see will lead to agonies which no words can describe. The walls of the breathing tubes contract and it seems as if the very life must pass. From this condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy brings the user to perfect rest. It relieves the passages and normal breathing is firmly established again. Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

Two Irish divines were driving to catch a train last month for which one of them, who was very proud of his new watch, insisted that they still had plenty of time; but, on arriving in sight of the station, the train was seen steaming out. "Oh," said our proud friend, "I had such faith in my new watch." "It would be better if you had 'good works' in it," replied the other, turning the pony homewards.

No man or woman should hobble painfully about because of corns when so certain a relief is at hand as Holloway's Corn Remover.

PRIVY COUNCIL DECIDES SOME ASTOUNDING CASES

It is conceivable that the determination of the Irish Free State to refuse to permit the privy council to hear Irish cases may have to be passed on, so far as its legality is concerned, by the privy council itself. But the Free State is not worrying about that contingency, having come to the conclusion that its own legislation is sufficient. It is now said to be preparing a case for submission to the next Imperial conference at which it will try to induce the other dominions to abolish the appeal on the ground that it is "an anachronism and constitutes a limitation of dominion independence." In Canada we hear from time to time lone voices raised in protest; but there is certainly no general feeling in this country that we should deprive ourselves of the advantage of having as a last resort the right to the opinion of not only the highest court in the empire, but probably the most distinished court in the world. We do not purpose to argue the matter here, but merely to glance at some of the functions of the court and note some of the curious causes that are there decided.

A Canadian Spellbinder.

Mr. John W. Davis, solicitor-general of the United States and later American ambassador to the Court of St. James, said, after paying a visit to the court in 1914, "I have never seen so little pomp and ceremony in a court before." It sits in less state than a police court in an oak-pannelled room lined with bookshelves. The five judges are wigless and without their robes. The barristers, in wigs and gowns, sit about at tables reading. While the chief note of formality is struck by two attendants in evening dress. The barrister who is pleading, stands at a little desk facing the judges and addresses them—if he is wise—in a conversational manner. There is a story of a Toronto lawyer who went before their lordships on one occasion, in the interest of the Lord's Day Alliance, we believe, and pleaded his own case. He forgot the nature of the court, before which he was appearing, but only remembered that the opportunity of his life had come. This he seized to make the kind of speech which would have been well received at a political meeting in the backwoods. Their lordships were first astounded, then amused, and then, as the pangs of hunger assailed them, indignant. He no sooner sat down than judgment was given against him.

Dominion Appeals.

The function of this court is, generally speaking, to hear appeals from the dominions and colonies, the ecclesiastical courts of the United Kingdom and consular courts. Appeals from the law courts of England, Scotland and Wales go to the House of Lords or in other words to the King in Parliament." If, therefore, the dominions should advise that the appeals should be discontinued the imperial privy council might be forced to go odt of existence for lack of matter before it. Since dominion and colonial appeals provide three-quarters or more of its work. We suppose no court in the world has such a variety of causes to determine. The latest decision given admitted the right of women to become members of the Canadian senate. A Canadian hockey dispute found its way to the court a few years ago and it has had frequently to decide between the conflicting claims of noisy gods in various parts of the empire. One of its most tremendous cases was that of the Labrador boundary dispute which took 20 years to prepare and affected the destiny of 120,000 square miles of territory. Recently, according to a writer in the New York Times, the court was asked to decide whether an idol in an Indian temple must be worshipped draped or in the nude, and whether a waist band adorned by this idol had been acquired by supernatural means.

Some Curious Cases.

Such questions the lords consider with suitable gravity, and if it seems extraordinary that such points of religious doctrine and worship come before them, we should remember that in the absence of a code the matters would be settled by the sword and civil war as they were in the past. In one month the court had to listen to an appeal from the Cape of Good Hope in which one-farmer charged another with maliciously driving locusts up his land" a Chinese action over the loss of a cargo of opium on the Wangpo river; Bengali lady's claim upon her husband's pin-money and a dispute over the ownership of a mosque in Ceylon. These suits were mingled with the legal tangles of more civilized people over the right to erect telegraph poles, claims under mortgage deeds and problems involving the ownership of "tied" public houses.

Argument Against Court.

An argument useful to those who oppose the right of appeal, and of which we made them a free present, is that many of the cases are to be decided by English law at all but by the law of the litigants. "Obviously British law is silent on the claims of rival gods, but there is Hindu law, even if unwritten, on the matter, and this for example the privy council has had to study. On one occasion two Indian gods, known as the Red God and the Yellow God appeared before the court. The idols representing these gods were actually present and each was consulted with by the Hindu pedial priest who in turn would address his leading counsel who would then lay the arguments before the judges. Of one of these notable decisions it is said that "hell had been dismissed with costs." Another put an end to a litigation lasting for 17 years in South Africa over the construction of a few words in another reversed a decision given 44 years previously by the highest court in Ceylon.

Mother: "Willie, I heard that instead of going to Sunday School this morning you played football."

Willie: "That isn't true—and I've got a string of fish to prove it."

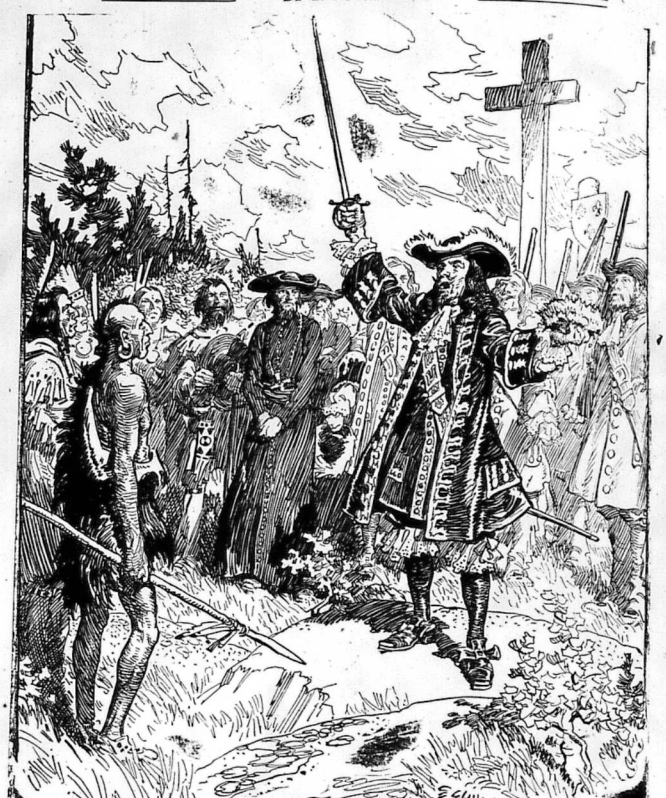
The minister was taking a class of boys in the Sunday School, and said, reprovingly, "John M'Tavish, your mouth is open."

"I ken," said John, "I opened it masel."

Cast your bread on the waters and you will realise how many people are out for dough.

Dramatic Milestones in Canada's Story

BY C. W. JEFFERYS



St. Lusson at Saulte St. Marie

If the dream of a few Frenchmen in the seventeenth century had been realized, the continent of North America would have become a vast French Empire. The magnificent project apparently had every prospect of success, and for over a generation was more than a possibility. The King, Louis XIV, had a boundless ambition; served by capable soldiers and statesmen, for the greater part of his long reign, he dominated Europe; government was conefficiency and supported by resources greater than those of any other power of his time.

When he came to the throne, his colony in Canada consisted of a handful of traders, missionaries and settlers scattered in a few isolated posts along the St. Lawrence. For years it had been the prey of commercial companies who cared only for the profits of the fur trade, and neglected or discouraged the permanent settlement which they were pledged to support.

But in 1665 the King, disgusted with the results of company rule made Canada a royal province and took its government into his own hands; and the feeble little colony took on new life.

Look, with his great minister, Colbert, planned to increase the population of Canada and to extend its boundaries France held the eastern gateway of the continent; the great unknown interior was to be explored and occupied by the French; the Western Indians were to be won over to trade, alliance and the true faith. Settlers were sent in large numbers, soldiers were dispatched from France to defend the frontiers against the Iroquois, agriculture, trade and industry were encouraged, exploring expeditions were sent forth. During the next thirty years amazing discoveries were made. Hudson's Bay was reached, the Great Lakes opened to trade and travel, the Mississippi was found and followed to its mouth, something of the explorers and the governors of Canada that a continuous chain of French settlements should be extended from Acadia to the Gulf of Mexico. Some, like La Salle and Frontenac and the Intendant Talon, caught a glimpse of the possible future, and the idea became a policy, a plan that appeared feasible.

Along the Atlantic seaboard were sprinkled the English colonies, each leading its own isolated life, indifferent to its neighbors and immersed in its own immediate interests, none extending any great distance inland, all more or less jealous of each other and of interference or control by another country. An organized and united New France circling around them would hem them into a narrow strip along the coast and bar them from westward expansion.

It was at Sault Ste. Marie that the first steps were taken to put the plan into operation, and a ceremony was performed which announced this ambitious program. In 1670 a French officer, Daumont de St. Lusson, with a small party, was sent to take formal possession of the whole country around the Upper Lakes and along the great river, not yet discovered, and known only by hearsay, which to-day is called the Mississippi.

St. Lusson spent the winter on Manitoulin Island, sending messengers to the neighboring tribes to invite them to meet him in the spring at the Sault Ste. Marie, where the Indians were accustomed to gather every year to catch fish in the rapids.

Here, on the 14th of June, 1671, St. Lusson, with his company of soldiers and coureurs de bois, and the Jesuits of the near-by mission, met a great crowd of Indians, gathered from fourteen different tribes. On the hill above the foot of the rapids, a large cross was set up and a cedar post erected beside it bearing a metal plate engraved with the King's coat of arms. The cross was blessed by the priests, and the company sang hymns and prayed for the King. Then St. Lusson, holding a sod of earth in one hand, the ancient symbol of taking possession of the land, and raising his sword, proclaimed Louis XIV King of "all the country bounded by the seas of the North, the West, and the South."—a claim inclusive enough to satisfy the ambition even of the Sun King himself. The soldiers fired their muskets and shouted "Vive le Roi," while the Indians yelled and whooped. The ceremony ended with a long speech by Father Allouez, in which he glorified the great King and boasted of his wealth and power. "He is the chief of the greatest chiefs, and has no equal on earth," said Allouez. "All the chiefs you have ever seen are but children beside him. He is a great tree and they are but little herbs that you walk over and trample underfoot. When our King attacks his enemies, he is more terrible than the thunder; the earth shakes; the air is all on fire with the blaze of his cannon; he is seen in the midst of his warriors covered with the blood of his enemies, whom he kills in such numbers that he does not reckon them by the scalps but by the streams of blood which he causes to flow." Truly an appropriate occupation for the Most Christian King, as Louis was officially styled. "He come from every quarter of the earth to listen to him and admire him. All that is done in the world is decided by him alone. In his cities are such houses where there are hatchets enough to cut down all your forests, kettles enough to cook all your moose, and beads enough to fill all your lodges. His house is longer than from here to the top of the Sault, and higher than your tallest trees; and it holds more families than your largest town."

The whole performance was a typical example of the skilful methods of the French in dealing with the Indians by presenting an impressive spectacle and satisfying their love of oratory and ceremonial. Nevertheless, no sooner had the white men departed than the Indians tore down the royal arms, which might bring evil upon them. Perhaps, we may regard its destruction as an omen of the fate of French ambitions on this continent.

It is interesting to speculate how the history of North America—of Europe itself—would have read to-day had the great idea been carried into accomplished fact, and the King's claim made good by persistent and energetic action. But Louis XIV turned from whatever dreams of an American empire that had visited him to plans for European power which involved him in war and left him and France to disaster.

HOME LIFE OF THE PRINCE OF WALES

Appropriately enough England's premier bachelor lives in the most typically English kind of bachelor home. Officially described as "The York House in the Palace of St. James, London," it is a quiet, old-fashioned house where dignity is excellently combined with comfort.

The Prince detests ostentation in any way so it is not surprising that his house is furnished with extreme simplicity. In the white hall there is merely a carved bench for visitors and a table on which they can deposit their hats before being ushered into the Prince's presence.

Most of his callers the Prince receives in the State reception room, where a fine portrait of the King in naval uniform hangs over the marble fireplace, but intimate friends are always taken direct to the Prince's study This is the room he uses most. It is plainly papered in cream and the woodwork and furniture are dark oak. There are several capacious easy-chairs upholstered in brown leather and one wall it entirely covered with bookshelves. The Prince is an omniverous reader, his taste ranging from detective fiction to books on industrial welfare and veterinary manuals.

Alas for the match-makers, there is only one portrait of a lady on the Prince's carved desk and that the Queen in morning dress, nursing Princess Elizabeth. Several old sporting prints from the Prince's collection hang on the walls and in an antique cabinet he has some valuable ship models.

An electric kettle stands on the study hearth and nearby is a little cupboard containing a cup and saucer, a teapot and some China tea. Tea is the Prince's favorite beverage. With toast and a little fruit, it constitutes his breakfast winter and summer alike, and he always insists on brewing it himself. Even when touring Africa, camped in the heart of the jungle, the Prince still made his tea in the one battered tin jug which the party possessed. When working at home, he likes to be able to make himself "the cup that cheers" whenever he wishes without disturbing his servants, who, incidentally, are all ex-Servicemen, several partially disabled.

Official gatherings at York House are held in the green and gold State dining room, but when the Prince has a few bachelor friends to dinner they have a simple meal in the Prince's rose-walled private dining room, sitting at a small round table and listening to the wireless loud speaker, disguised as a Chinese vase on the sideboard, afterwards adjourning to the study for a game of bridge.

Blue and grey compose the restful color-scheme of the Prince's bedroom and his oak bed it so plain that Prince George always jokingly declares that his brother bought it cheaply at a hospital clearance sale. Cora, the Prince's wee Cairn terrier, has a cushion at the foot of the bed. The Prince also owns several handsome Alsation hounds, but these are only for show purposes and are kept at his country house near Sunningdale.

Greatly to the athletic Prince's regret there is not sufficient space to make a gymnasium at York House so he has had a punch-ball and stretchers fitted up in his bathroom. To obtain the rest of the daily exercise, in which he is a firm believer, the Prince generally dons shorts and an old sweater and motors across to Buckinham Palace where he runs several times around the big lawn.

ECONOMIC CONFERENCE OF 1930

There are growing indications that the Empire economic conference, urged by Hon R. B. Bennett during the last session of Parliament, will become a reality next year.

Premier King endorsed the plan somewhat reluctantly a month or more after it had been advanced. He forwarded it to Britain where the reception was quite enthusiastic and where, almost daily, suggestions are brought forward to implement the agenda of such a conference.

Latterly the King Government has espoused the meeting more warmly. There are indications that the conference will be used so far as is possible by our Government to divert attention from our sorry fiscal relations with the United States.

Canadians are a unit in their desire to knit the Empire more closely in trade and in sentiment but the knitting cannot be done by one Dominion, or by all the Dominions. The Mother Country must be a full partner. Each unit has its contribution to make to the common welfare and the contributions should be made simultaneously. The Economic Conference can be a medium to that consumation.

There lies no solution of Canada's economic problems in the transfer of our purchasing of goods, which should be made in Canada, from the United States to any other country. Mere extension of preferential tariffs is futile. Sentimental ties can be firmed by practical measures which will work for the progress, the prosperity and the solidarity of British Commonwealth of Nations.

TRIBUTE TO LATE DORA CREIGHTON
There has vanished from this earthly scene one of God's ladies whom we all sincerely mourn for it was she we so dearly loved. Departed from us so suddenly and at such an early age, so much the more pathetic. Possessed of a charming personality so radiant, so warm, and enduring of disposition tempered in full measure of love, grace and sincerity and devotion. We know nothing beyond the grave, but cherish the hope to recognize our loved ones as we step beyond this life. Dora you have gone and we are left with throbbing hearts and weary hands to toil onward to the portal through which you have passed and Oh to greet you there!—R. S. M., Winnipeg.

When you have selected her gift—Pearl-Tone on Ivory perhaps; or maybe a Parker or Waterman Pen and pencil set—no not forget to add a Christmas package of Hunt's or Smiles n' Chuckles candy. A beautiful display of them at Wallace's, Napanee's leading drug store.

FREE SHOTS ON Local Sport

Well, the boys got away to a good start last week up at Reg. Douglas' ice house and what a mob there was. It seemed to me that there were enough there to make up half a dozen squads and give each team a string of subs long enough to reach across the rink.

* * * * *

The powers-that-be are going to have a real job picking out a first string crew. There isn't an awful lot to choose between most of them yet, but they'll have to thin out the weaklings shortly. When there is only an hour practice at a time it wouldn't give anybody a chance to carry thirty or forty men. A fellow would hardly warm up before he'd be due for a rest.

* * * * *

A lot of the youngsters haven't found their sea-legs yet nor has there been any startling exhibitions of speed. It looks as though these lads from Deseronto are going to make a lot of the local talent work and work hard for a look-in on the line-up. They were right in the play all the time the other night.

* * * * *

Eddie Watts has taken on quite a contract to slap a team into shape in less than a month especially when it's the first experience in organized hockey for a lot of the lads. However if anybody can do it, he can and if the boys will give him everything they've got, the hopefuls from Belleville and Trenton may get the surprise of their lives.

* * * * *

I noticed that the Whig-Standard didn't give very much publicity to the boxing exhibition in Belleville last week.

* * * * *

And the reason is plan enough!

* * * * *

That reason is a lad whose monnicker is Ted Bentley. Queen's sent a man to Belleville with the idea that he would win in a walk but the truth of the matter is, he lost in a sleep. Ted thought it was a boxing bout and started to box; but it wasn't long until he was floored and was kept down until the end of the round.

* * * * *

Then he realized that it was a fight and that he would have to fight to win.

* * * * *

So he fought. And how!

* * * * *

The round wasn't half over before he stretched the Collegian out cold and clean on the canvas. They had to carry him out of the ring.

* * * * *

The pair were evenly matched and he might have out-boxed Ted, but he tried to out-fight him so—well, it was just too bad.

Each guided slow his camel beast

WORLD-WIDE CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE FOR 1930

The results of the first world wide census of agriculture will begin to be available in the winter of 1930 and the League of Nations and the International Institute of Agriculture plan to have the world agricultural census reported decennially.

Definite preparations for taking their censuses early in 1930 are reported by 39 countries, including the principal agricultural countries of the world and about 100 other countries have promised to participate in the census, although they have not reported what action has been taken to assure the taking of the census.

In all, promises of co-operation by responsible government officials were obtained for countries and their dependancies comprising more than 97% of the land surface, 98% of the population, and 99% of the total agricultural and livestock of the world.

The success of the world agricultural census now depends upon the various governments which have promised co-operation in this great undertaking. The results of this world-wide census will be gin to be available in the winter of 1930.

STATEMENT OF NAPANEE'S FINANCES AT THE CLOSE OF YEAR, 1929

We have come to the end of another Municipal years business, for the Town of Napanee, and the finance committee thought they should make a full statement and publish it, showing to each ratepayer how the business has been carried on for the last twelve months. These figures have been compiled from the books of the Town.

Assets.

Total taxes to be collected for the year, 1929	$127159 56
Taxes paid in	111925 48
Balance of taxes to be collected	$ 15234 08
Less amount uncollectable	358 29
Balance of taxes collectable for the year 1929	$ 14875 79
Cash on hand December 16th, 1929	15001 95

Liabilities

We owe the Bank	$ 18500 00
Coupons outstanding	171 13
	$ 18,671 13

Overdraft.

Liabilities, as above	$ 18671 13
Assets, as above	15001 95
Overdraft	$ 3669 18

When the present council took office last January they asked the Treasurer to make preliminary estimates which he did and in July last the estimates were prepared. According to these estimates as prepared at a 50 mill rate, we should have an overdraft of only $2775.16, whereas it is $3669.18, a difference against the estimates of $894.02 or in other words the estimates were $894.02 short of what was actually required.

Increase in Police Salary	$ 257 84
Chairs for Town Hall	268 50
Insurance	242 03
Wallace Play Ground fence	290 00
Pool Bridge	100 00
	$ 1158 37
Increase in receipts, as estimated	249 69
	$ 908 68

If the above unforseen expenses had not been incurred the estimates as prepared last July would be $14.66 above the amount required at a 60 mill rate, and leave the overdraft at $2775.16.

The Council of 1930 will have their expenditures decreased by the following items:—

County rate carried over and raised in the year 1929	$ 4125 00
Pay of Quinte debenture	1200 00
Decrease in overdraft to be paid	210 75
Fire escape for Town Hall	400 00
Painting	200 00
Chairs for Town Hall	268 00
Drainage	100 00
	$ 6593 75

Which means that unless some unforseen expenses arise, there will be a reduction in the rate of from 3 to 4 mills in 1930.

We may add that the total decrease of contrallable expenditure for 1929 over 1928 is $3907.07.

The Finance Committee wish to congratulate each chairman of the different committees on the way in which he controlled his expenditures.

BY-LAW FOR PURCHASE OF ELECTRIC SYSTEM

Question—If the profit under government operation for 1928 was about $14,326, why is the government so willing to dispose of the undertaking.

Answer—The government never wished to operate municipal power but was compelled to buy the Stormont system in order to supply power throughout Eastern Ontario under the same conditions as in Western Ontario. Now that the different municipalities have been organized separately and are operating profitably, the government wishes to relinquish the operation of local utilities and simply supply power.

Answer—Belleville, Oshawa, Lindsay and Peterboro have already done so.

The by-laws were passed in each of these by large majorities.

Question—Can you mention another municipality in this district which has been operating its own system long enough to prove that it can be run profitable under a Public Utilities Commission?

Answer—The town of Picton has been operating its system for several years. The rate for house light lighting has been lowered to 2¼ per Kilowatt hour. (The rate in Napanee is 6c). Picton has almost paid off the debenture for purchase of their system; had about $25,000 in cash and securities, with a reserve for depreciation of about $7,000.

Question—What is the value of the plant that we are buying for $70,000.00? Answer—The value of the plant that we will take possession of is about $115,000.00.

Question—We had a plant and sold it. Why should we buy again?

Answer—The plant we sold to the Seymour Company was a steam plant providing a service from sunset to sunrise. It must have been soon replaced by a larger and more modern plant. We obtained an all-day service from the Seymour Co., at a lower rate than we could have manufactured it. We got a good price for our plant. We are now buying simply a distributing system. We sold just at the right time and we are buying at the right time.

NAPANEE W. I.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Agricultural rooms on Tuesday afternoon, December 10th, with the president in the chair. The meeting opened in the usual manner business was attended to then a most entertaining program followed.

Mrs. Haggerty had a most interesting list of current events and Mrs. Mavis, who was the delegate to the Kingston Convention brought back a very comprehensive report of all that took place, especially the matters most interesting to our branch. Following this Miss Edith MacMorine, winner of the silver cake plate, donated by Mr. Runions, for highest honors in the domestic science course in Mrs. Mavity, gave an excellent report of the judging competition held at the Canadian Exhibition at Toronto.

The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Helen Grange, of the staff of the N.C.I. Miss Grange has delighted the Women's Institute on many occasions, but never was she listened to with keener enjoyment than at this time, when she gave her "Impressions of Paris," not a cut and dried account of the advertised scenic spots, but a friendly visit to many beauty places and an interesting account of little mannerisms and habits of the people themselves, with a verbal picture of the places visited, which carried her audience with her and which left them wishing heartily that they could follow her closing friendly advice to "take a little holiday and enjoy these things individually."

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

FASCINATING LINKS IN CANADA'S HISTORY

One exhibit which immediately strikes the imagination of the most casual visitor to the Dominion Archives in Ottawa is the model of Quebec, the fruits of the genius of Lieut. J. D. Duberger, of the Royal Engineers, constructed in 1786, and finished in 1809.

The model is cut entirely out of wood and modelled to a certain scale (24 feet to the inch) and is the City of Quebec without any details lacking. Even the miniature ships riding at anchor on the bosom of the St. Lawrence are shown.

Duberger's model has had a chequered career. After it was completed it was placed in the hall room of the Chateau St. Louis, and in 1813 was taken to England by Colonel By and placed in the Woolwich Arsenal. It remained there one hundred years and then was rescued from oblivion by Dr. A. G. Doughty, C.M.G., and through the influence of our late Governor-General, Earl Grey. When it came into the possession of the Department of Dominion Archives, it was in a most dilapidated condition. It had received a generous coat of grey paint which had blotted out the doors and windows of the tiny houses. The guns of the batteries, the trees on the gardens, the division walls and fences had all disappeared under the relentless brush of the "renovator." The model was almost a ruin. But today it is in perfect condition and exactly as it was made.

The whole model is sketched out to show particularly the fortifications and public buildings. It is nearly 35 feet in length and comprises a considerable portion of the Plains of Abraham, as far as the spot where Wolfe died. There is singular correctness to the very shape and projection of the rock, the elevations and descents in the city and on the plains, particularly those eminences which command the garrison.

A few of the outstanding places marked in the model, interesting to those who even faintly remember the early history of Quebec, are: Cap Blanc and the King's Ship Yard; old French power magazine; the spot where Montgomery fell; site of the King's bastion; the Lower Governor's garden; the Upper Governor's garden and Mont Carmel; the King's ordinance stores and wharf; the London Coffee House; the Church of N. D. des Victoires; Prescott gate; the Bishop's Palace; the Union Hotel; Chateau St. Louis; the Cathedral of Holy Trinity; the Court House; Ursuline Convent; Upper Town market; Seminary; Montcalm's residence; L'Hotel-Dieu military barracks and arsenal; the new jail; the Intendant Palace and the General Hospital.

This is just a brief review of the many interesting features of the Model of Quebec, which is the property of Canada by the British Government in 1910.

CAMDEN W. I.

On November 1st, Camden East branch of Women's Institute held its regular meeting and Hallowe'en Social at the home of Mrs. W. Dunn.

There was a record attendance of members and visitors, members answering the roll call by "how I make my head save my heels." Little business was brought before the meeting; the most important of which was a decision to supply school books to a needy girl to enable her to attend school properly equipped for study; and the selection of a committee to prepare for a social to be held early in the New Year.

Mrs. J. Lewis rendered a vocal solo, "Love's Old Sweet Song," very acceptably and the meeting closed by the singing of "God Save the King."

Ladies Fancy—Mrs. A. Robinson.
Men's Fancy—Mrs. E. Hamilton.
Ladies' Comic—Miss M. Hyland.
Men's Comic—Mr. C. Boulton.
Children's Fancy — Dorothy and Walter Huff.
Children's Comic — Burdette and Sammy Hamilton.

After lunch games and dancing were continued for some time. Then all reluctantly departed for home, each expressing his or her pleasure at having been so royally entertained.

The December meeting of the Camden East W. I. was held on the sixth inst., at the home of Mrs. Love and Mrs. Huff with fifteen members and seven visitors present.

The President opened the meeting in the usual way and roll call was answered by each member asking a conundrum, answers for which called for much quick wittedness.

The minutes of last meeting read and approved a considerable sum of business was proceeded with. It was decided to give the usual Christmas boxes to the needy and the usual greetings to the ill of the community. Then the subject of the exchange of gifts among the W. I. members was brought up for discussion and met with the approval of those present. Each member is to give a useful gift, not exceeding fifteen cents in price, to another member whose name she drew.

There was some discussion regarding the social to be held, and it was decided to hold it on Monday, December 30th, 1929, and door prizes will be given.

Correspondence was read re Christmas cheer for sailors and their families and as a result five dollars was voted to the Navy League.

Education—Mrs. A. Robinson.
Health—Mrs. O. Hinch.
Agriculture—Mrs. H. Huff.
Home Economics—Mrs. E. Hamilton.
Legislation—Mrs. B. Clark.
Community Activities—Mrs. G. Black.
Relief—Miss Mae MacDonald.
Historical Research—Mrs. W. Hinch.
Canadian Industries—Mrs. A. Salsbury.
Publicity—Mrs. G. Smedley.

Mrs. A. Salsbury's excellent and very interesting paper, "The History of Camden East," was very much enjoyed and she was asked to have it printed in the "Beaver" so each could have a copy.

Miss Helen Huff's reading, "Betsy and I are out," providing much food for thought and many laughs, certainly was well read and thoroughly enjoyed.

Mrs. A. Robinson gave a splendid report of the Convention held in Kingston recently, and the meeting closed by singing the National Anthem, after which lunch was served by the hostess and committee.

Our January meeting will be held on the 3rd at 2 p.m., at Mrs. W. Stewart's. Roll call is "easy desserts" and Mrs. MacDonald; current events; a contest—darning a cashmere sock; each member providing a sock to be darned during the afternoon.

DON'T BE TAKEN BY SURPRISE

Reports are in circulation from Cape Breton to Vancouver Island that the King Government is very seriously considering the dissolution of Parliament and an election to take place before the end of May.

An election was considered last summer but the re-action from the country —culminating in the defeat of the Liberal Government in Saskatchewan —was so unfavorable that the project was abandoned. Since then, however, conditions have changed for the worse. The Prime Minister and his counsellors sense political tragedy in the offing and a situation not far removed from panic rules.

If he waits until the new U. S. tariff changes against Canada are effective he knows no Party can then survive, which does not come forward with a Canada First Policy. And he knows he cannot sponsor or implement such a policy on the floor of Parliament. His extreme followers will not let him.

The United States is pressing for progress on the St. Lawrence deepening scheme. There again his supporters are hopelessly divided.

He has executed agreements for the return of natural resources to Manitoba and Alberta. They must be endorsed by Parliament and by the legislatures concerned. His agreement with Alberta makes no statutory provision for the rights of the Catholic minority in educational matters. Resentment is already seething in Quebec over this alleged betrayal, and if the measure comes before Parliament it is doubtful if Mr. King can command the support of more than half his own supporters for it in its present form. His own Minister of Justice, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, and Henri Bourassa, are expected to lead the attack on it.

The publications which support him in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton are printing reports that unemployment presents a very serious situation. The return for this year's grain crop is most unevenly divided and consequently many thousands on the laid find cause for complaint.

Thus there are many reasons why Mr. King does not want to meet Parliament and there is little hope that conditions outside Parliament will improve by fall.

It is true he has nothing to offer as a solution of economic problems except the transfer of Canada's purchases—through preferential tariffs—from the United States to British sources.

But he believes he has a much better chance to dress up that program in the Union Jack and sell it to the public now than he will have after meeting Parliament or after the higher U. S. tariff's against Canadian goods become a reality.

Notice of dissolution may be an early New Year's present to the people of Canada.

ILL-FATED RING PLACED ON EXHIBIT

Vienna.—It is a popular tradition that marriage rings should not be used twice. That there is something in it is proved by the rings which were made for the wedding of Empress Maria Theresa to Emperor Franz I and used a second time at the wedding of Crown Prince Rudolf with Princess Stefanie of Belgium.

The eight years of Rudolf's married life were filled with matrimonial strife and ended with the drama at the hunting lodge of Mayerling, when the Crown Prince shot his friend, Baroness Vetsera, and then made an end to his own life. These rings are shown in the newly opened "Ecclesiastical Treasury," whose famous collection has been enlarged by the "Treasure of the Capuchines," which hitherto was not accessible to the public.

The monastery of the Capuchines Hapsburgs, who were baptized by Capuchine monks and buried in the monastery's vaults in the Neuer Markt in the heart of the city. In recognition of the many services of the monks to the Imperial family, the latter made them precious gifts, and individual Hapsburgers bequeathed them art works and sacred objects.

In the monastery the gifts were added to the treasury to remain there entombed like their donors until after the revolution when the treasurers were handed over to the state, which has added them to the ecclesiastical exhibition in the former imperial palace.

Some quaint mementos, including the reliquaries of the pious Empress Anna, are in the collection. There is a tree of embrossed gold, which bears six fruit little receptacles containing teeth and other relics of saints. The receptacles hold relics of the Virgin mother, it is said, also of St. Peter, the founder of the church; of Catherine, St. Joseph and St. Christopher.

Another reliquenry of the same empress has the shape of a miniature altar, richly ornamented with gold and set with precious stones. In the centre is a picture showing the flagellation of Christ and the setting up of the crown of thorns.

The pieces of elaborate Mosaic work, consists of countless little patches of variquary, richly set with pears and rubies, contains in a niche a thorn of the crown.

In the course of the centuries the Capuchine monastery received from its patrons many precious church vestments and embroidered vestments, which are exhibited in glass vitrines. Most of the latter are the work of Austrian duchesses. The christening of a Hapsburg was always a great event and surrounded by tradition-hallowed ceremonies.

The garments, which the newly born archduke or archduchess wore on such occasion, generally were elaborate miniature state robes with heavy gold and silver embroidery and fine lace. Several of these garments are to be seen in the exhibition treasure, among them one worn by Francis Josef at his baptism. It served for a whole generation as traditional candidate and also was donned by Archduke Maximilian, the later emperor of Mexico, by Archduchess Karl Ludwig and Ludwig Victor.

EQUAL RIGHTS FOR MAN LEAGUE STARTED

London Woman of Canada let me [illegible] to Geoffrey Kimber, the [illegible] who is going to protect all us [illegible] men from your subtle [illegible] wiles.

[illegible] you say? Then all the [illegible] to Mr. Kimber, who by [illegible] a United Kingdom section of [illegible] League for the Rights of Men has taken on womankind single-handed, without a single tremor of fear!

What a hero is Mr. Kimber.

And how lucky for him that he hasn't got to tell a wife what he has done!

A reporter had a long talk with Mr. Kimber at his Chelsea headquarters, and was delighted to hear that women will not dominate men if he can help it, and that he is going to chop off all the tenacles that women have been stretching out to seize the privileges of Man, the Master.

In fact his gray-blue eyes positively flashed as he passed his hand through his bushy, fair hair and said:

"We of the League are definitely against the ultra-masculine woman who cuts her hair short and imitates a man. Do you, as a man, realize how many of them there are about?"

"Alas!" I said sympathetically.

He rearranged a stack of propaganda on his table. "We have got to fight," he said, with the utmost firmness, "And, my goodness, we are up against something.

"There are four or five high organizations for women, and not one for men. Women want everything changed in their favor. What has been done to help men.

"Nothing," I answered, "only please don't quote me as saying so."

"We want fair play for men," said Mr. Kimber, emphatically. "Look at the divorce laws. They are unjust to men. See how women trade on men's chivalry.

"This tradition that a man should give up his seat to a woman in a car is all wrong. I would give up my seat to an old woman or an old man, to a woman with a baby or a man with a baby, but as for the rest—why, I reckon I am just as tired at the end of the day as any woman.

"But what do women say? They say: "Some fool will give us a seat,' and get on a crowded bus."

Mr. Kimber's eyes positively glinted.

"Woman," he said, "not only want to mother the race, she wants to manage it as well.

"I am afraid men will deteriorate if things go on as they are. They will get weak and spineless, while women will become masculine.

"Why—tell me this, as a man—why do we allow women to teach boys in schools when they are older than seven?"

"Ah!" I said, cautiously.

"The boys become feminine," he said. Mr. Kimber declared sorrowfully that already women were forgetting to cook.

"But don't imagine that we are out to smash women altogether," he said "Are we against women going into the professions, even though we do prefer the womanly woman? Certainly not. We're not fools.

"We see the necessity for women policemen. But we are out against the sort of educational woman who teaches girls to go in for so much sport. They are a real menace.

"The ordinary girl is not so dangerous. She simply wants a good time. She likes to wear nice frocks, and go to theatres. But as for the others . . . . . .

Mr. Kimber, who has given up his work as a teacher to fight the cause of downtrodden Man, and has begun by sending a letter to the three Party leaders about it, is not such a confirmed bachelor as you might think.

"I shall probably get married myself," he said.

"What is your religion?" the recruit was asked.

"Promptly and smartly came the answer, "Militia, sir."

"No, no, I said 'religion.'"

"Oh, 'religion,' sir. I beg your pardon. I'm a plumber."

THE LARGEST FOSSIL FOUND BY CHANCE

The warning whir-r of a rattlesnake led to the discovery of the largest prehistoric creature ever found; the accidental stroke of geologist's pick into a slab of sandstone disclosed remains of the ancester of all sea serpents. How these lucky finds took place, is related by Charles H. Sternberg, noted hunter of fossil monsters, who, in sixty years of searching, has uncovered more than three hundred specimen of prehistoric life.

"Once I was walking along the rim of a cliff in the Bad Lands of Wyoming," he writes in the December issue of Popular Science Monthly, "when I heard, seemingly at my feet, the deadly warning of a rattle snake. I leaped to one side, slipped, fell, slid over the edge of the crag and came to a sudden stop sitting down on what apparently was a brown boulder ten feet from the top. The 'boulder' was the shoulder bone of the largest dinosaur ever unearthed. It was nearly eighty feet long, sixteen feet high at the shoulders, and probably weighed fifty tons or more. Had it not been for the snake on the edge of the cliff, that monster reptile, probably five million years old, would have remained undiscovered.

"Such twists of fate make fossil hunting one of the most fascinating games in the world. Searching for prehistoric shells and other marine life on the one-time shore of a great ocean in Kansas. I dropped the geologist's pick I was carrying and the sharp point accidently struck a slab of sandstone, flaking off a chip a foot long and half as wide. Beneath, dark brown against the pale yellow sandstone, was the tooth-filled snout of a huge fish. Careful excavation revealed it to be a Portheus mofossus, a prehistoric fish fourteen feet long, probably able to destroy any shark alive today.

"Sometimes, the specimen a hunter seeks is found right at the door of his tent, as was the case in one of my expeditions to Canada. Walled in by rain in the valley of a river in Alberta, I bemoaned the fate that prevented me from searching for fossil duckbills, belonging to the family of huge herbivorous dinosaurs.

"Yet after the rain had passed and I stepped from my tent, I saw on the face of a near-by cliff, clear cut as with a knife, the complete and almost perfect skeleton of the great and terrible Tyrannosaurus rex, king of all carnivorous dinosaurs. The rain had washed earth and some stone from the face of this wall, revealing the fifty-foot lizard, the terror of the jungles of its day on earth."

LAND O' THE HEATHER

ROMANCE IS STILL ALIVE IN SCOTLAND.

Lady Kitty Vincent Writes of a Visit to Scots' Castles, Where Ancient Customs are Still Carried On—Eat Porridge Standing Up.

Can anything equal the awakening on an autumn morning in Scotland, when the loch is sparkling in the sunshine, yet never losing the hint of icy blueness which is so characteristic of the northern waters, asks Lady Kitty Vincent writing in the London Daily Mail. Against the dazzling sky stand out the mountains with their snow-wreathed tops, and here in the valley the rowans lean precariously athwart the slopes, the rowans which, in a few weeks will be scarlet with berries.

The dining-room of the old Scots' manor where I am being entertained is filled with eager men and women, and you see the tartan of a Campbell next that of an Ogilvy, a sight which would have been impossible two hundred years ago and less, for they are bitter and hereditary foes, although they joke about it now.

Gay is the Menzies tartan, and sombre that of the Stewart. The hunting tartan of the Ogilvys is dark, suited to the autumn shadows in the glen, but their ceremonial dress is bright with blues, reds, and yellows, with never a hint of green. For thus runs the ancient rhyme:

And it is no idle threat. As surely as an Ogilvy wears green, so surely will a misfortune befall him. Hundreds of years ago the Ogilvys loved this color so much that they wore it continually, but the Good People were annoyed, for it has always been their prerogative to wear green, and they laid this curse upon the whole Ogilvy clan.

There is porridge for breakfast, of course, and some of the visitors eat it standing up, with no very clear conception as to why they do so. But in the days when porridge was the staple diet it was not safe to sit down and eat your food in lazy security. It was wiser to eat it on your feet, so that you might whirl round quickly and confront an unexpected antagonist.

There was a reason for most customs in those days, and that is why a plaid was worn. It served as a wrap when you slept out on the heather, and if it was cold and you were canny you soaked it in water and wore it wringing wet, for it kept you warmer in this way than when it was dry.

Through the bright autumn day you are out with the guns, and at twilight falls you return home and eat such a tea as you would never dream of attacking at home. For who can refuse potato scones and heather honey? And in Scotland you eat your tea comfortably round the dining-room table without having to poise it on a chair or in your lap.

The panelled halls and the bare stone walls are covered with dancing shadows as the guests descend to dinner, the men as gay as the women in their vivid tartans, velvet jackets, and lace jabots. There is salmon, fresh and flaky, for dinner, ad venison. Then, as the port goes round, comes the sound of pipes, and the family piper, dressed in the clan tartan, enters the room. The host stops talking, even if he is in the middle of a sentence, and round the long table silence falls.

The ancient tunes wail through the room and the faces of long-dead ancestors peer down from their frames upon the scene. The piper circles the room, once, twice, and then he disappears, still piping, down the long corridor, but, until the last note has sobbed into silence, not a word must be spoken.

A word from the host and he returns and is given a glass of whiskey, which he swallows at one draught. Then, silent and inscrutable, he leaves the room and conversation breaks out afresh.

Night falls. The visitors are safely in their rooms and the old ghosts flit down the long passages. Every Scottish family has its phantoms, but we pay no attention to them. They are the family friends, but we do not talk about them much, for the Scot is reticent on matters which are purely personal.

At Glamis Castle Earl Beardie clad in armor, bends over the beds of the sleeping children, and at Cortachy Castle, when the head of the Ogilvy clan is about to die, the drummer beats his drum merrily. In yet another clan when the chief lies dying the foxes come from miles away and sit in rows round the house, their bright eyes gleaming.

Romance is still alive in Scotland.

Memories of Bruce.

Edinburgh's civic charter was granted by King Robert, the Bruce, and the ancient city celebrated the anniversary of the event suitably. A little later, Dunfermline commemorated the 600th anniversary of the Bruce's interment in the beautiful abbey. But the birthplace of Scotland's hero King remains a matter of conjecture. Lochmaben Castle, a few miles from the county town of Dumfries, has a strong claim to the distinction. Bruce was Lord of Annandale, and inherited through his Norman ancestor, Robert de Brus, the Castle of Lochmaben and much goodly land. It was his stronghold in times of border welfare. After he was crowned he made Lochmaben a royal burgh, some affirm because it was his birthplace.

No Ugly Women.

"There is no such thing as an ugly woman," says a famous European beauty-doctor. "Every woman has some point which can be brought out and used to hide others."

Gold In Manitoba.

Gold production in Manitoba in 1929 run around $50,000 per month.

A visitor to a harvest festival service at a country church was admiring the beautiful flowers on the altar and elsewhere.

"Yes," said the old verger, "they are very nice, I'll admit. They are given away to those who are sick after the sermon."

The teacher was vexed.

"Look here, Johnnie," she said, "this is the third time in one week you've come to school without a pencil. It's too bad."

"I'm sorry, miss," apologized Johnnie. "I keep on forgetting it."

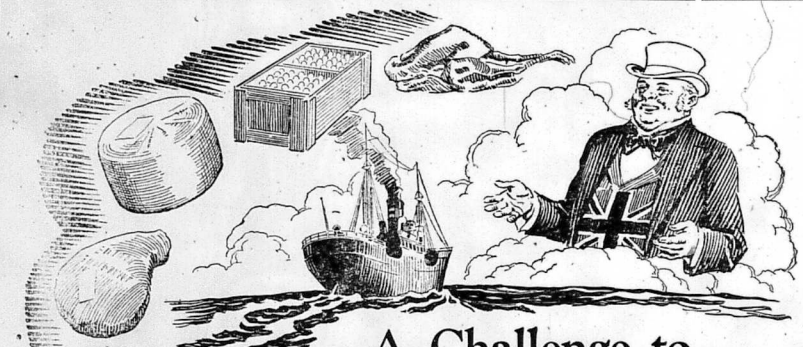
Johnnie's face brightened.

"I'd think he was an officer, miss," he replied.



A Challenge to Canadian Food Producers . . .

GREAT BRITAIN wants more Canadian foodstuffs. The plain fact is that the increase in trade in some of our food exports to the old country is not keeping pace with the growth of demand.

Britain's markets are wide open to Canada. Because of the exhibitions of Canadian products, the activity of our Trade Commissioners, and the effects of our advertising, the British consumer is more familiar with these products than ever before, and consequently more inclined to buy. Good will in Great Britain towards Canadian products never has been at a higher point than now. All the facilities of transportation for all classes of products from Canada to Great Britain have been provided.

Shall we Canadians overlook or neglect the opportunities for increased export trade which are thus laid before us?

Just because domestic markets are good, shall we as producers be so short sighted as to fail to satisfy so large a market which is more favourably inclined towards our products than ever before?

Not yet is there among our producers an adequate realization of the opportunities for increased production which present conditions in the British markets afford.

If you are a producer or dealer in foodstuffs, you can assist to your own profit in gaining a larger share of this market. Almost every community in this country stands to benefit. The result can be attained by:

1. Producing more of the kind of products the British consumer wants.
2. Keeping up a constant supply.
3. Maintaining quality standards.

Through its Commercial Intelligence Service, this Department will render valuable assistance to any exporter. Our Trade Commissioners' Offices in Britain are especially well-equipped and strategically placed to handle any export problem on behalf of Canadian exporters. Enquiries regarding British Trade receive prompt attention. Write to the Commercial Intelligence Service, Ottawa.

Salvage

The Rosebud Was Known as the Ishmaelite, and the Name Fitted Her

Copyright by the Century Company.

SHE had a large crew, abnormally large, hawse pipes and a bad reputation — the last attribute born of the first. Registered as the Rosebud, this innocent name was painted on her stern and on her sixteen dories, but she was known among the fishing fleet as the Ishmaelite, and the name fitted her. She usually left behind her such bitter memories of her visit as placed the last port at the bottom of her list of markets.

Once, too, three small schooners had come home with empty holds and complained of the appearance while anchored in the fog of a flotilla of dories manned by masked men, who overpowered and locked the hands in cabin or forecastle and then removed the cargoes of fish to their own craft, hidden in the fog. Shortly after this the Ishmaelite disposed of a large catch in Baltimore, and the piracy was believed of her, but never proved.

Her luck at finding things was remarkable. Drifting dories, spars, oars and trawl tubs sought her unsavory company as though impelled by the inanimate perversity which had sent them drifting. They were sold in port or returned to their owners when paid for. In the early part of her career she had towed a whistling buoy into Boston and claimed salvage of the government, showing her logbook to prove that she had picked it up far at sea. The salvage was paid; but, as her reputation spread, there were those who declared that she herself had sent the buoy adrift.

With her blunt jibboom she had prodded a hole in the side of a lighthouse supply boat and sailed away without answering questions. The government was taking cognizance, and her description was written on the fly leaves of several revenue cutters' logbooks, while Sunday newspapers in the large cities began a series of special articles about the mysterious schooner rigged pirate of the Atlantic fishing fleet.

Her trips had become necessarily longer, and there was but two weeks' supply of food in the larder. The New England coast was an enemy's country, but in the crowded harbor of New York was a chance to lie unobserved at anchor long enough to secure the stores she needed. So Cape Cod was doubled on the way to New York, but the brisk offshore wind developed to a gale that blew her to sea.

Hard headed, reckless fellows were these men who owned the Rosebud and run her on shares. They were eighteen in number, and they typified the maritime nations of the world. Americans predominated, of course, but English, French, German, Portuguese, Scandinavian and Russian were among them. The cook was a West India negro, and the captain, or their nearest approach to a captain, a Portland Yankee.

The captain's navigation had its limits, however, and this gale defined them. He could find his latitude by meridian observation and his longitude by morning sights and chronometer time. His dead reckoning was trustworthy, and he possessed a fair working conception of the set and force of the Atlantic currents and the heave of the sea in a blow. But his studies had not given him more than a rudimentary knowledge of meterology and the laws of storms.

As a result the vessel was finally caught in a still heavier blow without warning and dismasted. It was manifestly a judgment of a displeased Providence, and glad that the hull was still tight, they cut away the wreck and rode out the gale, now blowing out of the north, hanging to the tangle of spar and cordage which had once been the foremast and its gear. Then they rigged a jury mast.

Soon a sheet which had been showing on the horizon when the schooner lifted out of the hollows took form and identity, a two masted steamer with English colors, union down at the gaff. Her broadside drift was faster than that of the dismasted craft riding to her wreckage, and in a few hours she was dangerously near, directly ahead, rolling heavily in the trough of the sea.

"Wunner what's wrong wid her," said the cook. "Amos," he called to another, "is her engine bus' down?"

"Dunno," answered Amos. "Steam's all right. See the jet comin' out o' the stack? There, she's turnin' over—kickin' ahead. 'Bout time if she wants to clear us. She's signalin'. What's that say, Elisha?"

The ensign was fluttering down and a string of small flags going aloft to the other part of the signal halyards. Elisha, the navigator, went below and returned with a couple of books, which he consulted.

"Her number," he said. "She's the Afghan Prince o' London." The flags came down to be replaced by others.

"Rudder carried away," he read and then looked with the glasses. "Rodder seems all right. Must mean his steerin' gear. Why don't they rig up authin' or a drag over the stern?"

"Martin," said Elisha to the cook, "what's the matter with our bein' a drag for her?"

"Dead easy if we kin git his line an' he knows how to rig a bridle."

"We can show him if it comes to it. What ye say, boys? If we steer her into port we're entitled to salvage. She's helpless; we're not, for we've got a jury rig under the bows. Hello! What's he sayin' now?" Other flags had gone aloft on the steamer, which asked for the longitude. Them followed others which said that the chronometer was broken.

"Better'n ever!" exclaimed Elisha excitedly. "Can't navigate. Our chronometer's all right. We never needed it, and don't know but it's a big help in a salvage claim. What ye say? Can't we get our hemp cable to him with a dory?"

Why not? A dory was thrown over, and Elisha and Amos pulled to the steamer.

"Badly rattled," they reported on their return. "Tiller ropes parted, an' not a man aboard can put a long splice in a wire rope, an', o' course, we said we couldn't. They'll take our line, an' we're to chalk up the position an' the course to New York. Clear case o' salvage. We furnish everything an' sacrifice our jury material to aid 'em. There's anywhere from one to two hundred thousand—hull an' cargo—that we save. We'll get no less than a third, mebbe more."

They knotted four or five dory rodings together, coiled the long length of rope in the dory, unbent the end of their water laid cable from the anchor and waited until the wallowing steamer had drifted far enough to leeward to come within the steering arc of a craft with no canvas; then they cut away the wreck, crowded forward, all hands spreading coats to the breeze, and when the schooner had paid off steered her down with the wind on the quarter until almost near enough to hail the steamer, where they rounded-to.

Soon the steamer's crew had the end of the cable on board. The bridle, two heavy ropes leading from the after winch out the opposite quarter chocks to the end of the cable, was quickly rigged by the steamer's crew.

With a warning toot of the whistle she went ahead, and the long towline swept the sea tops, tautened, strained and creaked on the windlass bitts and settled down to its work, while the schooner dropping into her wake, was dragged westward at a ten knot rate.

He did so, and they held up in full view of the steamer's bridge a large blackboard showing in six inch letters the formula: "Lat. 41—20. Lon. 69—10. Mag. Co. W. half S."

A toot of the whistle thanked them, and they watched the steamer, which had been heading a little to the south of this course, painfully swing her head up to it by hanging the schooner to the starboard leg of the bridle. But she did not stop at west-half-south, and when she pointed unmistakably as high as northwest, still dragging her tow by the starboard bridle, a light broke on them.

"She's goin' on her way with us," said Elisha. "No, no; she can't. She's bound for London," he added. "Halifax, mebbe."

They waved their hats to port and shouted in chorus at the steamer. They were answered by caps flourished to starboard from the bridge and outstretched arms which pointed across the Atlantic ocean, while the course changed slowly northeast.

"The thumb course to the channel," groaned Elisha wildly. An' I'm supposed to give the longitude every noon. Why, boys, they'll claim they rescued us, an' like as not the English courts'll allow them salvage on our little tub."

"Let go the towline! Let 'em go to blazes!" they shouted angrily, and some started forward, but were stopped by the cook. His voice was a little higher pitched than usual; otherwise he was the steadiest man there.

"We'll hang right on to our bran' new cable, men," he said. "It's ours, not theirs. 'Course we kin turn her adrift ag'in an' be wuss off too. We can't find de foremast now. But dat ain't de bes' way. John," he called to the Englishman of the crew, "how many men do you' country tramp steamers carry?"

John computed mentally, then muttered: "Two mates, six ash cats (engineers and firemen), two flunkies, two quartermasters, watchman, deckands—oh, 'bout sixteen or seventeen, Marm."

"Boys, le's man de win'lass. We'll heave in on our cable, an' if we kin git close enough to climb aboard we'll reason it out wid dat English cappen, who can't fin' his way roun' alone wid out stealin' little fishy schooners."

"Right!" they yelled. "Man the windlass. We'll show the lime juice thief who's doin' this."

"Amos," said Martin to the ex-engineer, "you try an' 'member all you forget 'bout englines in case anything happens to de crew o' dat steamer, an' Elisha, you want to keep good track o' where we go, so's you kin find you' way back."

"I'll get the chronometer on deck now. I can take sights alone."

They took the cable to the windlass barrel and began to heave. It was hard work, equal to heaving an anchor against a strong head wind and ten knot tideway. While the first shift labored the rest watched the approach of a small tug towing a couple of scows, which seemed to have arisen out of the sea ahead of them. When the steamer was nearly upon her she let go her towline and ranged up alongside, while a man leaning out of the pilot house gesticulated to the steamer's bridge and finally shook his fist. Then the tug dropped back abreast of the schooner. She was a dingy little boat, the biggest and brightest of her fittings being the name board on her pilot house, which spelled in large gilt letters the appellation "J. C. Hawks."

"Say," yelled her captain from his door, "I'm blown out wi' my barges, short o' grub an' water. Can you gi' me some? That lime juice sucker ahead won't."

"Can you tow us to New York?" asked Elisha, who had brought up the chronometer and placed it on the house ready to take morning sights for his longitude if the sun should appear.

"No, not unless I sacrifice the barges an' lose my contract wi' the city. They're garbage scows, an' I haven't power enough to hook on to another. Just got coal enough to get in."

"An' what do you call this—a garbage scow?" answered Elisha ill naturedly. "We've got no grub or water to spare. We've got troubles of our own."

"Man alive, we're thirsty here! Give us a breaker o' water. Throw it overboard. I'll get it."

"No; told you we have none to spare, an' we're bein' yanked out to sea."

"Well, gi' me a bottle-ful. That won't hurt you."

wrench from the hand of the engineer, who had listened from the engine room door. It struck Elisha's chronometer and knocked it off the house, box and all, into the sea. The tug steamed back to her scows.

"That leasens our chance just so much," growled Elisha as he joined the rest. "Now we can't do all we agreed to."

"Keep dead reckonin', 'Lisha," said Martin. "Dat's good 'nough for us. An', say, can't you take sights by a watch, jess for a bluff, to show in de logbook?"

Inch by inch they gathered in their cable and coiled it down, unmoved by the protesting toots of the steamer's whistle. When half of it lay on the deck the steamer slowed down, while her crew worked at their end of the rope; then she went ahead, the schooner dropped back to nearly the original distance, and they saw a long stretch of new manila hawser leading out from the bridle and knotted to their cable. They cursed and shook their fists, but pumped manfully on the windlass and by nightfall had brought the knot over their bows by means of a "messenger" and were hearing on the new hawser.

"Walkers our case just that much more," growled Elisha. "We were to furnish the towline."

"Hence away, my boys!" said Martin. "Dey's only so many ropes aboard her, an' when we get 'em all we've got dat boat an' dem wid."

So they warped their craft across the western ocean. Knot after knot, hawser after hawser, came over the bows and cumbered the deck.

They would have passed them over the stern as fast as they came in were they not sailors with litigation ahead, for their hands must be clean when they entered their claim, and to this end Elisha chalked out the longitude daily at noon and showed it to the steamer, always receiving a thankful acknowledgment on the whistle. He secured the figures by his dead reckoning, but the carefully kept logbook also showed longitude by chronometer sights, taken when the sun shone, with his old quadrant and older watch, and corrected to bring a result plausibly near to that of the reckoning by log and compass.

The coming up to the bow of an anchor chain of six inch link told them that the end was near, that the steamer had exhausted her supply of towlines and that her presumably sane skipper would not give them his last means of anchoring, the other chain.

The steamer ceased her coyness, and her crew watched, and they knew by soundings taken that day, when the steamer had slowed down for the same purpose, that they were within the hundred fathom curve, close to the mouth of the English channel, but not within the three mile limit. Rejoicing at the latter fact, they armed themselves to a man with belaying pins from their still intact pin rails and climbed out on the cable, the whole eighteen of them, man following man, in close climbing order.

LEADERS OF NATIONS LOOK AT INDUSTRY

Viscount and Viscountess Willingdon and Vice-Regal Party Leaving Largest Automobile Manufacturing Plant of the British Empire, that of the Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited, at East Windsor, Ontario.

Duties of Modern Executives Dwarf Demands Made Upon Kings of Yore.

TIME was when rulers, gathering their intimates about them, took to the fields and woods in search of wild boar or slipped incognito into sequestered inns when they wished surcease from the duties of state or opportunity to sit vis-a-vis with their subjects.

Today, the executive obligations of the head of a nation entail an intimate knowledge of the industries that loom so prominently in the general conditions of his country.

Recent trips of this nature by the titular heads of the governments of Canada, Spain and the United States of America give rise to the conjecture as to how their respective prototypes would have reacted to the spectacles of modern mass production that met the eyes and intelligence of these modern leaders.

Any guess as to what Henry VIII., Isabella or Washington might have thought or said must result only in the conclusion that the job of knowing how to conduct a government these days is much more of a task than in the periods so often referred to as "the good old days."

Improved transportation facilities have enlarged the importance of industry in all countries in its relation to agriculture and commerce since the days when governing was more leisurely. Governing today, if it is to safeguard the interests both of laborer and manufacturer, and if it is to recognize the essential elements of prosperity and well-being for the nation's peoples must include knowledge of the industries upon which a healthy state depends.

Visits made recently by Viscount Willingdon, vice-regal head of the Canadian government; King Alfonso, ruler of Spain and President Hoover, head of the American state, to plants where Ford cars and trucks are manufactured, are indicative of the importance that leaders of nations attach to first-hand information about the index industries of their respective countries. Viscount Willingdon was accompanied by Viscountess Willingdon on his inspection trip through the largest automobile manufacturing plant in the British Empire, that of the Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited, at East Windsor, Ontario. King Alfonso evinced keen interest in the many operations in the plant of the Ford Motor Company, S.A.E., at Barcelona, and President Hoover spent much of his limited time while in Dearborn, Mich., to honor Thomas A. Edison, discussing the related subjects of production and general business prospects with Henry Ford, his host.

FASCINATING LINKS IN CANADA'S HISTORY

Letters to and from President Louis Riel, of the Northwest Territories written in March 1870 at the time of the Riel rebellion have just been obtained by Dr. A. G. Doughty at the Dominion Archives.

These documents also include interesting copies of acts passed by the first session of the first legislature of Rupert's Land, of which Louis Riel was president, one of them being an act to establish a military force. This force was to consist of 50 men to be stationed at Fort Carry and their monthly wages were set at $15 with board.

There are many interesting documents in the collection which Dr. Doughty obtained from York, England, from relatives of a British soldier who apparently during the rebellion seized the letters at the Riel home and elsewhere.

Riel's proclamation prior to the rebellion under the caption of the "List of Rights" set forth the reasons for the upheaval, which came to be known in later years as the Northwest rebellion.

A copy of this important document, also the first act passed by the Northwest Territories legislature, with letters in question, old and faded, but still legible, and written in French and English, now repose in the Dominion Archives, pasted in a book. They are considered exceedingly valuable by Dr. Doughty.

INDIAN LABOR FOR NATIONAL PARKS

There is a possibility there will be employment of Indian labor in Canada by operators of public utilities in national parks as a solution to the Indian problem.

Canada has a number of National Parks and a new one is under consideration in the Georgian Bay area. There are a number of reserves in this section and according to George La Vatta they would be the ideal workers for places such as that. He says: "The Indian will do a good day's work for a good day's pay, and would be an attraction if employed in the national parks. He is like the white man in that he will do anything for the person who treats him well."

La Vatta is a full blooded Indian and Carlisle graduate. He is anxious that Indian boys and girls be employed in various capacities in the hotels, lodges, transportation systems, and stores of the parks stating that help of this sort would help to put Indians on their feet and provide for better assimilation in the industrial and economic fabric of the country. He emphasized the fact that the whole solution of the Indian problem is in getting Indian girls and boys out into the world and making them work; that they must leave the reservation and be like anyone else.

PRINCE OF WALES MAKES FRENCH RESORTS POPULAR

"The Prince of Pleasure" is the somewhat snappy title which Richard Dent gives to his articles about the Prince of Wales in Collier's. Mr. Dent was formerly a member of the press department of Buckingham palace, and what he has to say concerns the fondness of His Royal Highness for those two French watering places, Le Touquet and Deauville. He visits them very frequently but little is said about it in the English press since the average Englishman and his wife are supposed to regard them as dens of infamy. So though nobody can stop the Prince from amusing himself there, the press can prevent news of his doings reaching his future subjects. Le Touquet is only about a couple of hours' flying from London and this makes it easy for the Prince to pay frequent visits. He is responsible, according to Mr. Dent, for making these resorts the most popular watering places in the world at the present time. Incidentally he is blamed in some quarters for not doing as much for English watering places as he had done for English mutton. The reason may be that he likes English mutton and does not like English watering places, which seem to be dreary enough and certainly lack the excitement of those on the continent.

Made by Royalty.

Bath and Brighton, the two most celebrated of English watering places, both owe their fame to English royalty which was wont to resort thither to repair the ravages of too gay a London season, and Bognor has come into the limelight because it was there that King George spent his convalescence. Biarritz was the creation of King Edward and one of his most popular works, for the Basques still bless his name. He made their little town world famous and gave it a start toward prosperity for which it remains everlastingly grateful. The Prince of Wales, according to Mr. Dent, is really a night bird, and what he likes about the French resorts is that they are gay all night and that there he can indulge to the fullest extent and without some of the restrictions which would have to govern him if he were dancing at casinos in his own country. He likes to gamble occasionally, but he bets little, much less than most men with his income.

The Censor Gags Us

But it is the roulette and the baccarat which attract most of the visitors. There are the most celebrated of the ladies of the theatre and other professional beauties. There one may see illustrious citizens relaxed, some of them accompanied by their—we had almost said "mistresses" but fortunately remembered that this word is banned by the Toronto censors, and the other handy word to describe the relationship is banned by our own sense of propriety. However, there they are, whatever they may be called, delighting in the obvious admiration of other men and in the envy of their sisters who may have less money to waste at the tables. Mr. Dent mentions an English peeress, tired of her sensible husband, who is at one of the tables with a young guardsman, whom the lady has attracted to her court. Standing near them are two Englishmen, both young, and one not notable for his pink and white complexion. Not to further mystify our readers we may say that this is the Prince of Wales. The Prince tosses out a couple of hundred franc notes and they are swept away.

Suppressed News

There is suddenly a disturbance. A woman declares that her money has been put on a wrong number instead of on the right number which has won. "You are thieves," she cries, and pointing across to the Prince she goes on, "You m'sieu', you saw my stake on 17. Tell these thieves at once." The young guards officer glances up at the slim young man and mutters, "Tell her to go to hell. She's holding up the game." Then his eyes catches the face of the man to whom he has spoken. He leaps to his feet, clicking his heels together, and bows profoundly. "I beg your pardon, Your Royal Highness. I did not recognize you at first," he says apologetically. The Prince turns away and leaves the room, all eyes following him, for many were like the embarassed officer and had not recognized. A reporter for the gossip column of a large London daily sitting nearby murmurs to his companion. "This is one of the things we are paid not to report."

The Blind Officer

A more impressive incident occurred in the baccarat room. Sitting next to the Prince of Wales, who was taking no part in the game, was the young wife of an ex-officer blinded in the war, while on the other side was her husband, and on the other side of him was a German gambler of particularly obnoxious manners. As the game progressed only two players were left in, the blind man's wife and the German. The bidding got higher and the officer conferred with his wife as to the advisability of going on. Suddenly the German burst out, "I protest," he said firmly, "this gentleman at my side is looking over my cards and telling them to the lady on the left." The spectators were thunderstruck. From the Englishman present arose angry mutterings. The Prince of Wales preserved his composure and rose slowly to his feet. "Sir," he said coldly, "I think you are laboring under a misapprehension. The gentleman on your left is blind." From the new side came a voice, "Yes, blinded in the war." The German was overcome with confusion in the midst of which he made a bold play which cost him a couple of hundred pounds. But, as we have said, it is not the gambling that attracts the Royal Highness, but the dancing. Some of the most beautiful girls in Europe are to be seen there and the custom is that one does not need to be introduced before asking for a dance. So the prince can dance to his heart's content, but he is always careful not to unduly favor one partner and give ground for envious gossip and scandal.

Chicago isn't as bad as it's painted. The police have found only two drugstores that sell machine guns.

"Why do so many black-eyed people seem hot-tempered?" queries a reader. I can't say, but I know why so many hot-tempered people seem to get black eyes.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

It was at the theatre and the young man had seen the play before. He let everybody for five seats go 'round know that, and he kept telling us what was coming, and just how funny it would be when it did come. He had a young girl with him, and he was trying to amuse her. At length he said: "Did you ever try listening to a play with your eyes shut? You've no idea how funny it seems." A middle-aged man with a red face sat just behind him. He twisted himself about in his seat and glared at the young man. "Young man," said he, "did you ever try listening to a play with your mouth shut?" The silence was painful.

"Golf, golf, golf," wailed the wife of a business man one day last week as her husband picked up his golf clubs and started out. "It's nothing but golf. I believe if you spent an evening at home I should die of the shock."

"Now it's no use talking like that, my dear," calmly replied the patient husband. "You can't bribe me."

A third-rate theatrical company was giving a performances of a pantomime in which a large number of supers were engaged. The audience was scanty, but noisily unfriendly.

One of the actors at last came down to the footlights and addressing them, said:

"You had better be careful. There are more of us than there are of you."

A man was presented with an account which he had good reason to think had already been paid. "Haven't I paid this account?" he asked of the boy who brought it to him. "I don't know, sir," was the reply. "Does your master know?" "No, sir." "Indeed, how do you know that?" "I heard him says so." "And after that he had the impudence to send you to see if I knew, eh?" "Well 2222—see, sir, it's like this. He don't know. I don't know, and you don't know. As the boss says, if you pays it again we shall all know."

BRITISH SHIPS

Gross Tonnage Owned by Great Britain and Ireland Is 20,015,000.

When the Bremen made her famous voyage and succeeded in beating all previous records for the Atlantic crossing, there were people who shook their heads and talked darkly about "the beginning of the end" for British shipping, says an article in Answers.

Then an amazing thing happened. The Cunarder Mauretania, which had held the Atlantic record for over twenty years, beat her own previous best by nearly five hours. True, she was still four hours behind the Bremen; but the latter, a brand-new boat, had crossed in ideal weather conditions, while the Mauretania had the weather against her.

In these circumstances the Mauretania's feat is one of the best advertisements that British shipbuilding could wish for. There has been no previous case of a steamer attaining her highest speed after twenty-two years of work on the high seas, and the fact that the great Cunarder has accomplished this shows how well and truly her builders did their job.

The lesson is one that will not be lost on the shipping world. Indeed, even before this feat of the Mauretania's, the tonnage of merchant ships under construction in Great Britain and Ireland was showing an upward trend. At the end of June there were 366 vessels of 100 tons and upwards under construction in British yards, the tonnage being 1,452,906. This was an increase of 37 vessels and 96,521 tons as compared with March and of 92 vessels and 251,296 tons as compared with June, 1928.

More important still, we are now building just over half of the total tonnage that is under construction in the world's shipbuilding yards. At the end of June the proportion was 51.2 per cent. for Britain and Ireland, and 48.8 per cent. for all other countries combined.

These are encouraging figures for British shipbuilders, especially in view of the fact that foreign competition has never been keener or more formidable. But there is no room for pessimism concerning an industry which is doing more business than all the rivals put together.

True, we are not yet back to our pre-war position, says this writer. In the twelve months before the war our share of the world's shipbuilding was 57.2 per cent. of the total tonnage under construction. But we are regaining lost ground, and the tonnage we are now building is considerably more than what we had on the slips twenty years ago, in 1909, when we had nothing like the present competition to face.

So far as shipping is concerned, Britain also maintains her old preeminence. The gross tonnage of steamers and motor-ships owned by Great Britain and Ireland at the end of June last was 20,046,000. The only other country which anything like approached this figure was the United States, with 11,626,000 of sea-going tonnage. The world's total tonnage was 66,408,000.

Britain's tonnage 22½ per cent. is less than five years old, as against 3¼ per cent. in the United States. We can also claim that 83¾ per cent. of our tonnage is under twenty years old, as against 71 per cent. in the case of vessels owned abroad.

We also seem to own most of the big ships. There are in the world 425 steamers and motor-ships of 10,000 tons and over, and of these we own no fewer than 257. We can also claim that we own 55.4 per cent. of the big liner tonnage of the world, counting in liners of 15,000 tons and upwards. So, even apart from the fate that the Oceanic is to be built at Belfast for the White Star Line, should meet the challenge of the Bremen and regain for us the blue riband of the Atlantic, we are holding our own, both in shipbuilding and shipping.

But when the Oceanic is completed, it should astonish the world. For much experience has been gained and lamentable failures have been made since the Mauretania was designed. And if, in those days, we could turn out a ship capable of so wonderful an effort after the lapse of twenty-two years, what can we not do to-day?

Servant of Livingstone.

Old Matthew Wellington, last link with David Livingstone, is living in poverty in Kenya. He was a missionary who in 1873 carried David Livingstone's body to the coast from the interior, a feat which earned him a host of great hardships. Rev. A. J. L. Leech, a C.M.S. missionary at Mombasa, who has just sent the latest photograph of the old man, writes: "Wellington is now 80 years of age, but he is able to read without glasses and he peruses his Bible and "Pilgrim's Progress," written in Swahili. "He is a member of the Town Congregation, and lives on the mainland about one and a half miles from Mombasa. He walks to and fro every Sunday when he comes to see us, and I leave during divine service every Sunday when he regularly goes to church at Ryere Town. It is suggested that the Government should, in recognition of his faithful service rendered to the great explorer, grant him some little pension or 'compassionate allowance'."

The Derby.

When the "Derby" was organised 149 years ago, the most visionary had no idea of the extent to which the race meet would grow. A few hundred sporting men attended the first Derby, in 1780, and it was won by Sir Charles Bunbury's horse Diomed. He present a glittering life was painfully absent, and at that time London had no telephone, gas or railway. It was frequen ly 36 hours before even the larger towns had any manner. The guard of the mail coach spread the news, and in some remote villages the winner was known until a fortnight after the race.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Clipping the cows' thighs and flanks is a big factor in the production of clean milk. The cleaner the cows are kept the less dust and dirt is likely to get into the milk when being drawn.

A good half-day may well be devoted at this time to arranging implements should be left at the front, as these will be the ones first required in the spring.

Competing For Scholarships

Members of the party of 500 junior farmers who attended the Royal Winter Fair this year as guests of the Ontario Government are competing for fifteen scholarships of $100 each offered by the T. Eaton Company, Toronto, for the best papers bearing on the trip and agricultural problems in general. Results of the contest-ants have been conducted in each county and the papers of the first winners in the various counties will be examined at Toronto for the final awards.

British Market

A housewife in England out buying a little bacon for tomorrow's breakfast or an apple or two for the children's lunch, seems a far cry from an orchard or farmyard in Ontario. Yet it is that housewife and the millions more like her in Great Britain who determine, to a large extent, the price our farmers receive for their products. In 1928 Canada exported agricultural products to the value of $815,000,000, and of this total, about $400,000,000 went to the United Kingdom. But the demand is keen and the British consumer demands certain standards of food. Canadian producers, therefore, must make every effort to satisfy this market, upon which they depend so largely.

Feeding Scratch Grains

The amount of scratch grains to feed layers varies with the different seasons. In winter when nights are long and cold, hens need more of the heat forming, energy-producing scratch grains than in summer. For the next three months about one quart of scratch to 12 hens or 14 pounds to 100 hens should be fed. This should be supplied an hour before the birds go to roost so they will have time to clean it up before dark. Do not feed any grain in the morning as the hens are apt to gorge up on it and then will wait for it to digest before eating any mash and obtaining the egg-building materials. A high grade mash should be kept before the hens all the time. The more they eat, the more eggs it ordinarily means. Grit and shell should be hopper feed and drinking water always available. Supply green feed when you can.

The Seed Market

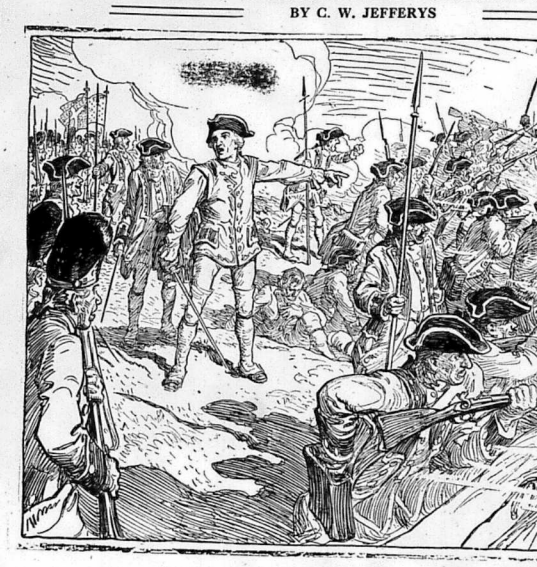
The alsike and red clover seed market continues dragging at unchanged prices and with very little moving at present from production districts. The export demand is reported unusually low and uncertain owing to a large visible supply of American and European production. Relatively low prices are being offered to growers and there is a tendency for them to hold their seed. The report from Toronto early this month was that about 25 to 40 per cent. of the 1929 crop of alsike and about 50 per cent. of the red clover was still in the growers' hands. The demand for alfalfa seed is good owing to the short crop of hardy strains this year. Prices offered Ontario growers for good quality seed range from 30c to 40c a pound. Timothy seed is also in fair demand and at slightly higher prices than last year.

Crop Report For Year

The final crop bulletin for the year, just issued, comprises an interesting and informative review of agricultural production during the past year. According to this review, fall wheat was better both in quality and quantity than anticipated. The average over the whole province was about 40 bushels to the acre. The hay crop of the province for the past years is again five per cent. rather unexpected under weather conditions. Oats this year yielded 90 per cent. of an average crop. Barley, though good in quality, was deficient in quantity. Corn on the whole was disappointing. Tobacco told the same story. Potatoes are returned as extra good in quality but only an average crop. Turnips are a short crop. Live stock generally is said to be in rather poor condition; hogs are fewer on the farms. Sheep and lambs are said to have done better, and are increasing in numbers.

Dramatic Milestones in Canada's Story

BY C. W. JEFFERYS



"The Battle of Ticonderoga"

In 1758, Canada was in a desperate state. The war with England, which was soon to end in the loss of New France, had been raging for three years. With the King, Louis XV, under the influence of Madame de Pompadour, extravagance and corruption infested the court and the offices of government. Canada suffered no less from the prevailing dishonesty. The Intendant, Bigot, was at the head of a gang which bled the colony and the King alike. The Governor, Vaudreuil, fussy, incompetent and vain, if not actually sharing in the robberies of the official bandits, winked at their offences.

In this difficult and unpromising situation the Marquis de Montcalm found himself when he arrived in 1756 to take command of the French army in Canada. He was an honest and high-minded man, intent on doing his duty as a soldier, proud, quick-tempered and vivacious, with a sound military training, and an experience of warfare combined with a keen intelligence that adapted itself rapidly to new conditions. Properly supported he might have been able to save the country, but with the small number of troops that France spared him from her European war, and hampered by the interference of Vaudreuil, who was jealous of him, and by the general corruption of the Canadian officials, he soon realized that his task was almost a forlorn hope. Lalnaque and Bougainville, who were in accord with him, and, aided by them, greater resources of Britain and her American colonies, Canada more than held her own.

But the tide was turning. The great Pitt, Lord Chatham, was at the head of the British ministry. Under his ardent leadership, vigor and intelligence animated war. Three attacks against New France were planned; a combined naval and military expedition against the great fortress of Louisburg in Cape Breton, one against the west, through the Alleghanys to Fort Duquesne, now Pittsburg, and one by way of Lakes George and Champlain, the gateway to the heart of Canada. Here at the southern end of Lake Champlain lay Fort Ticonderoga, an important post, but badly planned and poorly constructed by Bigot's dishonest engineers.

The command of the British army against Ticonderoga was given to General Abercrombie, a blundering and incompetent officer, whose political influence was strong enough to get him the position in spite of Pitt's reluctance to appoint him. Pitt, however, placed as his second in command Earl Howe, perhaps the most brilliant man then in the army, popular alike with the British regulars and the American provincial soldiers, and the real leader of the expedition.

Montcalm pushed his preparations for defense as rapidly as possible; but Vaudreuil's jealous interference delayed him and withheld the needed reinforcements, so that when Montcalm reached Ticonderoga at the end of June he found the fort held by only 3000 men, insufficiently supplied with food and ammunition, to withstand Abercrombie's army of 15000, which he learned was well on its way toward him. He sent urgent appeals to Vaudreuil to hurry forward more men and supplies. Meantime, he did his best with the means at hand. His scouting parties ranged the country between himself and the British. An entrenched camp was formed in front of the fort, which was patched up as well as possible. His activity deceived the British into belief that the French force was much stronger than it was in reality, and thereby therefore advanced cautiously, and Montcalm gained some days more for his preparations.

On the 5th of July the British force embarked on Lake George, 9000 of them were provincial troops drawn from the American colonies, the remainder were British regulars, including a regiment of kilted Highlanders, the 42nd or Black Watch. Ample stores and ammunition were carried in bateaux, a formidable number of cannon were transported in heavy flatboats. The advance of the flotilla of over a thousand boats, which covered the waters from shore to shore, under a cloudless midsummer sky, was a spectacle of such extent and magnificence as the peaceful lake had never before seen.

The army landed at noon the next day at the north end of Lake George, which is connected by a winding stream with Lake Champlain. Led by the advance party, under General Howe, the British marched for a road through the woods toward the fort, distant about eight miles from their landing place, after a sharp engagement, capturing several prisoners. But Howe was killed by the first volley. His fall was a deadly blow to the expedition. The whole army seemed to lose all confidence. Abercrombie, bewildered and uncertain, hesitated, and lost all the next day.

He had the choice of several plans of attack. He might threaten the French with part of his force, while he marched the main body through the woods to the rear of Montcalm's position, to prevent his retreat by land, and intercept reinforcements and supplies from the north. In this case, Montcalm, who had only eight days' provisions, would be forced to retreat in boats by the lake, or to fight his way through. Or the British could make some of camp, and swept their entrenchments, while the remainder bombarded the French prisoners told us that large reinforcements were hourly expected, and that defenses from the woods, until the infantry could advance. But Abercrombie's Montcalm already had 6000 men, almost double their actual number. He believed them, and, without waiting to bring up his artillery to make a careful examination of the French position, he decided to try to take it at once by charging it full force in front.

Montcalm was alert, and ready for every move. Mean-while he labored with furious energy on his defences. A breastwork of logs piled high as a man was built like a snake fence round the camp. In front of it, in the distance of a musket shot, thousands of trees were cut down and drawn together in a bristling tangle of sharpened branches. Throughout the hot summer day officers and men, stripped to their shirts, swung axes. When night fell, they slept beside their arms behind the breastworks. During the night 400 men arrived after a forced march to join the garrison, with Levis, Montcalm's second in command, a host in himself. At daybreak on the 8th, the roll of drums woke the weary men to work again until noon, when the sound of firing in the woods warned them of the approach of the British.

The day was blazing hot. Montcalm threw off his gold-laced coat and in his shirt sleeves, took a position from whence he could see nearly all the field of battle. As the British appeared at the edge of the woods beyond the fallen timbers, he gave a signal, and a single cannon shot boomed from the fort behind him. Every man threw down his tools, seized his musket, and ran to his place in the three-deep line behind the zig-zag stockade. Campaigned of grenadiers, the biggest men in their regiments, wearing high bearskin shakos, gathered in the rear, ready to rush to the defence of any threatened point.

The British, as they formed up, shoulder to shoulder, in four close columns, saw in front of them a confusion of fallen trees, on whose tangled branches the leaves hung shrivelling in the heat, and in the distance beyond, a glimpse of the breast work and the glint of sunlight on protruding gun barrels; but not a single man of the defenders. The order to advance was given, and the four columns moved forward, with muskets at the shoulder, at the steady pace of a parade review—blue-coated provincials on the flanks, buckskin-clad rangers, grenadiers with high peaked yellow hats, in one column, Highlanders, with the tangle of fallen trees broke the orderly formation as they advanced, and the men began to scramble through the obstructions in scattered groups.

Suddenly a blaze of fire and smoke burst from the stockade, and a volley of musket balls and grape-shot crashed into the close-packed British troops. The front was swept away; but those behind pressed forward over these who fell. Again and again the storm of bullets struck them, as with bull-dog courage they struggled through the entangled logs and branches. Yelling, cursing, shouting, they strove to advance, while the murderous cross-fire poured from the twisted snake-like stockade. Unable to reach their hidden foes, they fell back.

Abercrombie, a mile and a half in the rear, sent orders to charge again. Unlike Montcalm, who all day was in the thick of the fight, Abercrombie never saw the field where his men were dying with such desperate bravery. Once more, and vainly, the British struggled forward. And all through the sweltering July afternoon, charge after charge was made through the bristling obstruction, amid a tempest of musketry fire. Some few gained the breastwork, and late in the afternoon a number of Highlanders, forced their way through the entanglement, clambered over the stockade and leaped into the enclosures, where they were bayonetted by the French. Wherever the line was threatened, Montcalm or Levis was there, and the French grenadiers rushed to meet the danger. Hour after hour the useless loss of life went on, until as evening drew near, the exhausted British abandoned the attack, and sullenly retreated through the woods cursing the obstinate stupidity and incredible callousness of the general who had driven them to slaughter.

Of the British army of over 500 were killed, while the wounded and missing brought their total loss to about 2000.

Nearly 400 in killed and wounded, notwithstanding the cover under which they fought, was indication of the desperate persistence of the British attack.

When Abercrombie realized the magnitude of his defeat he gave orders to retreat, and abandoned any further attempt against Montcalm, though his army still greatly outnumbered the French. In contempt, his humiliated soldiers dubbed him "Mrs. Nabbycrombie," Nabby being a nickname for Abigail, then a female name common in New England. Pitt soon recalled him, and he retired with the disgrace of having caused the most disastrous defeat of the British arms in North America.

Montcalm passed along the lines of weary, smoke-begrimed men, and thanked them for their steadiness, and distributed food, wine and beer. Next day, with pious gratitude, he set up a large cross, on which he inscribed in Latin and another in French, composed by himself, attributing to God the amazing victory that saved Canada to France for another year.

In the picture, the battle is supposed to be viewed from inside the French stockade. Montcalm is shown wearing a long-skirted scarlet coat, although steel body-armor in battle. The cuirass, which he is said to have worn at the Battle of the Plains at Quebec the next year is in the possession of his descendants at the family chateau in France, and shows the marks of bullets. Officers, Captains, lieutenants, ensigns, and sergeants, carried espontons, or halberds, short spears, as shown in the drawing, as well as swords. Most of the French regiments were white coats trimmed with blue or red, a few were blue, faced with white. Their wide long skirts were buttoned back from their legs, in the style of the French poilus during the great war. Their white gaiters reaching to the thighs, fastened with beautiful shakos, all were low-crowned three-cornered hats trimmed with white braid.

There is a Zipper Boot for every overshoe use . . . and every style smartness

It was the French who taught us the vital importance of little things in style . . . that in any conception of outer ensemble there should be no jarring note, no false or incongruous detail.

Overshoes are, or should be, truly "little things" yet it was not until Goodrich created the Zipper Boot that the overshoe became a voguish, alluring, yet unobstrusive detail of dress.

Milady will save herself many disappointments if she remembers that in overshoes only Zippers are authentic and only Goodrich makes them.

HOW CALIFORNIA DEALS WITH COMMUNISTS

Those who believe that Toronto showed intolerance in its dealings with communists may be interested to learn how the red-blooded he-men of California treat them. Ten years ago the state passed a law making it a criminal offence to display the red flag. The idea was that those who flaunted this symbol of communism would, if they had their way, sovietize the United States, abolish religion and nationalize women. Whether in the past decade the flag has been displayed we do not know, but we presume that if it has been the authorities have been unaware of it. Indeed there is evidence that in one place in the Yucaipa valley, not far from San Bernardino, the red flag has been flying for three years, but since it flew in a little summer camp organized by communists and not open to the general public, the police did not know of it until last summer. Then they invaded it, arrested the persons responsible for the violation of the law and have now succeeded in having them sentenced to serve terms of imprisonment. One of the malefactors, the only man apprehended, committed suicide the day before he was to appear for sentence. From what we have heard of California prisons he probably showed good judgment.

Training Young Communists

This camp was operated by the Young Workers' league, which is a communist body, and its purpose was to give children of communists a chance to enjoy the blessings of outdoor life for a few weeks each year. Those whose parents could afford to pay for them were charged $6 a week. Others were admitted free. Here the children swam and raced and slept in the open air, much to the benefit of their health. But the communists did not let slip the opportunity to inculcate some of the principles, and every morning a red flag was run up and one of the teachers taught the children to recite, "I pledge allegiance to the workers' red flag and to the cause for which it stands. One aim throughout our lives—freedom for the working class." Some 40 children had been engaged in this pernicious exercise last summer when the police arrived and arrested Yetta Stromberg, Emma Schneiderman, Esther Karpiloff, Jennie Wolfson, Bella Mintz, Sarah Cutler, Sarah Berkowitz and Isadore Berkowitz. These are all characteristically communist names with the exception of Sarah Cutler, and we are able to report that she was found to have been a casual visitor and acquitted.

United States Imperilled

The charge against Sarah Berokwitz was also dismissed for lack of evidence. The others were defended by the Civil Liberties union. The prosecuting attorney told the jury that if the accused persons were not convicted and given the full penalty of the law, in ten years the red flag of anarchy would be flying over the land. He was permitted according to a story in the New Republic, to read into the record extracts from disloyal communist literature found in the possession of Yetta Stromberg. He was also permitted to dilate upon his own war record, but the defence was not permitted to prove the fact that Isadore Berkowitz, aged 34, had been seriously gassed and shell-shocked in the war. Miss Stromberg, who was the ringleader of the group, is a girl of 21, formerly a student at the University of California and now a dressmaker. She admitted that she had taught the children to recite the invocation to the red flag, but she denied that is was a symbol of opposition to organized government. Personally, she believed in the organized government—the organized government of all producers for the common good.

Fate of a Sympathizer

The state was unable to prove that the accused persons had read the communist literature in the camp library. Three of the women said that they were not communists but had gone to the camp to work so that their children might have the holiday trea. The jury found five of the prisoners guilty of a conspiracy to fly the red flag, while Comrade Yetta was convicted, in addition, of having actually flown it. Between the filing of the verdict and the sentencing of the felons, Mrs. Kate Crane-Gartz, a wealthy woman and sympathizer with the young communists, wrote a letter to Judge Allison asking whether he couldn't tell, as he listened to Miss Stromberg, "that she was a young woman of high principles and ideals, and not a criminal fit only for crucifixion." The writer of the letter, it must be presumed, did not realize the enormity of her offence in addressing a judge upon a matter that was still before him. She had taken it for granted that with the rendering of the verdict the case had ceased to be sub judice. But the judge hailed her before him and fined her $75 for contempt of court.

The Law Cheated

The day before the prisoners were to be sentenced Berkowitz, the world war victim and the only man accused, sought a way out of his difficulties by taking his own life. The Los Angeles Times said, "He cheated the law by hanging himself," but Berowitz never had much respect for the law anyway and perhaps little better was to have been expected of him. But the women were not permitted to do any cheating. They were all sentenced to serve from six months to five years each in St. Quentin. Three of them are mothers. Three are not communists but Judge Allison refused them probation. The case will be taken before the district court of appeals by the Civil Liberties union. But whatever may be its fate it seems likely that it marks the beginning of a crusade on the part of the most patriotic elements of the community to extirpate radicals. They have always been particularly disliked in California where, it may be recalled, Mooney and Billings still languish in prison and where ordinary civil rights have been denied to many people because of their political heresies.

"Who has been monkeying with my private notepaper?" shrieked the infuriated official as he searched his desk.

"I saw Mr. Jimson writing a letter,"

"And who's Mr. Jimson?"

"He's the man that cleans the winders," replied the boy.

"Jimmy," he said, "we call men by their names in this office. No mistering in this place, and don't you forget it."

"Gent to see you, George," he said.

PROTECTION OF TREES

Every year many fruit trees in Canada are girdled by mice and rabbits. Fortunately, the rabbits do not injure the trees so regularly as the mice nor are as general in their injurious work and it is very difficult to prevent their ravages. In the case of mice, however, if some precaution is taken, it is possible to prevent serious injury.

Two methods are adopted at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, one is to wrap the trunks of the trees with building paper, and the other is to encircle the trunk with a wire protector with a small mesh to prevent a mouse going through. In either case, the paper or protector must be put close to the ground beneath the snow, and, if there is a place under the protector where they can get in, they will girdle the trunk and possibly ruin the tree.

These protectors should be put on as soon as possible now as sometimes the mice begin gnawing the trunks of young trees before winter. Trees up to six inches in diameter should be protected where mice are troublesome. Another plan, when one has neglected to put on protectors before winter, is to tramp down the snow about the tree after the first snowfall, thus preventing the mice from working under the snow near the tree. Another plan, where snow does not come early, is to put cow dung about the tree. This freezes to the ground and prevents the mice getting at the trunk of the tree. Care should be taken not to have the manure against the trunk of the tree, and it should be spread as soon as it thaws in the spring. If a mouse girdles the trunk of a tree, that is, eats all around it, it will die unless bridge-grafting is done early in the spring, and this is usually neglected so that, as a rule, girdled trees die. This is most discouraging, and many farmers have, without doubt, lost their enthusiasm for growing apple trees by having the trees girdled just about the time they should begin to bear. It is important, therefore, to protect the trees in good time. Poisoned grain is sometimes put under inverted troughs in the orchard to kill the mice.

Pruning trees during the early part of the winter and leaving the prunings along the fences will furnish food for the rabbits and may assist in keeping them off.

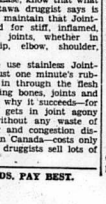
JOINT-EASE

SAYS DRUGGIST



"Joint-Ease" is selling like hot cakes in my store, because it is a wonderful and speedy remedy for all joinch troubles.

"Some say that it knocks out lumbago over night — others that for chest colds and sore throat it has no equal, while many insist that there is nothing they ever tried that is so efficient for neuralgia, neuritis and even head colds and vile nasal catarrh."

Answering the above letter, we, the makers of Joint-Ease, know that what this thriving Ottawa druggist says is true, but we still maintain that Joint-Ease is prepared for stiff, inflamed, painful, swollen joints, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, fingers or spine.

You'll like to use stainless Joint-Ease, for with just one minute's rubbing, it soaks in through the flesh direct to the ailing bones, joints and ligaments—that's why it succeeds—for when Joint-Ease gets in joint agony gets out—and without any waste of time all swelling and congestion disappears. Made in Canada—costs only 60c a tube. All druggists sell lots of it.

OBITUARY

Mrs. P. C. Bennett

The late Mrs. P. C. Bennett passed away very peacefully at her home, in Roblin, December 16th, after a lingering illness. The immediate cause of death was pneumonia.

Mrs. Bennett was the daughter of the late Wm. H. Barkley and Abbie Ann Mills, and was born at Williamsburg, Dundas Co., later moving to South Mountain, where she received her elementary education, later attending the Iroquois High School. She went to the mission fields of Africa as a missionary and teacher for a girl's school, and also had considerable experience as a deaconess in the city of Belfast, Ireland, previous to her sailing for Egypt.

Failing health compelled her to return to her native land, where she has since always been actively engaged in Christian service of various kinds. She made for herself a very large circle of friends and was highly esteemed by all.

In March, 1920, she was united in marriage to her now sorrowing and bereft husband, Rev. P. C. Bennett, and always and ably filled the part of a minister's wife as long as physically possible.

The funeral was conducted by the Rev. T. H. Bradley, assisted by the Rev. J. W. Campbell, M.C., Pritchard, A. Moffat, L. Tomlinson and A. E. Oliver sang very effectively, "The Old Rugged Cross," and "There is a Land Which we Call Heaven." The text used on the occasion is found in Rev. 22: 3, 4 and 5.

The large congregation in attendance, testified to the respect and esteem in which the departed was held. The remains were conveyed to the vault at Sydenham until spring when interment will take place at South Mountain. With the husband, there are left to mourn their loss three sisters and four brothers.

James Fleming

A sad death occurred at his residence, Parrott's Bay, on Saturday, December 7th, in the person of James Fleming an aged and highly esteemed gentleman, aged 99 years and 4 months.

He was very active until a few days before his death. His funeral was held at his late residence on Monday, being largely attended by his neighbors and friends and conducted by his pastor, the Rev. S. F. Dixon, thence to Cataraqui cemetery and laid to rest beside his wife, who predeceased him twelve years ago.

He was born on Amherst Island in the year 1830, moving to the mainland when a boy of eighteen, settling with his parents, three brothers and one sister on a farm, four miles east of Bath on the Lake Shore, where he resided until his marriage in 1866 to Mary Smith, a daughter of the late Thomas and Julia Smith. When he bought a farm adjoining his father and lived there until his death.

He leaves to mourn his loss one daughter, Mrs. Robert Prink, one granddaughter, Mrs. Sidney Little and one great grandson, "little Douglas," also a number of nieces and nephews. He was a life-long Christian, a member of Beulah United Church. He acted as trustee of same church ever since its erection in 1873, and was secretary and treasurer until a few years ago. And will be missed by his friends and acquaintances.

FREE SHOTS ON Local Sport

There is some talk around of having a town basketball league this year.

* * * * *

It has never been tried before but I think that it would be a mighty fine thing.

* * * * *

At present there are four teams practising, the Collegiate, Gibbard's and two from night school. Perhaps B. Cp. could gather a quintet and then there should be enough players who are not eligible for any of the above mentioned squads to form a team.

* * * * *

A lot of people don't know it, but basketball is the second fastest game in the world, second only to hockey. It is the fastest indoor game.

* * * * *

It is the most scientific game there is and requires better condition than any other sport.

* * * * *

A player has to be able to go at top speed for twenty minutes and after a ten minute rest, play another twenty.

* * * * *

Then there is the money side of it. You can outfit a whole basketball team with the same amount that it takes to equip the net-minder in hockey. That isn't to be sniffed at.

* * * *

The cage game is becoming more and more popular all the time and it won't be long until it enjoys the popularity here that it does in the States.

SUFFERED FROM BADLY LACERATED HAND

Mr. F. J. Temple, Bridge Street, Belleville, is today suffering from a broken finger and a badly lacerated hand as the result of an accident which occurred three miles this side of Odessa Wednesday at twelve o'clock noon, as he was driving to Cornwall.

The icy condition of the road caused Mr. Temple's car to skid badly in the centre of the road and before he could regain control of it it completely overturned. Mr. Temple was badly shaken up and suffered from shock. Dr. Mabee, of Odessa, drove to the scene of the accident and attended to Mr. Temple's injuries. Fifteen stitches were required to close the cut on his left hand. With the assistance of a nearby farmer the car was righted and a driver was engaged to take Mr. Temple and the car back to Belleville.

CAMDEN VIII. W. M. S.

The December meeting of Camden VIII. United W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Almore Hyland on the afternoon of December 5th, for the receiving of reports for 1929 and the election of officers for 1930.

The suggested program for a Christmas meeting was followed throughout, the president, Mrs. B. Close being in charge of the meeting.

The study period, "Overseas News," was conducted by Mrs. Thomas Wilson, using a map of the world to point out our mission fields and endevored to recall our acquaintance with a missionary from each field. We had Mrs. Forbes, who is so closely associated with Trinidad, Miss O'Rourke, Japan; Miss Virgo, China, who along with Mrs. Drew, a native bible woman, will always be remembered; Miss Campbell, of Africa, and others.

The minutes of November meeting were read and confirmed.

The receiving of reports was next item of business. The president expressed her appreciation of the help given her throughout the year by each member of the society especially Mrs. R. J. Wilson, president, who had charge of the meetings during the summer. Mrs. Hyland reported a club of six subscribers to Missionary Monthly. Mrs. Thos. Wilson reported 11 meetings held, 10 paid members, average attendance for the year 6, the lowest since we organized.

The Treasurer, Mrs. Doupe, reported the business for the year not completed, but was able to report our allocation reached and perhaps a little balance on hand. Supply secretary reported a bale of clothing valued at $19.00 sent forward.

It was moved by Mrs. Thomas Wilson seconded by Mrs. Almore Hyland that all the officers be re-elected for 1930, unanimously:—

KILLED HIS MOTHER TO END SUFFERINGS

Not for a long time has the killing of a single person excited so much interest in both France and England as the crime of Richard Corbett, who shot his mother because she was dying of cancer. He was charged with murder, but the jury refused to find him guilty, and now the question is whether this will not establish an extremely dangerous precedent. That undoubtedly was in the mind of the prosecutor. He said that he did not demand the maximum penalty but merely five years' imprisonment and added that already the prisoner had been judged more harshely in England than in France. "Dare you proclaim to the world," he asked the purymen, "that men have the right to kill? You would not so degrade French justice." Apparently the jury came to the conclusion that while the right to kill might be questionable and that if everybody felt empowered to do what Corbett had done, grave abuses might occur, what Corbett did was right in the circumstances. The prisoner was greatly moved by the speech of the counsel for the defence who asserted that in killing his mother he had given proof of supreme courage.

Jury Was Divided

His mother was more or less under the influence of morphine all the time, since her pain from a cancer was almost unendurable, and medical men had hinted that Corbett might take a chance and give her an overdose. His lawyer said that this would have been only a form of slow poisoning, and that the bullet was really more merciful. As a matter of fact, before Corbett slew her he had given her a large dose of morphine so that she died unconscious of the extraordinary act of her son. After the jury retired for a short time a message was sent to the judge asking that if it was found that Corbett had actually killed his mother, would he promise to impose no penalty. He replied that he had not this power. Then it was announced that the jury stood six against six on the main question as to whether the prisoner had killed his mother. Under French law this amounts to acquittal since it requires a majority to convict. There was a great outburst of cheering when the verdict was announced, and it seems plain that Corbett had general sympathy in France. How he would have fared in England is a question which probably Mr. Corbett is lucky not to have answered.

Another Tragic Shropshire Lad

It seems likely enough that a verdict of guilty while insane might have been returned. In any event, Corbett is a highly emotional person and it was proved that he was driven almost out of his mind by the sufferings of his mother to whom he was devoted. His previous history indicated mental instability. He is a descendant of an old Shropshire family. Indeed, he traces his descendent to Roger Corbeau, who founded the shire in the time of William the Conqueror. His grandfather was Capt. R. J. Corbett, who settled in Hyeres, France, and made many friends, being appointed vice-consul. He established an English bank and an English library. His son fell in love with a French maid who married in the father's home but the parental objections to the marriage were strong and vehemently expressed. Finally, the lovers were secretly married in London. But the Corbetts did not forgive the daughter-in-law. If they did forgive the son, and he and his wife had to return to France, where their child, Richard, was born. In 1912 the father died and then began a struggle for the boy between his English grandmother and his French mother.

Attempted Kidnapping

It involved an attempt to kidnap him and get him back to England. This failed but he did fall into the hands of his father's people and for some time was educated at their expense in Switzerland. He seems to have had considerable affection for his grandmother despite the fact that she disliked his mother and refused to accept her. He was legally a Frenchman and was conscripted for the Moroccan campaign, having been too young to serve in the great war. All this time her dread malady was developing and the young man knew that she suffered and that recovery was impossible. In this period of excitement and anguish it is said that he formed the habit of reading occult literature until his highly nervous system became weakened and mental stability was lost. On a visit to his grandmother he learned of a turn for the worse in his mother's illness and hastened at once to her side.

Tried to Commit Suicide

There he was told by the physicians that it was impossible she could recover. Then last May her sufferings, according to his story, which was confirmed by medical experts, became excruciating. He said that she had never asked him in so many words to kill her but had frequently moaned: "I want to die." "I am too much." After killing his mother, Corbett made an attempt upon his own life, which indicated that he was out of his mind. He lay a long time between life and death but when he recovered he asserted that what he had done was right and sought to justify his course. His attempted suicide, he said, was not an effort to escape the consequences of his act but merely caused by his overwhelming grief over his mother's death. He said at his trial that he believed he had done wrong, although in his appeal to the jury he said "Science did all that I could to deliver my mother from her agony. But science failed. All that was left for her was to endure a respite from agony. I wanted to spare her from suffering. I delivered her myself."

At an election the candidate saw two small children with mother standing in the background, anxious to do the right thing in speaking to the children and struck by the similarity of their appearance he asked if they were twins.

"No, sir," the children answered. Oh! not twins. Well, how old are you, Irene?" "Five." "And how old are you, Mary?" "Five." "Dear me, both five and not twins; how do you manage that?" Please, sir, we are all that's left or triplets," was the answer.

"Do you think your father would say anything if I told him we were going to be married?" "I don't know, but I fancy he'd say something if you told him we weren't."
